

Skyjacker Cooper may be in clear — if alive

EDITOR'S NOTE—There's almost no chance that D.B. Cooper, who parachuted from an airliner with $200,000 strapped to his body, is still alive. But if he is, the statute of limitations for his skyjack runs out Thanksgiving eve.

By JOE FRAZIER

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A miserably wet, windy Thanksgiving eve in 1971.

Passengers waited at the Northwest Orient Airlines counter at Portland International Airport to book on Flight 105 to Seattle.

Many thought ahead to family reunions, turkey dinners. But one, for sure, didn't.

D.B. Cooper paid cash for his ticket. Then, clutching a paper sack, he boarded the Boeing 727 for the 30-minute flight.

A few minutes after the plane nosed into the storm, he made his move. He showed the stewardess what he said was a dynamite bomb and demanded four parachutes, $200,000 in $20 bills and "no funny stuff."

All the passengers but Cooper got off at Seattle, unaware that anything was amiss.

The money and parachutes were put on board and the jet, with only the crew and Cooper aboard, headed for Reno on Cooper's orders.

Somewhere over southwest Washington, Cooper, with the 21 pounds of money strapped to him, bailed out.

He hasn't been heard from since.

IF HE'S alive, and that's a big "if," the five-year statute of limitations runs out this Thanksgiving eve, Nov. 24.

Or does it?

"We're going ahead on the assumption that the statute doesn't apply, because when he did what he did, capital punishment was a possibility. There's no statute on capital crimes," says FBI agent Ralph Himmelsbach.

Himmelsbach, who has worked on the case from the start, concedes that recent court decisions have muddled the question of whether capital punishment would, in fact, have been applicable.

"We're continuing to process suspects," he said. "Of course, it has slowed down a great deal."

He says chances are good that Cooper is dead.

"Not one of the 10,000 bills has shown up, and we know the serial number of every one of them," he said. And Cooper apparently knew nothing about skydiving.

shoes, he jumped from the rear door of a jet going 197 miles per hour at 10,000 feet. At that elevation it was 7 below zero that night, with a wind-chill factor of 69 below.

"On top of that, he probably lost his shoes (from wind shock) as he jumped," Himmelsbach said.

The plane was in clouds. "Up looked like down to him. He had no visual reference. He couldn't have possibly known where he was."

Himmelsbach wonders if he cared.

"In another 30 minutes he could have been over the Willamette Valley, and almost any place he jumped would have been safe to

Southland food strike looms

Associated Press

Southern California and Las Vegas supermarket chains were bracing for a threatened strike Monday morning as last-minute talks continued to avert a walkout.

"The markets are all getting ready for a strike Monday morning," said Food Employers Council spokesman Bob Voigt. "The union is still threatening and we're still far apart."

Voigt said butchers met with management representatives Saturday, and both sides were "still talking, still arguing" late into the night. He said meatcutters and Teamsters would meet today to vote on the latest management offers.

"The chances of a strike right now are about 50-50," said Voigt.

The vote will be completed Sunday night and will require a two-thirds majority to reject the latest pay offer.

But if a strike does come, Voigt vows the stores will stay open.

"We will keep the stores open," he said. "Of course, there will be some blank spaces on the shelves."

Voigt said arrangements have been made to get deliveries from independent trucking companies and suppliers, adding supervisors will be working, too.

"All the companies are prepared differently," he noted. "Some chains will be prepared better than others." He said supermarket chains in Southern California and Las Vegas would be affected and independent stores would be marginally affected.

Voigt said the 1973 supermarket strike involving butchers and Teamsters lasted five weeks and caused widespread food shortages. He admitted there would be some problems again this time.

"We can't replace 20,000 people," he said.

A key issue in the dispute is management's offer to give some 1,600 office workers a pay raise of 75 cents an hour over three years, while offering $1.65 an hour in raises to 8,000 truck drivers and warehouse workers.

Union leaders claim the offers are aimed to divide workers, but management argues they are needed because office workers' wages are out of line with those in other industries.

First flight in former Air Force 1

Carter tries president's wings

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Carter stepped aboard a blue-and-silver presidential aircraft for the first time Saturday and acted like a kid with a new toy.

"This is the one I've been looking for," the president-elect said as he took a long look at the first solid proof of his victory over President Ford in Tuesday's election.

Carter carried his garment bag and a pair of rugged hiking boots up the front ramp and passed the seal of the president of the United States. Then the plane took him to a vacation at secluded Musgrove Plantation among the pines, palms and Spanish moss of this southern Georgia coastal island.

"I thought Peanut 1 had been fixed up nicely until I saw this,"

said Carter, who chartered his own smaller jet during the campaign.

The president-elect inspected the plane from cockpit to tail, shaking hands with the Air Force crew and stewards.

At one point he walked to the rear and looked over a collection of photographs of Ford and his family and asked if a photo of the White House was really the White House.

"That's what I've been looking for," the successful Democratic candidate repeated.

"Do you feel presidential?" he was asked.

"I will when I get off," he replied and then smiled.

"I'm surprised how beautiful it is, how fancy it is," Carter said as reporters trooped in to inspect his airborne quarters.

The plane served former Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon as Air Force 1 until 1974, when it was replaced by a newer craft that Ford still uses. Carter called his new jet "very impressive, very beautiful, very historic."

"I felt like going back and getting my three-piece black suit when I saw this airplane," Carter said. He was dressed casually in sports slacks, shirt and beige cardigan sweater.

"I feel impressed with it but at ease with it," he said as he munched a sweet roll and sipped coffee and orange juice served by a steward wearing a blue blazer with the presidential seal on the pocket.

Carter was trailed through the plane by his son Chip's small black, part-terrier dog, J.B., which darted

To unnerstan' Jimmy, jes' tawk lak this

The Detroit Free Press, a Knight-Ridder paper, is privileged among northern metropolitan newspapers to have two staff members who can speak and understand Cracker. They are Billy Bowles, born in Chattahoochee, Ga., and Remer Tyson, born in Bulloch County, Ga. ("there wun't no town").

Drawing on their lifelong exposure, they offer this guide to that rich and exotic speech, which should help you to understand the new Carter administration.

By REMER TYSON and BILLY BOWLES

When Jimmy Earl gets to the White House, the bluebellies north of the Mason-Dixon Line are going to need a Cracker Dictionary to understand what he's talking about.

The dictionary also will be important to leaders around the world.

English may be the international language, but for the next four years diplomats had better know how to speak Cracker, or have an interpreter who understands the idiom of South Georgia.

For example, when the Carter folks talk about hog-killing weather, they mean it's cold enough to butcher a shoat without worrying about the meat spoiling.

If Jody Powell orders an Ar-Cee Cola and a moon pie, he will be sending for a soda pop bottled by Royal Crown Cola Bottling Co., headquartered in Columbus, Ga., and a chocolate-covered wafer and marshmallow sandwich.

Washington grocery stores will be getting orders for "ash potatoes" — the Deep South name for Irish potatoes.

In no particular order, here are selections from a Cracker Dictionary:

Cracker — Your new President. The term derives from the cracking of long whips by mule-driving teamsters hauling turpentine resin outside of Valdosta, Ga.

Tawk — To speak Cracker.

Mash — To press, as in, "Mash down the brakes, P.W.," or as a Southern gentleman was overheard to say on an Atlanta elevator, "Lady, can I mash your button?" Also, to crush, as in, "Mash that bug, buddy-roe."

Bidness — A company or corporate body, such as General Motors in Dee-Troit City; also, concern, as in, "It ain't none of yore bidness."

Pony-ack — A car put out by the same bidness that manufactures the Shivuh-lay.

Co-Coler — The world's best selling soda pop bottled by a big bidness started by Asa Candler in Atlanta.

Dope — A Co-Coler; also called a bottle dope.

Place — A farm: "He was raised on the Doc Hagan place."

Pender — The nut that Jimmy Earl grows on his place at Plains; also known as goober or peanut; a South Georgia farmer wishing to inspect his peanut patch is likely to say, "Let's go look at the penders."

Hep — To assist, as in "Hep me through the night"; also hired hands, as in "How much do you pay your hep?"

Chunk — To Throw: "Chunk it to me, Joe Willie."

Litter-tour — Stuff written by Billy Shakespeare.

Lie-berry — Where you find stuff written by Billy Shakespeare.

Tarred — what you are after plowing all day.

Far — what burns in a farplace.

Fixin' — Preparing, as in, "Gimmie time, I'm fixin' to go it."

Cheer — Something you sit on, as in "Pull up a cheer and set down."

Hunker — To squat on your haunches, as Lyndon Johnson said, "Sometimes you have to hunker down and take it like a jackass in a hail storm."

Bait — An excessive quantity, as in, "Mama cooked a mess of collards and fed the younguns a bait of it," or "Quit messing with me, now, Billy Bob, I've had a bait of it."

Ill-noise — Where Chicago is.

Carry — To tote something or escort on foot or in a car ("Kin I carry you to the pitcher show?")

Grits — A tasteless, odorless dish made from ground corn that tastes like whatever you are eating it with.

Coat — What a judge presides over upstairs in the coat-house.

Tol'able — State of personal being that you're doing so-so: "How you feeling?" "Jes' tol'able."

Chillun — offspring, same as young'uns.

Y'all — contraction of you all, can be singular or plural: "Y'all come."

Hillbilly — A term that "Crackers use literally; someone who looks like Snuffy Smith and lives in the foothills of the Blue Ridges, north of Atlanta and south of Chattanooga; an insult to a south Georgia flatlander like Jimmy Carter.

Unduh — Beneath, as in, "Unduh the spreading chestnut tree..."

Sody — Fertilizer made of nitrate of soda; also used as in "sody cracker," like a Saltine.

Hit — The pronoun "it"; used in starting a sentence, as in, "Hit's shore good to see you."

Arn — What miners dig out of the ground; also used in, "You jack up the car, Junior, and I'll get the tar arn."; also to press clothes, as in "I'd rather take a whippin' than to arn."

Idden — Same as "isn't" and rhymes with didden, which is the same as "didn't."

Piller — What you put your head on at night.

Young cyclist winds up journey around the world

GLOBE-GIRDLING cyclist Robert Morris, 22, shakes hands with hometown fans in Randolph Township, N.J., after completing 27-month trip around the world by bicycle. He was honored at halftime of a high school football game Saturday afternoon.

—AP Wirephoto

Combined News Services
Twenty-seven months and 32,000 miles after he began, Robert Morris pedaled once around the Randolph High School football field Saturday to end his solo round-the-world bicycle odyssey. The band played, the football game crowd cheered and Morris, 22, was presented a key to the city of Randolph Township, N.J., at halftime.

Morris said he made the trip to "see the world, see the people and to see how they live." He traveled through 30 countries in Europe, Africa, Asia and Australia. He went on to Hawaii and California and finally traversed late-autumn America in a meandering journey through 31 states. Wearing a blue cap and blue sweatshirt, Morris dismounted from his bike. "I'm glad to be here," he said. "The worst part was waiting all day to get here." He had spent Friday night in Hackettstown, only 22 miles away.

His mother, Julia, and his sister, Cathy, hugged and kissed Morris as his father, Robert, slapped him on the back.

When asked what he will do now, the younger Morris replied: "Maybe I'll do some bike racing. Other than that, I don't know; just go to work, get a job."

To get in shape, Morris bicycled to and from the New Jersey shore, between 80 and 100 miles round trip, before embarking on his solo journey, during which he averaged about 140 miles a day.

At a recent stopover in Harrisburg, Pa., Morris said he was disappointed by the lack of hospitality he received in the United States.

"It was a lot different from traveling across Europe or through some other countries," he said. "I really thought people in the U.S. would be friendlier than they were. But they're not as receptive, at first glance, to someone different. You can be riding along and people will just play with you. They have no respect for you."

Morris began pedaling across the continental United States after arriving in California in late August. A few days later, he received a shock while bicycling through Idaho.

He said, "I was minding my own business on the road when these guys drove up alongside in a pickup truck, put the barrel of a shotgun out the window and pulled the trigger."

The gun, however, was unloaded, leaving Morris more stunned than injured.

But there was good news, too. "I never knew there could be so many good-looking girls in Montana," he said.

'Mame' author

Patrick Dennis, whose rollicking tale about a madcap "Auntie Mame" was a runaway best-selling novel, died of cancer at his home in New York City Saturday. He was 55.

Amin takes credit

Ugandan President Idi Amin says he was responsible for Jimmy Carter's election as president. Amin said his endorsement of the Carter candidacy had insured Carter's victory by winning him the votes of "blacks and white revolutionaries," Uganda radio reported Saturday.

The radio quoted the outspoken African leader as saying he was prepared to offer Carter a "wide range of advice" on topics ranging from Africa to the Middle East.

Chess pairings

The International Chess Federation (FIDE) announced pairings Saturday for the first round of next year's tournament to pick a challenger for world champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union. Soviet defector Viktor Korchnoi was selected to play former world champion Tigran Petrosian of the Soviet Union while American Bobby Fischer was matched against Vlastislav Hort of Czechoslovakia. But FIDE is not sure either of those games will be played. The Soviets have demanded that Korchnoi, who defected to Holland in April, be banned from the tournament, and Fischer has been engaged in a dispute with FIDE over the rules of championship tournaments.

Simon unhappy

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon says the flap about his bid to bring a submachine gun back to New Jersey with him is "the grossest invasion of privacy" and "dangerous." Simon, 49, was fuming about the widespread publicity given to his problems in obtaining a permit from a Morris County, N.J., judge to add the .45-caliber Thompson submachine gun to the collection at his Harding Township, N.J., estate.

He said the 55-year-old gun, which still works, is a collector's item and added: "I've been collecting 20 years. I buy unusual guns. The Tommy gun is an unusual gun."

Dick Cavett

Television personality Dick Cavett has returned to New York City's Museum of the American Indian four artifacts that the New York State attorney general's office charged he had obtained from the museum unlawfully.

According to a state investigation, Cavett bought several pieces of pre-Columbian artifacts from private dealers and gave them to the museum, in return for which the museum gave him objects it possessed. Authorities said the arrangement was illegal because Cavett took an income-tax deduction on the pieces he donated, but paid no tax on the pieces he received in return as "gifts."

Mystery disease tied to chemicals

Combined News Services

PITTSBURGH — Federal health inspectors have concluded that the unknown illness that struck workers at an Armstrong County electronics plant was caused by chemicals and a poor ventilation system. About 130 workers at the Essex International Inc. plant in nearby Kittanning complained of nausea, headaches and shortness of breath several times in late September and early October.

Dr. Channing Meyer of the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health said that the chemical culprits were toluene — used in glue — freon, butyl alcohol and butyl acetate. All are cleaning agents.

GM to hear strike deadline

DETROIT — The United Auto Workers will set a strike deadline at General Motors Corp. this week after reaching a last-minute tentative agreement for hourly employees at Chrysler. In negotiations with industry giant GM, the union will be trying to win a pact for 390,000 workers similar to one agreed upon by Ford and Chrysler. UAW President Leonard Woodcock said officials would set the strike deadline early in the week.

Palestinian boat sunk

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israeli navy vessels sank a boat carrying Palestinian guerrillas and captured two other craft in a battle off the Lebanese coast Saturday, the military command said. It reported that one Palestinian was killed and 12 were captured, including two who were wounded. The prisoners were taken to an Israeli navy base, a communique said. It added there were no Israeli casualties.

Ulster bomb injures 25

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — A bomb planted in a car exploded outside a crowded bar at Ballymena in County Antrim Saturday night, wounding 25 persons, police said. Five of the victims were seriously injured in the blast about 25 miles north of Belfast.

A security guard on duty outside a bar in North Belfast was shot dead, authorities reported.

In the County Tyrone town of Omagh, some 7,000 persons joined in a peace march and a brief religious service to protest Northern Ireland's continued sectarian warfare.

Africa peace talks rejected

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — Five black African leaders meeting here Saturday ignored the Geneva talks on Rhodesia's political future and said the only way for blacks to gain power there is through armed struggle. They charged that diplomatic moves for a peaceful transition to black majority rule in Rhodesia, including the Geneva negotiations, only offer time "to consolidate the white racist regimes" in Rhodesia and South Africa.

"Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) will be liberated in the same way as Angola and Mozambique," Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere told reporters.

Show of Christian strength

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Christian loyalists of the Lebanese army staged a military review Saturday to buttress Christian claims that they can guarantee their own security despite continued fighting. The rightist Phalange Party, which fields the largest Christian militia in the 18-month-old civil war, said 2,000 soldiers paraded before army commander Hanna Saeed with tanks and armored cars.

Peace trip

TOKYO — Foreign sources in Peking reported three officials from Taiwan traveled to Peking to confer with the mainland Chinese government. They said the delegation was sent to China with the approval of Nationalist Premier Chiang Ching-kuo and "through the good offices of U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger."

Easy ordination

Can you please tell me what the city, county and state requirements are for an ordained minister to legally perform marriages and conduct funerals, open a church and in all ways conduct the duties of his calling? F.N.M., Long Beach.

The First Amendment guarantees of freedom of religion prohibit the government from establishing regulations for ministerial candidates. Virtually anyone may start a church and ordain ministers, a classic example being Kirby Hensley, who has ordained more than a million ministers at $2 a head for his Universal Life Church out of his Modesto garage. Once a minister is ordained—that is, recognized by any church (including one of one's own creation)—then that person is qualified to conduct marriages and perform all other duties of a minister. However, the laws of the state must be adhered to in the case of marriage; licenses and blood tests must be secured before the ceremony can be legally performed. Many people get mail-order ordinations for fun, though some are serious. Others have sought ministerial status to avoid the military draft or to claim tax exemptions. The Internal Revenue Service and the military cast a wary eye on exemption requests based on religion. The military law specifically ruled out deferments for part-time or "incidental" preachers. A spokesman for the IRS, pointing out that tax fraud is a criminal offense, said, "If you are trying to set up a tax exemption on a $2 mail order, you will hear from us."

Excess profit taxing

I bought 18 reels of 16mm film at a swap meet and later found out that they're home movies taken in the 1930s of Bing Crosby, his first wife, Dixie, and their sons. The movies also show Crosby and Andy Devine on a fishing trip. I don't know how the films ended up at a swap meet. How can I contact Crosby? I'd like to find out if the films are of any interest to him before I try selling them to Crosby collectors across the country. A.T., Gardena.

Action Line put you in touch with Crosby's business manager, and after he viewed the films in your home and corresponded with you over a year's time, you ended up wanting far more money for the home movies than Crosby was willing to pay. In 1943 Crosby's home in the Toluca Lake district of the San Fernando Valley burned down, and that's apparently when the singer lost possession of his home movies. After the fire, some of the charred remains, possibly including the films, were turned over to a salvage company, and via this route the films may have ended up at the swap meet where you bought them.

Clean sweep

Is the city so poor after the Queen Mary and the Long Beach Grand Prix that it can't afford to clean the grounds and walks of our nice courthouse? Is the city just letting it go to match the rest of the downtown area? And don't tell me it's just one or two days of dirt. There are papers, sticky goop and junk all over the place. The leaves and buds on the west sidewalk haven't been swept in weeks, if ever. If Disneyland with all its crowds can be kept so clean, it seems that a sweeping or hosing down of the sidewalks around the courthouse is not too much to expect. I'm a visitor from Ohio. A.V., Ohio.

The sidewalks around the courthouse and the police station should be cleaned almost daily, but Robert Kennedy, director of the Long Beach Public Service

P.O. Box 230 Long Beach, Calif. 90804

Department, concedes that the area has been somewhat neglected during the construction of the nearby City Hall. He promised to send a crew out to clean up the sidewalks. Kennedy said the sidewalk on the west side of the courthouse is lined with a type of rubber tree that drops buds at this time of the year. "When people walk on the buds, it does make a real mess," he said. The construction of the City Hall also has increased the amount of litter in the area, Kennedy said, and has limited access for the sweepers. He added that when construction is completed in the near future, his department plans to clean the entire area regularly.

Record check

I currently am a student at Long Beach City College, and I'm having trouble locating my high-school records. I went to school in Japan at an Air Force base that has since been closed. I am trying to apply for a work-study program at school, but this is impossible without my high-school transcripts. If I don't get a job through this program, I'll have to drop out of school. Can Action Line help? C.H., Long Beach.

You can obtain your high-school transcripts by writing to the National Records Center, Department of Defense Dependent School Section, Washington, D.C. 20409. This agency maintains school records for all branches of the military. When you request your records, you should include your full name, your father's name and rank, the last year you attended school on the base, your father's Social Security number and your Social Security number if you had one at the time you were a high-school student. If you want the transcripts sent directly to LBCC, you should state in your letter that you waive your rights under the Privacy Act and authorize the government to send your records to the college.

Big bell

My sister and her husband are coming from Illinois, and we would love to show them the Korea Friendship Bell. Can you tell us its exact location? U.S., Long Beach.

The huge bell, which measures 12 feet 4 inches high and weighs 37,400 pounds, is located on the hillside west of the 3700 block of Gaffey Street on the old Ft. MacArthur Upper Reservation. Molded by a score of craftsmen at a cost of $400,000, it features a relief of the Statue of Liberty and another of a Korean woman in native dress. Korea's Bicentennial gift to the American people is housed in a belfry constructed in the traditional Korean style from the Shilla Dynasty in the eighth century. The Los Angeles area was chosen as the site for the bell because the county has the largest population of Korean-Americans in the nation: about 100,000.

Employees challenge public session

Secret hospital inquiry asked

VENTURA (AP) — The California State Employees Association (CSEA), which represents most employees at Camarillo State Hospital, says it may seek a court order to close an unusual public grand-jury probe into deaths there.

CSEA spokesman Mike McBride said his group is considering whether to try to close the hearing, scheduled to begin here at 9 a.m. Monday.

Ventura County Dist. Atty. C. Stanley Trom and Grand Jury Foreman

Anthony J. Capritto had asked that the hearing be public, saying the investigation "directly and significantly affects the general public welfare."

Authorities Monday plan to present results of their year-long investigation of 75 deaths by asphyxiation, drug overdose, drowning and other unusual causes at the hospital over a four-year period. The grand jury is to determine if criminal negligence was involved in any of the deaths.

The usually closed grand-jury hearings are to be held in open court under a seldom-used provision of law.

McBride said the CSEA is trying to close the hearing on grounds that employees called to testify may be denied their due-process rights.

He said publicity may prejudice the right of a defendant to a fair trial. However, Trom noted that there are no criminal defendants at this point in the probe.

In his request for public hearings, Trom said they would be merely "investigatory in nature, in that there are no responsible parties (for the deaths) presently known to this office."

If CSEA does get a temporary restraining order halting the public hearing, Trom said he would postpone proceedings until the court issues a final ruling on whether the hearing should be open or closed.

MARINE PILOT KILLED IN CRASH IDENTIFIED

A Marine pilot apparently killed when his single-engine plane crashed into the sea between Long Beach and Catalina Island was identified Saturday by the Marine Corps as Sgt. Robert Stephen Treadway, 22, of Hillrose, Colo.

The plane crashed about 4 p.m. Friday in the channel, leaving only an oil slick on the water, the Coast Guard said. Neither the body nor any wreckage was recovered.

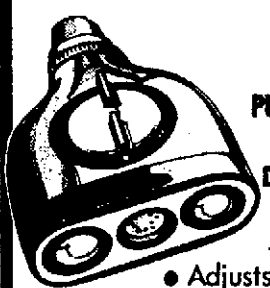

A Marine spokesman said Treadway was a member of a flying club at the El Toro Marine Corps Air Station. Treadway took off in the single-engine Beechcraft shortly after 3 p.m., the spokesman said. He had four hours' fuel.

Two boat skippers said they saw a puff of smoke in the sky about 15 miles from shore and watched it plummet to the sea where it burst into flames.

Explains 'flip' answers

Hayakawa says he has a lot to learn

By DOUG WILLIS
AP Political Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — S.I. Hayakawa says that he has a lot to learn as a freshman U.S. senator and that his top priority will be to increase tax incentives for small businesses.

Hayakawa, who beat party-registration odds and incumbent Democratic Sen. John Tunney in his first venture into politics, said in an interview that running for office "is a combination of being an evangelist and a stand-up comedian."

The former San Francisco State College president said that he sees his new job as being a "fact-gatherer, scholar and judge" and that if sessions are dull he will take a nap in his office, not on the Senate floor.

HE SAID that he sometimes gave flippant answers to questions in the campaign because there was not time for serious, complex answers, but that even flippant answers gave an adequate idea of his attitudes.

In a question-and-answer session, California's 70-year-old senator-elect said he will be a Republican partisan when necessary, but he thinks most issues before Congress are nonpartisan.

Q. Did you always wear a tam-o'-shanter or did you adopt that as a symbol after that day you wore it pulling the wires out of the sound truck in 1968?

A. I wore one for many, many years. It came out of my Canadian background. I always wore it for fishing and sports-car riding and other slightly challenging occasions. I thought the moment I had to reopen San Francisco State was a challenging enough occasion, so I wore it then. And it became a symbol as a result of your profession (the news media). I've had my picture taken with it so many times that it's been a symbol ever since.

Q. You won by a very narrow margin. Your philosophy was criticized as "simplistic and obsolete" by the state's largest newspaper. What kind of a mandate do you have? Can you broaden your base?

A. I don't know that I really need to do anything more than push the same things I've been pushing.

I'm very, very much in favor of tax incentives for small business. That's one of the first things I want to look into. I would like to raise the limits for allowable earnings for people on Social Security... and to enable academically unmotivated teen-agers to go to work, because the minimum wage of $2.50 is far too much for a 16-year-old with no previous work experience and no skills. These are things I promised in the campaign, and I'm going to stick to them.

Q. You will be a newcomer from the minority party. How do you plan to achieve these goals in Washington?

A. I certainly have a lot to learn about how to operate in Washington. What would you do? Certainly you make alliances with other senators and congressmen, find other people who agree with you, because it's never a one-man project.

Only some issues are partisan. A large number of issues are nonpartisan. I can be a partisan on partisan issues, but I can join with Democrats on issues that are nonpartisan or can be presented in a nonpartisan way.

Q. With all of your effort devoted to months to the campaign, when you found you had actually won, did you have the feeling of "What now?"

A. No. I felt, "That part of it is over; now on to the next step." I never really had much doubt about winning. It didn't come as a big surprise.

Q. As a semanticist, how did you view your campaign against Sen. Tunney? Did you and Tunney really talk about the issues, or were the important issues lost in the campaign?

A. I thought we had some quite serious differences of opinion. Those differences were made quite clear in the debates and also in his speeches and my speeches. I think it all served a very useful purpose.

Q. There have been accounts that during your days at San Francisco State you napped a fair amount during faculty meetings. Do you nap as a matter of course? Do you plan to nap during the working day back in the Senate to keep up your energy level?

A. I have no idea. I

don't nap as much as I used to. My whole energy level is higher now because I'm much more careful of my diet than I used to be.

And, as I've said before, so many professors took 25 minutes to present a two-minute idea. You may find that in Congress, but I didn't find it in the campaign. And if you find it in Congress you can go back to your office and sleep instead of sleeping publicly.

Q. As a candidate, you were a critic running against something. Now your job will be to perform. Have you thought about whether that will be a harder job than campaigning?

A. I've thought about it a lot. The job of running for office is a combination of being an evangelist and a stand-up comedian. The job of being a legislator is being to a considerable degree a fact-gatherer, scholar and judge. They are two different jobs. I've prepared for both.

I've been for 30 years or more on the lecture circuit, so I know how to hold and entertain an audience. I also am a scholar. So if it is necessary to research a subject, I know how to do it sufficiently and rapidly.

Ford campaign did 'truth test' on Carter in debates

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's campaign staff checked tapes of Jimmy Carter's voice during the first two presidential debates with a "voice-stress analyzer" to try to determine if he was lying, a Republican official said Saturday.

But the campaign never publicized the tests, although Carter exhibited more stress than Ford in their answers, said Eddie Mahe Jr., executive director of the Republican National Committee.

The Ford campaign did not pay for the tests, which were conducted by Rick Bennett of Issaquah, Wash., who made the machine, and an associate, Roger McLoughlin of Denver.

McLoughlin contacted Mahe and volunteered to analyze the tapes, according to Mahe, who said he told Stuart Spencer, Ford's deputy campaign director, about the offer.

"He said Carter was under tremendous stress during the debate, and it would be very helpful if we knew the areas where he was feeling stress," Mahe said.

On Oct. 20 McLoughlin and Bennett demonstrated the machine in Spencer's office, then went to the Republican National Committee office, where they spent all day reviewing tapes of the debates and underlining sections of transcript where Carter displayed the most stress, Mahe said.

But Mahe said both he and Spencer were reluctant to publicize the results because "this was the kind of thing that can whip around on you and blow up on you 14 ways from Sunday."

On Oct. 21, the day before the final debate,

Mahe sent the underlined transcript to Spencer, who never told him what he did with it.

Spencer was on vacation and unavailable for comment Saturday. But a President Ford Committee spokesman, Peter Teeley, said, "Obviously, whatever they found in those recordings was not used."

It's not end of the Rainbow for these girls

By JON VAN
Knight News Service

INDIANOLA, Iowa. — Must all Rainbow Girls be one color? A group of young Indianola girls who think not have initiated Michelle Palmer, a quiet, 12-year-old black, into their Rainbow chapter.

The initiation was somewhat anticlimactic for Michelle, whose acceptance last month by the chapter caused the national Rainbow organization to first suspend the Indianola group and, eventually, all 136 Iowa Rainbow chapters and their 5,000 members.

But the chapter decided, anyway, to give Michelle the usual initiation ceremony into the girls' fraternal order, conducted at the Indianola Mason Temple.

The ceremony couldn't help but impress Michelle and the three girls initiated with her.

IN THE DIMLY LIT chapter room, the initiates were led around and around the floor, stopping to hear older girls in white dresses lecture them on such topics as love, patriotism and community service.

Jesus said: 'Thou shalt love the Lord Thy God with all thy heart . . . and thy neighbor as thyself.' Love is the fulfillment of every law," goes one speech to the new initiates.

The ceremony left Michelle "pretty bubbly all over — exhausted but happy," her adoptive father, Dwaine Palmer said. He is white.

The national uproar caused by Michelle's acceptance into this small-town Rainbow chapter has left Michelle and her mother, Marita, emotionally drained. The Palmers have received phone calls from across the nation. All but about five supported Michelle.

"This is so mixed up," sighed Michelle. "I just wish everyone would forget about it."

That seems unlikely.

THE FACT THAT Michelle has heard the secret Rainbow ritual and was warmly welcomed by the Indianola members and their adult advisers made some Rainbow officers livid.

Rainbow is a fraternal organization for girls 12 through 20. It is sponsored by the Order of Eastern Star, a Masonic auxiliary group.

"We don't take blacks to start with," explained Herbert Grout, supreme recorder of the International Rainbow Organization, headquartered in McAlester, Okla. "Her petition was not signed by a Mason or an Eastern Star member. It was illegally presented, so the Indianola Assembly got a note from us that it was closed."

All this, Grout said, "is based on an unwritten rule excluding blacks that's been in effect for 56 years."

It is not unusual for local Rainbow chapters to try to break the unwritten racial rule, Grout said. When that was tried in Iowa, he added, the state Masonic Lodge ruled that if Rainbow discriminates against blacks, the organization may no longer use buildings owned by Masonic lodges. That caused the suspension of all Iowa Rainbow groups, Grout said.

"IF SOMETHING isn't worked out, they'll all be closed on the first of the year," Grout said. He blamed the Iowa Masonic action on meddling by the federal government.

"The Iowa Masons have accepted federal funds for their homes for the aged. Why they do that, I can't imagine. They're under federal control now."

Whatever their motivation, the Iowa Masons have taken a strong stand against racial discrimination, and some adults predict that if the national group persists in following its "unwritten rule," the Iowa Rainbow girls will continue to operate as an organization severed from the national office.

On Friday, L. Ray Chamberlin, acting board chairman of the Rainbows' state executive board, said in Des Moines that the board will establish a separate state-wide organization, open to nonwhite members.

Chamberlin said officials are "interested in seeing Rainbow or a comparable organization continue in Iowa, which has a policy of nondiscrimination by reason of race, creed, color, or national origin."

ALTHOUGH GROUT contends the whole thing "is nothing more than blacks trying to break down the white organizations," Dwaine Palmer and his family hardly fit the image of radicals or even of civil rights activists.

Palmer, 37, has spent most of his life working for the phone company. He met Marita seven years ago in Fort Madison, an Iowa town on the Mississippi River, where he managed the phone company and she worked as a receptionist.

They have been married six years, the second marriage for each. Palmer adopted his wife's two children from a previous marriage, and the couple also have an 11-month-old daughter.

In their years together at Fort Madison, and the last three in Indianola, discrimination has not been a problem, said Palmer. He was the manager in Indianola until his promotion to the main office in Des Moines this month.

"THIS CONTROVERSY came as a surprise to us," Palmer says. "Maybe I'm kind of naive. I knew the group was selective about its membership and I guess I can buy that, but I didn't know it was restrictive by race."

When Michelle asked her dad if she could join Rainbow, he recalled, "she was mostly worried about the dues and buying a white dress for $40. She didn't have the money."

Now, Michelle's attention is on other problems.

"My concern is Iowa losing its charter," she said. "Pretty soon there'll be another state losing its charter, then another and another, and before long, the Rainbow will be all gone."

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A 20-year-old Queens College student hoping to join a St. John's University ROTC fraternity was stabbed to death with a bayonet Friday night during illegal hazing rites on a small island off Long Island's South Shore.

The victim, Thomas Fitzgerald, was said to have been playing a prisoner of war and learning "intimidation techniques" under interrogation when he was run through the chest by a bayonet wielded by a member of the Pershing Rifles, a national honorary military society.

Suffolk County police filed a charge of second-degree murder against James Savino, a senior at

Blacks grin over 'how we got a president'

By THOMAS JOHNSON
New York Times Service
COLUMBUS, Miss. — Several black laborers and domestic workers fortified themselves against the early-morning, 50-degree chill with country sausages, eggs and grits that Mary Johnson prepared at the tiny, humble Smith's Cafe that clings unobtrusively to this town's small shopping center.

They compared stories about "how we elected ourselves a president."

"The woman I work for told me to make sure I voted for President Ford," a heavy-set domestic worker said. "And I said 'Yes, ma'am, I certainly will.'"

The breakfast crowd laughed loudly, knowing what was coming.

"I went straight to the polls and voted for Carter," the domestic worker said. When the laughter died down, she added more quietly, "I've worked for that white woman for as long as I can remember, and she still thinks I'm a damn fool."

Blacks in the Deep South gave President-elect Jimmy Carter more than 95 per cent of their vote. More than 65 per cent of blacks registered to vote went to the polls, according to the Atlanta-based Voter Education Project.

The project's director, John Lewis, said Friday that the black vote nationally of more than 2.4 million, with more than 92 per cent of that going for Carter, was both "the largest black vote in history" and "the most decisive and influential single exercise of minority political power in this century."

In scores of interviews by the New York Times in the heavily black, rural communities along the Mississippi-Alabama border, black voters saw Carter as "the only hope to change things," "an end to the Nixon-Ford secondments and their foolishness" and, repeatedly, as "a chance for black folks to get some jobs."

William R. Harris, a recruiter of rural blacks for jobs in the construction industry national training program, put it this way: "Of course we don't know what Carter will do in the final analysis, but we had to kick those other fellows out because they didn't do what they should have done when they had the chance."

Black voters in this region likened the election promises of Carter to the social programs they remembered from the administrations of Democratic Presidents Roosevelt, Truman, Kennedy and, especially, Johnson.

"I was scared to death when Johnson, a southerner, became President," said A. L. Henderson, a small farmer living just south of Reform, Ala., "but he turned out to be just about the best president for the colored folks."

They expressed neither fear nor elation concerning Carter's being a southerner, but rather they often expressed the hope that, as a southerner, he "might turn out to be like LBJ."

Several also said that Carter had a better understanding of the need to rid the nation of racial prejudice. Especially, as C. T. Gilmore, a lumber worker near West Point, Miss., put it: "That deep down I hate a nigger and would rather die than change kind of prejudice."

Black people make up about 40 per cent of the population in the Mississippi-Alabama border region, forming large pockets of predominantly black districts where their great-grandfathers had been slaves on vast cotton plantations.

As the white landowners mechanized their farming and went also into soybeans, cattle and pine trees, the poorer blacks became surplus labor and they now constitute the majority of the region's high unemployment rate. Many blacks have fled the region for the urban North.

A decade ago the civil rights movement concentrated here in "the black belt," named for both the color of some of its soil and for the large number of black people, and blacks have increasingly involved themselves in politics.

And since the region anticipates a major economic boom, the black political activism has been extended to the demands that blacks share equally in the region's economic development. This region is particularly concerned with the $2.6 billion in new industry that the 253-mile Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway is expected to bring into the region.

With his widely publicized vetoes of the employment bills, President Ford has been likened in this region to "the rich white folks who don't really care whether black folks improve themselves or not," said Albert Temple, a mechanic who lives just south of Columbus.

But since whites do control black incomes in this region, deceptions, like those of the domestic worker, have long been an accepted practice among blacks.

A young professional woman in Meridian, Miss., who comes from Mississippi's Clark County, said this was "the South's most valued tradition — hypocrisy." "You see, white folks can condemn what they call 'federal giveaways' like poverty programs, while they get rich on federal farm subsidies and government building programs. In this atmosphere black folks see nothing wrong with lying to white folks — it's almost our sacred ethnic duty," she said.

A black farmhand on a vast soybean field in Sumter County, Ala., told a visitor of a similar deception of his own employer. The farmhand said, "He asked me if I and my folks had voted for Ford, and I said 'Yes, sir.' And then he asked, if that was true, how did Carter beat Ford something like 3,500 to 2,000 votes in this county? I told him I didn't know and he said it was all peculiar and strange. I wanted to laugh, but I didn't crack a smile."

He added, with some anger, "If we had some real jobs in this county I could tell that cracker to his face that, 'Yeah, I voted for Carter and if you don't like it, you can go straight to hell.'"

To the North, along Route 17, Esther Robinson and Fannie Davis were walking seven miles into Aliceville to visit a sick friend when they accepted a ride from a passing motorist.

Mrs. Robinson said during the ride she had heard that President Ford had been promised a job selling peanuts along the beach to tourists watching

Richard Nixon throw stones "into the Potomac Ocean."

Mrs. Davis said this was "more work than either man had tried to do for the colored folks."

His candidates lost

Election shakes boss Daley

By WILLIAM WERTZ
CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Richard J. Daley emerged from Tuesday's election with his near-legendary reputation as a political kingmaker in tatters.

Among his problems:

- His hand-picked candidate for governor was crushed by the largest vote margin in Illinois history, and the winner was James R. Thompson, a former prosecutor who had helped put several of the mayor's cronies in jail on corruption charges.
- Daley's carefully chosen candidate for Cook County prosecutor lost to Republican incumbent Bernard Carey despite an enormous effort by the mayor's organization to return the powerful investigative post to party control.
- Illinois and its valued bundle of 26 electoral votes went to President Ford. Although Jimmy Carter didn't need them, as it turned out, the loss can hardly have won influence or obligations for the 74-year-old Daley or Chicago in the eyes of the forthcoming Democratic administration in Washington.

On the day after the election, as Republicans celebrated and headlines proclaimed "Daley the Big Loser," the mayor ducked reporters and flew off to vacation in Florida, where the climate was warmer and brighter.

Daley still retains his control over the city and can still deliver Chicago votes. But his state and national power seems to be draining away.

How did it happen?

Clearly, one factor was Daley's choice of candidates. His choice for governor, Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett, ran what one writer described as "the most dreary, inept, shallow and pigheaded" campaign in decades. Another writer said the mayor's pick for state's attorney, Edward Egan, had "all the drive and charisma of your average algebra teacher."

But perhaps of equal importance was the 1976 Illinois electorate. Because of recent population shifts, the vote from Chicago — no matter how completely it is captured by Daley's Democratic organization — no longer is the decisive factor it once was.

An analysis of voting figures shows that Daley produced for Carter a higher percentage of the Chicago vote than he did for John F. Kennedy in 1960. It was that election, widely regarded as a masterpiece of political manipulation by Daley, which established him as one of the nation's most influential politicians.

Carter got 67.5 per cent of the Chicago vote in 1976, compared with the 63.6 per cent that went to Kennedy in 1960.

But the Chicago vote represented 35 per cent of the Illinois votes cast for president in 1960; this year it represented only 25.7 per cent.

In 1960, votes from Chicago amounted to 44.5 per cent of all Democratic votes cast in Illinois for president. In 1976, the Chicago Democratic vote was only 35.7 per cent of that total.

HAZING

evens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N.J., is a cadet first lieutenant in the Pershing Rifles.

Savino, 21, was assigned in First District Court in Hauppauge, N.Y., and remanded without bail to the Suffolk County Jail pending a hearing Tuesday.

According to police, the incident occurred at 11:20 a.m. on Indian Island, an uninhabited 50-acre islet just off Lindenhurst. About 20 members and pledges of the St. John's unit of the Pershing Rifles had gone to the islet aboard a rubber raft and set up a camp, authorities said.

Hazing, the practice of subjecting fraternity or sorority initiates to tests of punishment, harassment or other abuse as a condition of membership, is a violation of both New York State law and the regulations of most colleges, including St. John's University.

THE commander of the ROTC unit at St. John's, Lt. Col. James Rafferty, expressed regret over Fitzgerald's death and what he called "the loss of two very fine men," and he noted that the activities on the island were "not sponsored" by the unit. Had they been sponsored, he said, officers would have been present to supervise.

But Rafferty declined to characterize the students' activities as "hazing" and contended that they were "unauthorized training."

The ROTC unit at St. John's has 225 members, 40 of them students at other colleges in the metropolitan area that do not have ROTC units of their own. The Pershing Rifles is made up of about 40 members of the St. John's ROTC unit.

The last hazing death in the metropolitan area occurred two years ago in Long Branch, N.J., when a 19-year-old Monmouth College student, William Flowers, suffocated in the collapse of a "grave" he had been made to dig and lie in as part of an initiation to Zeta Beta Tau fraternity.

BECAUSE of hazing, restrictive membership practices and other factors, fraternities and sororities on the nation's college campuses declined sharply during the student activism of the 1960s. In the past couple of years, however, there have been indications of a resurgence of interest in fraternities and sororities.

In the past week, the Board of Trustees of the State University of New York decided to permit national sororities and fraternities on the school's 64 campuses after a 23-year ban.

The Very Rev. Joseph T. Cabill, president of St. John's University, was out of the city Saturday and unavailable for comment. But a spokesman, Martin Healy, said: "Our entire community is shocked."

HE SAID the university would make a "thorough investigation" of the incident and noted that disciplinary action, including expulsion, would be undertaken if warranted.

Fitzgerald, who lived in Maspeth, N.Y., was the youngest of 10 children of a widow. A pre-law student and a junior at Queens College, he was said to have joined the St. John's ROTC unit last summer in the hope of obtaining scholarship assistance from the Army.

House to reshuffle committee chairmanships

By RICHARD MADDEN
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—While the size of the large Democratic majorities will be little changed in the 95th Congress that convenes Jan. 4, the chairmanships of a number of key congressional committees and subcommittees will undergo a major reshuffling, especially in the House of Representatives.

As a result, the new administration of President-elect Jimmy Carter will be dealing not only with new top leaders of the Senate and House, but with many new committee and subcommittee chairmen who will play major roles in shaping legislation.

Because of retirements and election defeats, at least eight of the 22 standing committees of the House will have new chairmen next January. In addition, the chairmanships of at least 22 House subcommittees, including two that set the level of appropriations for foreign aid and public works, will be vacant.

Only three chairmen of relatively small committees in the Senate were defeated last Tuesday, but there will be openings in the chairmanships of at least 21 subcommittees.

The chairmanship changes probably will not produce many noticeable ideological shifts in the work of the committees if events go as expected, but the reshuffling underscores the large turnover that will take place when the Senate and House begin to choose new leaders and chairmen at separate party caucuses starting next month.

In addition to committee chairmen, the Senate will select new majority and minority leaders and the House will choose a new speaker and majority leader as well as filling other leadership posts.

Seventeen new senators were elected last Tuesday, and there will be an 18th when a successor is appointed for Sen. Walter F. Mondale, the Minnesota Democrat who is the vice president-elect. That would be the largest number of new senators to take office since the election of 23 new senators in 1946.

Depending on the outcome of four undecided House races, there will be 67 to 71 new representatives, down slightly from the 91 new representatives elected two years ago.

This influx of new and younger members could lead to challenges against other incumbent Democratic chairmen in addition to fights over senior Democrats ascending to the vacant chairmanships. Two years ago freshmen Democrats led the fight to successfully oust three senior committee chairmen.

Among the major House committees that will have new chairmen are the Budget, Rules, International Relations, Interior and Public Works committees. Also open will be the chairmanships of the Post Office and Civil Service, Merchant Marine and Fisheries and the Small Business committees.

Under the House Democratic rules, Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., will be ineligible for another term as chairman of the Budget Committee, which sets federal spending and revenue goals as part of the new congressional budget-making process.

Among the possible successors are Reps. Robert N. Giaimo of Connecticut and Neal Smith of Iowa, both Democrats.

Rep. James J. Delaney, a 75-year-old New York Democrat, is in line to become chairman of the Rules Committee, succeeding Rep. Ray J. Madden, D-Ind., who was defeated for renomination earlier this year. The Rules Committee acts as an arm of the leadership in determining which bills get to the House floor and in setting the ground rules for debate and amendments.

With the retirement of Rep. Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., is in line to become chairman of the International Relations Committee, which has played a more assertive role in recent years in foreign-policy matters.

The retirement of Rep. James A. Haley, D-Fla., would put Harold T. Johnson, D-Calif., in line to be chairman of the Interior Committee, and the retirement of Rep. Robert E. Jones, D-Ala., would put Rep. James C. Wright Jr., D-Tex., next in line to be chairman of the Public Works Committee.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., would be in line to succeed Rep. David N. Henderson, a North Carolina Democrat who retired, as chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, would be in line to head the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, succeeding Rep. Leonor K. Sullivan, a Missouri Democrat who retired.

Rep. Tom Steed, D-Okla., would be in line to succeed Rep. Joe L.

Evins, a Tennessee Democrat who retired, as chairman of the Small Business Committee.

In the Senate, the defeat of Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, could elevate Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., to chairman of the Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee. With the defeat of Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., Quentin N. Burdick, D-N.D., is in line to head the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. And Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., could succeed Vance Hartke, an Indiana Democrat who was defeated, as chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee.

The Senate, however, is considering a reorganization of its committee and these three committees could be merged with others.

MAYOR DALEY

fastest growth in the past 16 years has come in Republican areas, principally the suburban counties surrounding Chicago.

In 1960, Richard M. Nixon got 131,691 votes in the five counties around the city. In 1976, Ford got 425,295 in those counties.

Still there are those who insist that, if Daley were half the political wizard he is reputed to be, he would have taken these population shifts into account and chosen candidates with more widespread appeal in 1976.

"He insisted that Mike Howlett run for governor."

At a time when people were fed up with conventional politicians, Daley decided that an aging, fat, gravel-voiced West Sider could beat a young reformer type like Jim Thompson," wrote columnist Mike Royko, author of "Boss," a book about Daley.

"It's obvious now that Daley is quite good at getting himself elected mayor of Chicago. But beyond that he's not much of a political genius anymore," Royko wrote.

Tuesday's losses were not a new phenomenon. Among Daley's prior calamities:

for governor was upset in the Democratic primary by Daniel Walker, a relatively unknown lawyer who had never before held public office. Walker was defeated by Howlett in the 1976 primary in a loss most observers attributed to Walker's unpopularity rather than Daley's clout.

—Daley's choice for state's attorney in 1972 was defeated in the primary by incumbent Edward Hanrahan, under a cloud because of a police raid that took the life of Black Panther leader Fred Hampton. Then Hanrahan was defeated in the general election by Carey.

ERA groups hail ballot wins

WASHINGTON (AP)—Women's rights groups are applauding the support given the Equal Rights Amendment by Colorado and Massachusetts voters in state constitutional votes Tuesday. They say it bodes well for the campaign to get four more states to ratify the federal ERA as the 27th Amendment to the Constitution. Elly Peterson and Liz Carpenter, chairwomen of ERAmerica, said the votes were especially significant coming after the failure of anti-ERA forces to knock the amendment from the Republican platform last summer.

The anti-ERA forces said, however, that they were gratified at the victory by some ERA opponents in several legislative elections. The Colorado vote against taking the ERA out of the state constitution where it was put in 1972 was "very encouraging endorsement of the concept of equality under the law by people who have been living under that law for four years," said Betsey Wright of the National Women's Education Fund. Massachusetts voters put the ERA in their state constitution with Tuesday's referendum. A year ago, New York and New Jersey voters turned down attempts to add the ERA to their state constitutions, causing consternation among supporters. Some analysts said the momentum for the ERA faltered because of fear and confusion among voters. Mary Brooks of the League of Women Voters said the more than 120 national groups supporting the ERA changed tactics after last year's setback.

JIMMY CARTER prepares to board Air Force jet Saturday for vacation off Georgia coast. Reacting to luxury of his newly assigned government plane, he cracked, "When I saw it I thought I should go home and put on a three-piece suit."

between the legs of the president-elect, his family, his staff, the reporters and the stewards.

Chip Carter, in blue jeans, explained that "J.B." stands for "Jet Black," or perhaps "Jerry Brown or John Birch or whatever you prefer."

His father was asked if he plans to change the picture mounted on a bulkhead showing Ford framed by the American and presidential flags.

Carter laughed and replied: "We haven't decided who to put there."

"Do you feel any different?" he was asked.

"We're sober about the job," he replied.

At several points he noted the plane's history, saying, "This is the plane on which President Johnson was sworn in as president. President Nixon's trip to China was made on this plane."

The Boeing 707 jet, now designated Air Force 26000, also brought Kennedy's body back to Washington from Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

It is one of several back-up planes for Air Force 1, the Spirit of '76, which Carter will use after he takes office.

The presidential plane has paneled walls, a massive global communications console and a presidential compartment with sofas and chairs that can be shut off for privacy.

Carter's staff was just as delighted with the plane as he was. At one point in the 45-minute flight from Albany Airport near his home in Plains, Ga., to Glynn Naval Air Station in Brunswick, Ga., Jody Powell, Carter's press secretary, came back to confess that the phone had rung and he hadn't known where to find it.

After the plane landed, Carter told reporters that he will meet later this month with Ford and that his wife, Rosalynn, will meet with Ford's wife, Betty.

First, he said, he plans to receive a national security and intelligence briefing from CIA Director George Bush.

As if to emphasize the working side of the vacation, Carter personally loaded a large cardboard carton labeled "Transition Documents" into the trunk of his car. They outline priorities for appointing 75 top officials and list the policy options Carter will have in the first few months of his presidency.

After the Carter caravan arrived at the secluded plantation owned by industrialist Smith Bagley, Carter told aides he planned to fish for sea bass and trout in Musgrove Creek, which borders the comfortable cabins in which the Carter party is staying.

"I've got a lot to read, but today I think I'm going to catch up on my sleep," Carter said. "We have been working pretty hard since we got back home."

Cooper can cite limitations statute—but IRS wants loot

land," he said. Instead, Cooper picked some of the roughest country in the Pacific Northwest.

HE TOOK two of the four parachutes with him when he jumped. One was a small emergency chute of the type used by stunt flyers. Under ideal conditions, even someone who knew what he was doing might break an ankle or leg with it.

The other was a training chute used for demonstrations. The panels had been sewn shut. It wouldn't have opened.

The next night the FBI reenacted the skyjacking using the same plane, crew, fuel load, speed and altitude. The test helped flight engineers and meteorologists to compute the probable drop zone to be an area covering about 25 square miles.

It has been searched and re-searched in vain. In April, 1972, 200 Army troops from Ft. Lewis, Wash., spent 18 days in the area. All they found was the victim of a homicide, a case unrelated to Cooper's.

WHAT would it take to find Cooper's remains, assuming they are there?

"I'd say it might take 5,000 men five years. I mean, how do you search a blackberry thicket higher than your head?"

The area contains part of a reservoir, steep hills and dense forest, much of it far from roads or trails. Experienced hunters get lost up there every year.

Loggers who work in the area agree that coyotes, mountain lions or wild dogs would make quick work of a body. After five years, they say, you might find a scrap of bone or two, if that.

Nevertheless, for a while Cooper was a folk hero of sorts.

He was macho. He was daring. He didn't hurt anybody, but he ripped off a big corporation. And he beat the fuzz.

THERE were Cooper T-shirts and Cooper bumper stickers. There were songs about Cooper. Two men were arrested for trying to bilk Newsweek magazine of $30,000 for an interview with "Cooper."

And there were imitators. Around the world, there were more than a dozen skyjacking attempts patterned after Cooper's. Cooper is the only one not known to have failed.

With increased airport security and modification of the Boeing 727

so the rear door wouldn't open in flight, the fad stopped.

The flow of clues, hints, and tips from the public about Cooper has slowed to a trickle now. After checking out more than 1,000 suspects, the FBI says it knows little more about Cooper than it did on that stormy night when he leapt into history.

WHAT kind of a man would do what Cooper did?

An ex-convict with no ties to people outside prison? A drifter who wouldn't be missed if he dropped from sight? A man with ties to family or friends who says, "I'm going to Libya to drill for oil. I won't write but you'll hear from me eventually?" An expatriate? A nut?

All possible, says Himmelsbach.

"Our society is so open, with its rights to come and go. It's so uncontrolled that it is possible for somebody to leave or drop out and nobody would think anything about it."

For a time it appeared a light plane may have been waiting for Cooper and whisked him from the drop zone that night. This assumes Cooper knew where he was jumping, an idea the FBI rules out.

A small plane did leave the area that night, but the pilot has been cleared.

Hit-and-run ship hunt narrowed to '2 or 3'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Coast Guard, searching the West Coast for a hit-and-run ship, is concentrating on two or three "suspect vessels," the Pacific commander says.

Vice Adm. A.C. Wagner would not identify the ships being sought, but said the Coast Guard is checking merchant vessels from San Diego to Juneau, Alaska, in hopes of locating the ship that allegedly sank and abandoned the Pacific Pearl off Northern California Thursday.

One man who had been aboard the ship is presumed dead, and three others were rescued.

A vessel is expected to stand by, regardless of nationality, when involved in an accident with another ship on the high seas, the Coast Guard said.

"If it turns out to be an Ameri-

A THEORY that the crew was part of the plot also has been scrapped.

Himmelsbach said that the whole thing probably was put together with minimal planning and that the bomb was a bundle of relatively harmless highway flares. The bomb was red. Dynamite isn't. If the crew members had realized that, they might have called his bluff at the time, Himmelsbach said. "He's lucky he got as far as he did with a plan like that."

Cooper's face, drawn by artists, is not a memorable one. It could be your neighbor, or a fellow bus rider.

"I'm sure a few dingalings will come along after the five years are up and say, 'Hey! I did it,'" Himmelsbach chuckled.

But even if the statute holds up, Cooper will have problems.

The Internal Revenue Service computes his tax debt, including penalties and interest, at about $198,000. And the Globe Indemnity Co., which had to pay $180,000 to the airline, may want to talk to him.

So now what? "We have to accept the possibility that we may never know," Himmelsbach said. "I guess we can live with that if we have to."

can vessel, we'll launch an investigation," Wagner told a news conference. "If it is a foreign vessel, it will be referred to the State Department, which will take it up with the appropriate government."

The Coast Guard rescued the three survivors Thursday. They were clinging to the debris of the 75-foot wooden boat 23 miles off Ft. Bragg. The survivors said a large boat sheared off the stern of the Pearl.

The incident occurred in heavy fog with poor visibility.

Wagner said the sea hunt originally centered around "about twelve suspect vessels," but is now "down to two or three."

He said the cargo-carrying ship was described as having a light gray hull and a green deck.

U.S.-S. Korea relations threatened by scandals

By GIL BAILEY
Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON—A pattern of foreign intrigue, including beautiful and charming women, big money, campaign contributions and the intelligence agencies of two countries is threatening relations between the United States and South Korea.

Involved in this pattern are members of the House leadership and a group of present and former California congressmen.

The pattern involves a major effort of at least several years duration by South Korea, using embassy officials, its own CIA and Korean nationals to influence members of congress and top members of the executive branch. The Justice Department is now investigating up to 22 members or former members of Congress in its probe of the Korean connections.

ON THE other side of the coin, news stories, not denied, reported that the U.S. bugged key meetings in the Blue House, Korea's White House, between South Korean President Park Chung Hee and top aides.

At one of those meetings Park discussed the operations with Tong-sun Park, a Washington-based Korean businessman involved in the rice trade. Discussions also involved the disbursement of $500,000 to $1 million in gifts and contributions to U.S. officials, according to the Washington Post.

Park is one of the keys to the Korean operation. He left the U.S. shortly before the investigation became public, although he has said he will return.

Another apparent key figure in the operation was Suzie Thompson, a Korean, who is an aide to retiring House Speaker Carl Albert. She has been called before a federal grand jury.

A third key is former Korean Ambassador Dong Jo Kim.

KOREANS MADE contributions to House Democratic Whip John McFall, D-Calif.; Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., House Democratic Deputy Whip, and former Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif. In addition, Koreans sponsored parties for Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass, current House Democratic majority leader, who is scheduled to become House speaker.

However, one of the key American figures in the pattern appears to be former California Rep. Richard Hanna, D-Orange County, now a businessman. Hanna has made numerous trips to Korea and has had business dealings with Korea and Park.

A former aide to Hanna, Jim Cousins, reported that Hanna believes he is currently under federal investigation.

Another Californian, Rep. Robert Leggett, D-Vallejo, has admitted he is under investigation.

California Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Fullerton, came under attack during the recent congressional election because of his contacts with the Koreans, although Wiggins said he has been told "affirmatively" by Justice Department that he is not under investigation.

The stories of Waldie and Wiggins may illustrate at least a part of the operations.

The two became involved in Korean affairs as members of the House Judiciary Committee when they traveled to Korea in 1969. The purpose of their trip, paid for by Congress, was to study the case of a constituent of Waldie, who as an American soldier had been convicted of murder and sentenced to death by a Korean court. "We didn't know that he was going to Korea, but Dick Hanna joined us in California and was on the plane," Wiggins reported. "He said he was on private business."

When the plane landed in Korea the party was greeted by Tongsun Park and Suzie Thompson. Thompson was in Korea on vacation, according to Wiggins.

He said he had seen Thompson on Capitol Hill but had never before met her. Park drove Wiggins to his hotel, leading later to a complaint from a Korean official who said the official greeting party had been bypassed.

On their return from Korea, Wiggins became socially acquainted with Thompson, and he and his late wife attended dinner parties and receptions that she gave.

"She is a magnificent cook, and it was a very pleasant evening," said Wiggins.

Later, Wiggins said, "When my wife became critically ill and died, she was extraordinarily kind."

When Wiggins remarried, he and his second wife attended more parties given by Thompson.

"I just heard from her indirectly 20 minutes ago. My wife sent her flowers for her birthday, and I just opened her thank-you card," he said Friday.

"Nothing improper took place," he added.

However, Wiggins did report that a member of the Korean National Assembly visited him in his office during the 1974 election.

"He said something about 'people in Korea would like to be helpful' and I stopped him, pointing out that any contributions from foreign nationals would be illegal," Wiggins said.

He noted that no "illegal or indecent offer" was made.

Wiggins made a number of other trips to Korea.

In particular, he went on one trip marking the 25th anniversary of the start of the Korean war, a trip paid for by Congress. Wiggins was a company commander and then a staff officer in that war.

In addition, he flew to Korea to deliver a commencement address at a private Korean university. His flight and that of his wife were paid for by the university.

In the U.S., he saw Park twice, once in the company of Hanna at the Georgetown Club, owned by Park and used by him in his entertainment efforts.

Wiggins noted that he served on the Judiciary Committee and the House Administration Committee with little power over foreign affairs. He said he had not been improperly pressured by the Koreans.

Waldie agreed. He served on the Judiciary Committee and Civil Service and Post Office Committee.

He and his wife also were entertained by Thompson.

Other guests of Thompson included Reps. Leggett and Charles Wilson, D-Inglewood.

The Waldies and the Wiggins, although political opposites, are close personal friends.

Both men, particularly because of their opposite points of view expressed during the House Judiciary impeachment inquiry concerning former President Nixon, are highly respected on Capitol Hill.

WALDIE DID receive a political contribution from Ambassador Kim. It was in the nature of the purchase of two tables at a California fund-raiser for Waldie's losing campaign for governor of California.

Waldie duly reported the contribution at the time.

His wife also received a Korean silk dress from Kim.

FCC member elected NAACP chief

NEW YORK (AP)—Benjamin L. Hooks, a member of the Federal Communications Commission, was unanimously elected Saturday to succeed Roy Wilkins as executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A spokesman for the civil rights organization said the national board of the NAACP met Saturday morning and agreed on the selection of Hooks, 51, to replace Wilkins, who retires next July 31.

Hooks, of Memphis, Tenn., was the first black appointed to the FCC. He is a lawyer, a banker, a licensed minister and a longtime human-rights activist.

"This is one of the most important jobs in the country... the very top in terms of the black community," he said in Memphis after hearing of his selection.

Hooks said he would have to resign his FCC changes I'm going to propose. I just want to really see it bigger and better."

He was the first black to become a criminal court judge in Tennessee since the Reconstruction.

"Benjamin Hooks has made an outstanding record in every field of endeavor he has attempted. . . . He is extraordinarily gifted, multi-talented and effective," said Margaret Bush Wilson, chairwoman of the board.

Wilkins, 75, has held the top NAACP post since 1955, but his career with the organization began in 1931. The spokesman said Hooks would assume office Jan. 1.

At its September meeting, the board relieved Wilkins of all responsibilities for internal operations so he could concentrate on important policy issues.

Hooks has been described as a hard-working, driving man, rarely satisfied with things as they are but with a reputation for fairness in his dealings.

"The NAACP has been a part of my life for as long as I can remember," reflected Hooks, noting that he has worked with local offices of the agency both in Memphis and Detroit.

Hooks became Tennessee's first black criminal court judge in 1965 when he was appointed to the bench by Gov. Frank Clement. A year later he won election to a full six-year term.

But in addition to the law practice, which he launched in 1949, he is also a Baptist minister serving congregations in Memphis and Detroit. He resigned his judgeship in 1968 to "devote more of my time to the increasing demands of my ministry."

HOOKS became the first black to serve on the FCC in 1972 when he was selected by former President Nixon.

There had been speculation that with the election of Jimmy Carter as president Hooks might have been in line for chairman of the FCC.

Long active in black community affairs, Hooks also had a go at black capitalism in Memphis, serving for two years as head of the Mahalia Jackson Fried Chicken franchises.

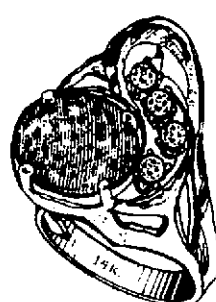

This business failed, however, and Hooks commented at the time that it suffered from lack of support from the black community.

"I've seen my long-haired brothers with their hands up in a black power salute, shuffling right on by to Colonel Sanders," he reflected.

Hooks' father ran a photography business in Memphis, later taken over by Hooks' brother, Charles.

HOOKS ATTENDED LeMoine College in Memphis and then joined the Army in World War

Flu-shot program falling far short of goal

By HAROLD SCHEMECK Jr.
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — One-third of the way through its planned time period, the national swine-flu program has vaccinated fewer than one-tenth of the people it was intended to reach.

The early performance has raised serious doubts among some experts that the much-delayed effort can achieve its goal of protecting most adult Americans before the onset of the 1976-77 flu season.

In New York City, for example, the head of the program said the turnout has been poor.

"As it's going now," Dr. Pascal James Imperato, the first deputy health commissioner, said Saturday, "it will probably reach somewhere between 15 and 20 per cent of the target population."

As of Friday, he said, clinics in the city have vaccinated roughly 110,000 out of a total eligible population of about 5 million.

Henry Woodard, the coordinator of the program for the rest of the state, said he couldn't guess what the total achievement would be, partly because some of the upstate population centers are just getting started. He said the number of persons vaccinated upstate during the last week in October equaled the total for the first three weeks.

An estimated 224,000 were vaccinated against flu last month in New York State outside the city, 113,000 of them during the final week of the month.

In California, which has the largest population of any state, Dr. James Chin said he had hoped the program would reach about half the adult population. As things are going now, he said, "if we get 30 to 40 per cent we'll be lucky."

Chin, who is chief of the State Health Department's Infectious Disease Section, said most counties were not able to start their efforts until Oct. 15 or 20 because they could not be assured supplies of the vaccine.

This kind of delay appears to have been common nationally. Several major regions have reported vaccinating about as many during the last week in October as they did during all the previous weeks of the month.

After delays that put the program behind schedule by at least six weeks, the nationwide immunization program began Oct. 1 in Indianapolis, Ind., and Waltham, Mass., with many states and localities getting started during the first two weeks of the month.

The federal government's Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga.,

which is coordinating the national program, has reported that 9.6 million persons were vaccinated during October. The CDC estimates that this is slightly more than 7 per cent of the "target population," which consists of almost all American adults and "high-risk" persons under 18.

The national figures show that almost half the total vaccinations during October were done during the last week of the month, an indication that the program is gathering momentum.

Nevertheless, with more than 120 million adults still unvaccinated, the effort would have to speed up to more than 2 million inoculations a day, and keep that pace, to get the job done by the end of the year. This seems unlikely.

California, New York State and New York City, for example, all plan to close down their clinic programs by about mid-December.

In California, Chin said there was little logic in continuing the public clinic program much beyond mid-December. By that time, he said, the flu season will probably have begun. This situation would greatly complicate an immunization program and weaken its effectiveness.

Once flu hits a population it moves fast, often spreading through a whole region in a few weeks. For vaccination to be useful, a person must receive it far enough in advance of exposure so that he or she has time to develop immunity. This commonly takes two weeks or so.

Throughout the nation, the program consists of two parts. The first priority is usually placed on vaccinating the elderly and others considered to be at "high risk." This group includes persons over 65 or with chronic disease of the heart, lungs or kidneys or other conditions that would tend to leave them prey to serious effects from flu.

For the high-risk persons, the national program recommends vaccination with bivalent vaccine to protect against both swine flu and the type of influenza called A-Victoria that was prevalent in the United States last winter.

Swine flu, the target of the program for the population in general, has not been detected anywhere in the world since an outbreak early this year at Ft. Dix, N.J. Influenza experts considered its appearance there a serious portent because it is a type against which few Americans have immunity. If it does reappear, therefore, it could be expected to spread widely and with potentially dangerous effect.

Since it has not been detected since February, however, many public health officers are becoming increasingly doubtful that it will reappear this winter. A-Victoria, however, is considered likely to reappear in at least sporadic outbreaks because isolated cases have been found from time to time all year here and abroad.

Nurse, crippled husband told to divorce to get state aid

FLINT, Mich. (AP)—State welfare officials have told a young nurse and her crippled husband to get a divorce so they can qualify for state disability payments.

And newlyweds Dale and Louise Schnebelt, who decided against divorce, have been told their federal disability payments will be cut.

The Schnebelts are appealing a decision by Michigan's Department of Social Services ending their $270 disability payment and requiring 23-year-old Schnebelt to return to a rest home.

They also have been told that their $192 federal

Supplemental Security Income payment will go down to $101. Mrs. Schnebelt must stay home to take care of her husband, so the two payments are the couple's only source of income.

Mrs. Schnebelt said Friday that the latest cut in disability payments will bring their monthly income down to $371. She said their expenses—rent, a special diet for Dale, repayment of a college loan, laundry and car payments—are about $500 a month.

"They tell us they understand. But they say that they have their rules," Mrs. Schnebelt said. The couple was advised to get a divorce so Louise could be paid as a nurse for her husband—as she was before their marriage—and the $270 a month from the state wouldn't be counted by federal officials as family income when they totaled up the federal benefits.

"But neither of us want that—we're in love," said Mrs. Schnebelt. "And I can't go to work and leave him here alone. I'd have to put him back in the nursing home."

Schnebelt's arms and legs were paralyzed after a canoeing accident several years ago. He and his wife met at a nursing home where he was a patient and she was a nurse. They were married in August.

Before their marriage, Dale lived in an apartment and Louise quit her nursing-home job to take care of him. He received $270 a month from the state to pay Louise for her work.

BUT after they were married, state officials told them about a welfare department rule that states the $270 cannot be paid to a spouse. The payments are continuing temporarily only because the Schnebelts have appealed the cutoff order.

The monthly $270 used to be counted as a disability payment to Schnebelt for his injuries. But it is now counted by federal officials as family income, earned by Mrs. Schnebelt from her employment as a nurse. That means the federal disability payments can be cut.

State welfare officials said they are sympathetic to the Schnebelts' case, but can't continue the payments. Federal officials had no comment on the case.

Dixy defends N-power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dixy Lee Ray, Washington State governor-elect, defended nuclear technology Saturday as the most effective way of producing energy.

Miss Ray's state was one of six in which referenda on restricting the use of nuclear power were rejected by voters Tuesday. She is a former chairwoman of the Atomic Energy Commission. Miss Ray told the National Council for the Social Studies that she opposed such initiatives, since coal and nuclear power are likely to be the foremost energy sources during the next decade.

"If they really knew more about how the plants operate and if they had more knowledge about the safeguards that are already in operation, they would not be so worried."

She acknowledged that nuclear power has a great ecological impact, but asserted that the benefits outweigh the negative points.

At the same time, she refused to endorse the idea of expanding nuclear technology alone to meet America's ever-growing energy needs.

Loch Ness offers new mystery

BOSTON (AP)—Scientists report that a sonar search for the legendary Loch Ness monster has turned up a fuzzy outline of an object on the bottom of the deep Scottish lake that resembles a prehistoric dinosaur.

But Martin Klein, head sonar expert of this past summer's expedition to the loch sponsored by the New York Times and the Academy of Applied Science in Boston, is cautious about his discovery.

Klein said in a telephone interview from Salem, N.H., where his sonar manufacturing firm, Klein Associates, is located, "It certainly bears further investigation."

A picture of what might be a monster carcass—or a shipwreck or something else—appeared in the electronics-trade journal EDN, published here Friday.

A carcass would establish Nessie's existence almost as well as a live specimen, but no one has ever found one.

The picture is a side-scan sonar trace of the bottom of Loch Ness. One object is almost certain to be a barge sunk years ago.

Nearby is what EDN said Klein described as "an unusual shape with a long neck-like projection and what could possibly be flippers" about 30 feet long.

EDN said the object was at 330 feet, too deep for a dive, but in his telephone interview Klein said the magazine was mistaken and it was 150 feet.

Klein provided another picture of a scan of what the sonar crew dubbed "The Average Plesiosaur," after the prehistoric animal that has been one candidate for the identity of the legendary monster. It also was about 30 feet long.

In the draft of an article for Technology Review, the alumni publication of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Klein wrote of that scan, "As is often the situation in our type of work, we made one of our most intriguing finds just as we were about to wind up our survey."

"The target has a carcass-like shape with a long neck-like projection, and... does not look like any of the other targets which we picked up in the loch. Of course it would be wild speculation to make any assumptions about this target without further investigation."

Phony plans bear Northrop address

Phantom Mailer sends arms 'secrets'

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Received any top-secret military documents in your mailbox lately? Don't bother trying to sell them—you may be the latest victim of the Phantom Mailer.

About six months ago, according to government officials, someone began mailing what appear to be highly classified military documents to about two dozen company presidents, university professors specializing in weapons and others. The documents are phony.

Last week, the Mailer struck the newsroom of the Norfolk Ledger-Star.

"You're the first newspaper to receive one," said Dick Williams, an assistant to the director of security at the Defense Supply Agency in Alexandria, Va. "If he's going to the newspapers now, that's going to create an additional problem for us."

The letter sent to the Ledger-Star bore a postmark from Garden Grove, Calif., and the return address: "D. Marshall, Staffing, Personnel Administration and Development, Northrop, 500 E. Orangeforpe Ave., Anaheim, Calif."

That's Northrop's real address. But Northrop, a defense contractor specializing in aircraft and weapon systems, said it does not employ a "D. Marshall." The firm's chief of security says, "We are familiar" with the Phantom Mailer.

The document, stamped "SECRET," included what appeared to be a series of photostatically reproduced reports on various aircraft and weapons systems, along with drawings of curiously designed aircraft.

Each report had been heavily censored.

And there were two pieces of film with microdots—pages of text and drawings photographically reduced to microscopic size.

On each page was a drawing of an aircraft and a detailed report.

"Tests were conducted with a MIG21 (basic Soviet fighter aircraft)," one page said, "fitted with the following equipment: The radar dish was hooked up to a high-energy variable-frequency generator controlled by the (deleted) harmonic energy application computer and a test

'cattle prod' pod (deleted) mounted on the center pylon."

The Mailer uses various names and mails most of the packages from California, although some have been postmarked New York and Phoenix.

"He could be a disgruntled employee of some company having defense contracts, but it's hard to say," Williams declared. "It's worthless stuff. The drawing of that aircraft... is taken from a model aircraft put out by a model-aircraft company."

The Mailer apparently is familiar with military hardware. Williams added. But he occasionally throws a curve.

"At times he'll be de-

AMMUNITION RECALL

Frontier Cartridge Co. Inc. is recalling certain lots of 30-30 ammunition which have a structural weakness. This weakness may cause the case head to separate upon firing, which may result in injury from escaping gas. Frontier purchases empty primed cases from Federal Cartridge Corporation and Federal has advised Frontier to recall this ammunition. The ammunition involved is Frontier 30-30 ammunition loaded with either 150 gr. round nose or 170 gr. flat point bullets bearing lot numbers 6-38-76-9, 6-42-76-9, 9-68-76-9, 9-71-76-9. # Summary of 10 Secret Witness cases and rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 68 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $46,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial.

Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards will also be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information directly through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness first — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.T. Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of Vincent Budimer Katnic Jr., 20, wanted on warrants charging murder and assault during a stabbing spree in the 1700 block on Walnut Avenue at 3 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 10, 1976, that left Michael P. McMahon, 27, dead and Vance E. Weikert, 32, seriously wounded. If Katnic is convicted of the murder, the informant will become eligible for an additional $1,500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Lynch, 69-year-old owner of Don's Turf Motel at 4732 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, shot to death during a holdup at the motel at 11:05 p.m. on July 20, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the purse thief who attacked and knocked down Ruth Tournat, 76, of Long Beach as she was walking on First Street at Atlantic Avenue at 7:20 p.m. May 14, 1976, causing injuries that resulted in her death on June 1.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Euland King of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 59-year-old David E. Smith of Downey, shot to death during a holdup at Lucy's Restaurant, 5096 Long Beach Blvd., shortly before 2 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the holdup slayer of Benjamin Wallace, 48-year-old San Pedro taxi driver who was found shot to death and slumped over the wheel of his cab parked at Seaside Avenue and Terminal Way on Terminal Island at 3 a.m. on Sunday, Aug. 3, 1975.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arquette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

'We cannot live with terror' Death their escape from a life of fear

By BETH GILLIN POMBEIRO Knight News Service

NEW YORK — They were such a nice, quiet old couple Thwt's what everyone said after the police found their bodies, the suicide note and their best clothes in which they wished to be cremated laid out neatly on their twin beds.

"We cannot live with terror anymore, and we do not wish to live in fear," said the note, their last communication to the world. The note was written in German, although Hans Kabel, 78, and his wife, Emma, 76, spoke fluent English.

IN THE month before they killed themselves to escape the fear of crime that haunts many elderly people in the South Bronx, the Kabels had twice been brutally attacked, beaten and robbed.

Worse, it happened inside their home of 40 years, a neatly furnished, spotlessly clean apartment in a solid, dark-brick building.

Their home had been their sanctuary, an oasis of order in a decaying, crime-ridden neighborhood. But even home was no longer safe.

Paralyzed by their fear, unwilling to leave familiar surroundings but too frightened to stay, they chose what was, for them, the only possible escape. They hanged themselves.

"I HAVE never seen a case before that showed this degree of frustration and despair," said Detective John Moore. "I have never heard of a double suicide for this reason before."

The Kabels were assaulted for the second time on Oct. 2, four days before they died. The attack was almost an exact replay of the one that took place on Sept. 8.

On both occasions, Kabel, an easy target for robbers because he walked with difficulty and was hard of hearing, was followed home after he cashed his pension check and pushed from behind after he unlocked his door.

Mrs. Kabel, who walked with the aid of a cane, almost never left the apartment after the first assault. She was severely beaten on the face, and was "ashamed to go out on the street with her black-and-blue eye," said corner grocer Jack Tencer.

Every morning, Kabel, wearing a gray jacket and a small cap, would walk slowly down the three flights of steps to the street to deposit the garbage and stop by Tencer's store for a newspaper and sometimes milk and bread. Kabel also did the weekly shopping at a nearby supermarket.

"THEY never bothered nobody," murmured Bennie Hernandez, a young, unemployed exterminator who lives on the sixth floor of the apartment building.

Hernandez sometimes passed Kabel on the stairs, and whenever this happened, Hernandez recalls, "He would see me and look shocked, and I would say, 'Take it easy, I live here.'" The deaths have shaken Hernandez, who says bitterly, "As soon as I get some money, I'm getting the hell out of here myself."

The odd thing is that the Kabels did have money — a $23,000 nest egg stashed away in a savings account. After the robberies, police in the Senior Citizens Robbery Unit urged the couple to find another apartment. The Kabels said they would never move.

"It is a situation that is not unusual among old people," said Detective Moore.

"ELDERLY people often become very frugal," he said. "They feel, 'I'm going to keep that money safe in the bank, and I'm going to stay here and endure.'"

To the Kabels, already stricken by fear, the second attack must have seemed a nightmare from which they could never awake. This time, the flesh of gentle Emma Kabel's frail arm and her already battered face were punctured repeatedly with a meat fork that her assailant grabbed from her own kitchen.

It is a gruesome story, but not much more gruesome than many.

Every year, according to the police, about 10 percent of the 285,000 Bronx residents who are 65 or older become victims of crime, and about 1 percent are injured as a result.

There are no statistics to measure the fear of crime that plagues the Kabels' neighborhood in the Morrisania section of the South Bronx, but among the elderly the fear is pervasive and tangible, and they see no way out.

"With the rents today, and people on Social Security, what are you supposed to do?" asked a sad-eyed, gray-haired man who lived next door to the Kabels for 35 years. "Pitch a tent in Central Park? There is no safe place. There is crime all over."

Many of the local old people gather in the La Rio coffee building, and they share their accounts of travail with the owners, Greek-owner Nicholas Kourtakis and his English wife, Valerie.

"THE old people complain a lot, but they won't leave," Mrs. Kourtakis said. "They want to stay where they are. Many of them pay very small rents and can't afford to move, and their children, you know, don't wish to be burdened by them."

Mrs. Kourtakis said that among frequent visitors to the coffee shop is an old woman she knows only as Margaret.

"Margaret is diabetic and going blind in one eye," Mrs. Kourtakis said. "Sometimes she comes here and sits at the counter from 9 in the morning until 6 at night. She's afraid to stay in her apartment, and she has no place else to go. My husband, Nick, keeps her rent money for her here in the shop, and the postman pays it to her landlord. It's really weird."

The elderly in the neighborhood are so frightened by the prospect of retaliation that they frequently refuse to reveal their names. At the counter in Nick's shop, a woman in a blue crocheted tam who appears to be in her 60s, explained, "I can't give my name because I get checks in the mail. The dope dealers around her watch people coming and going and steal from your mailbox."

"People around here say, 'Don't ever buy nothing new, because they'll come and take it.'"

Nearby at the counter was a black woman in her 80s named Mabel. "I've been mugged and beaten and robbed," she said. "They hit me with my cane. Last night, they

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose, a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret. You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitives in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Do not give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

came and tried to break down my door, but I told them I had lye waiting for them and that scared them off." Mabel, who has lived in the neighborhood since 1917, spun a litany of tragedy and spoke of once "lying in the street with my wounds bleeding like faucets."

Said Detective Moore, "Old people exaggerate, to a certain degree. Their imaginations run away with them. But in doing that, they illustrate the fear that's out there."

That is the fear the Kabels must have felt on Oct. 6, when they took the bedspreads from their beds and laid them on the floor. On the beds they placed the wardrobes they had chosen for their funeral service — a green wool skirt and white silk blouse for Emma Kabel, a blue suit, white shirt and red tie for Hans Kabel.

A deeply attached couple, the Kabels had spent most of their time together since Hans retired more than a decade ago from his job in a Connecticut factory that made meatslicing machines. Sometimes they invited friends to dinner, but mostly they stayed to themselves. Officials said they had no children. Their home was a haven, and the outside world rarely intruded — until last month. They had no television set. Until last year, they had no telephone.

They lay down on the bedspreads, slashed their wrists and waited to die. The wounds were not deep enough. Carefully, they gathered the bedspreads, stained with their blood, and placed them neatly in the bathtub.

The Kabels then took two lengths of rope. Mrs. Kabel tied her rope to the kitchen door knob. Her husband tied his to the doorknob of a spare bedroom. They looped the ropes around their necks, stood as far away from the doors as the ropes allowed and fell backward to the floor, strangling themselves.

So prevalent is the fear of crime in the South Bronx that many elderly residents are convinced that the Kabels did not kill themselves, but were forced to write a suicide

Beaten baby boy fighting for life

STOCKTON (AP) — A 22-month-old baby underwent two hours of brain surgery and was fighting for his life Saturday night while his foster mother was in jail, charged with child beating.

Doctors at a Stockton hospital said Christopher Mehrer was in "very critical" condition and they were not optimistic about his chance of survival. The foster mother, Linda Stewart, 28, told police the baby had been cutting teeth recently and wouldn't stop crying. She told officers that the baby would not do anything she told him and she thought he needed disciplining. Officers say Mrs. Stewart said she struck the child with her hand.

Reform of grand jury system pressed

EDITOR'S NOTE — Do grand juries further justice or hinder it? Many people believe the latter and now Congress is being urged to reform the system.

By MARGARET GENTRY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Take 23 ordinary citizens, give them extraordinary powers and call them a grand jury. Put them under the direction of a prosecutor determined to convict criminals, and shroud the whole operation in secrecy.

To Jill Raymond and others like her, that's the formula for an outrageous abuse of the innocent, and equation that allows the government to trample on the rights of its citizens.

But to Richard Thornburgh, a federal prosecutor, and others who think as he does, the grand jury system is a fair and effective way of breaking down the criminal conspiracies that conceal fraud, corruption, murder and all manner of Mafia evils.

Ms. Raymond is among 50 people who have gone to jail since 1970 for refusing to answer a federal grand jury's question.

DOZENS of others have been threatened with jail for not wanting to answer. Their experiences have fueled a debate over reform of the grand jury system, and now Congress is giving serious consideration to the issue.

The reform movement involves only the 94 federal grand juries. There are state juries, too, but they operate under different regulations, some of them less stringent than the federal system.

A few states, however, are experimenting with various ways to diminish the duties of local grand juries. Some, for example, allow certain criminal charges to be filed before magistrates, rather than being brought before grand juries.

Critics of the federal system point to the case of Ms. Raymond, in her early 20s, who never committed a crime, but was imprisoned in March 1975 and stayed in jail for nearly 14 months. She had refused to testify before a grand jury investigating the whereabouts of two anti-Vietnam war activists, Katherine Ann Power and Susan Saxe, both fugitives wanted on bank robbery charges. Ms. Saxe later was arrested.

AND there's the case of Joanna Le Deaux, who was jailed in October 1975 for eight months of her pregnancy after refusing to testify before a grand jury investigating the murder of two FBI agents on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota. She was released only after giving birth to a son in prison.

There was no trial for these two women, no chance to tell their side of the story, no opportunity to allow an impartial jury to decide whether they should be jailed or should go free. They were simply brought before a judge who declared them in contempt of court and ordered them to prison.

Is this fair, "Absolutely," replies Thornburgh, who is assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division.

"There has to be some sanction for flouting a court order," he said. "If a judge makes an order, there has to be some sanction for violating it, or the whole system falls apart. The courts have long held that they have a right to every man's evidence. That is firmly established in the law."

Thornburgh argues that various reform proposals pending before House and Senate Judiciary subcommittees would strip grand juries of their effectiveness. Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi attacked all of the major proposals in testimony before a House subcommittee last June.

But the Coalition to End Grand Jury Abuse has marshaled the support of a score of civil rights and civil liberties organizations to push for procedural changes in the federal grand jury system.

In general, the reform bills introduced in both houses of Congress would give grand jury witnesses many of the rights already provided for defendants in criminal trials and would limit the government's power to compel grand jury testimony.

The grand jury system goes back to 1166, when England's King Henry II ordered periodic gatherings of a group of citizens from each village who swore to tell what they knew of crimes in the vicinity.

The institution survived through the centuries and crossed the Atlantic with the early settlers. When the Founding Fathers wrote the Bill of Rights, they required in the Fifth Amendment that "no person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous, crime

GRAND JURIES

The same amendment provided that "no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

As the federal system presently works, prosecutors must take all felony cases before a grand jury that reviews the evidence, questions witnesses and decides whether or not to return an indictment. If the grand jury indicts, the case proceeds to trial. If there is no indictment, the case ends.

Witnesses called before the grand jury may refuse to testify on the ground that their answers might tend to incriminate them — the Fifth Amendment. But Congress, with the approval of the Supreme Court, developed a way to circumvent the Fifth Amendment.

Upon request from a prosecutor, a federal judge may grant a witness immunity from criminal charges for any testimony he might give the grand jury. The witness then is compelled to testify, whether he wants the immunity or not. If he continues to refuse, the court may find him in contempt and order him imprisoned for the life of the grand jury. That's a maximum of 18 months.

Grand jury critics argue that the system could force recalcitrant witnesses behind bars for their entire lives. When they're released after the 18-month term of one grand jury, they could be summoned before a new grand jury and again jailed for 18 months for refusing to testify. The cycle could be repeated again and again.

In fact, that hasn't happened. Sam Pizzigati, spokesman for the Coalition to End Grand Jury Abuse, says Ms. Raymond's 14-month imprisonment is the record.

The immunity provision is a prime target of the reformers, who argue that it can be used to force innocent people to disclose details of their personal lives and political activities. This violates a citizen's right to privacy and freedom of political association, they contend.

Among the reform proposals before Congress is one that would prohibit immunity unless a witness agrees to it.

"That would be disastrous," Thornburgh insisted. "We have to have immunity to break through the stone wall, the code of silence, that we ordinarily encounter in investigating organized crime or other types of conspiracies."

In a recent article for Northwestern University's Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology, Thornburgh wrote that prosecutors have used the immunity procedure "to compel testimony for 'little fish' to convict the 'big fish' in scores of cases involving members of organized crime and racketeering syndicates, as well as corrupt politicians and masterminds of white-collar fraud."

The Coalition and a New York reform group called the Grand Jury Project argue that grand juries and the immunity procedure are being used not to gather evidence against criminals, but to gather intelligence about political movements.

The current reform drive began in protest of the Justice Department's use of grand juries in the early 1970s to question hundreds of persons connected with the anti-war movement. This was during the period when the FBI and Justice were under pressure from the White House to stop bombings and other protest activities attributed to the radical left.

Condemning the practice, Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., told the House, "Scores of witnesses were forced to choose between testifying about their friends, relatives and political associates, or going to jail for contempt of court if they refused to answer."

Several of those recently imprisoned for refusing to testify have been associated with political movements, and the reformers see those cases as evidence of continued government harassment of legal political activity.

Ms. Raymond's case may be the best illustration. She and five other Lexington, Ky., residents associated with the women's rights movement were taken before a grand jury in 1975 after the FBI learned that Susan Saxe and Katherine Power may have lived in Lexington for a while under assumed names.

The reformers saw the imprisonment of Ms. Raymond and others in Lexington, and the related imprisonment of women's rights supporters who refused to testify before a Connecticut grand jury in the same investigation, as a government effort to spy on the women's movement.

SBA probe leads to organized crime

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A tip from a Richmond lawyer sparked the investigation of a Small Business Administration fraud scheme that could lead federal prosecutors to the highest echelons of organized crime, the Richmond News Leader reported Saturday.

In the course of an investigation that lasted several weeks, the News Leader interviewed past and present Justice Department officials who publicly discussed for the first time the origin and implications of a three-year probe of alleged SBA irregularities in the agency's Richmond office.

The News Leader reported: Milton Maddox, who at the time was serving as district legal counsel for the SBA office here, provided the information that got the investigation started.

Maddox ignored the usual SBA channels and showed four "loan packages" that he thought were suspicious to David G. Lowe, then serving as senior assistant U.S. attorney here.

The four loan presentations later proved to be a basic element in a fraud scheme that cost the SBA and various Virginia banks more than $800,000 in 1973 before it was discovered.

Eight persons, including ousted Richmond SBA head Thomas F. Regan, were convicted on charges stemming from their participation in the scheme.

John Dowd of the Justice Department's Strike Force on Organized Crime said investigations here and elsewhere of one man convicted in the fraud scheme, Samuel Ray Calabrese of Los Angeles and Las Vegas, ultimately could reach the "very top" of organized crime's financial empire.

Calabrese, who has known Mafia ties, received a five-year prison sentence in connection with the fraud scheme and is to be tried in federal court here on a related perjury charge Dec. 13.

Dowd said at this point that he didn't expect Calabrese to follow the lead of other fraud scheme participants and cooperate with federal prosecutors.

He described Calabrese as the "architect" of the fraud scheme and said the continuing investigations relating to him could provide a better chance at the rare opportunity of prosecuting people higher up in the organized crime hierarchy.

WORLD'S tallest self-supporting structure, the 1,815-foot Canadian National Tower, dwarfs Toronto's new skyscraping skyline. Shown here before completion of reflecting pool at the base and pedestrian bridge from downtown area, the tower is both communications facility and tourist attraction. Seven-level Sky Pod at the 1,200-foot level contains broadcasting studios, two observation platforms and a revolving restaurant. Eagle's Nest observation area 300 feet above the Sky Pod affords a 100-mile view in all directions, including Niagara Falls and Buffalo, New York, on the south side of Lake Ontario.

TOMORROW'S CITY TODAY

Weekend in Toronto

By HERB SHANNON
I.P.T. Travel Editor

TORONTO, Canada — Twice earlier this year and at least half a dozen times in the five years since last visiting this dynamic city, I have flown into its international airport to change planes to eastern Canada or continue a flight home from Europe. Each time I failed to recognize any kind of familiar landmark from the air.

Higrise hotels and office buildings proliferated around those I knew; the urban area seemed to spread farther to the horizon, and a phenomenon out of science fiction rose like a spear from the Lake Ontario waterfront to threaten impalement of the aircraft I was riding in.

In 1971, Toronto was assimilating a flood post-war immigration from Europe and optimistically looking forward to a population of two million by the end of the century. Even then it was beginning to offer the excitement and cultural advantages of big city life without the unpleasant side effects of urbanization. Its former Dullsville reputation was extinguished, reversing the Torontonians' tourist tide escaping to Detroit, Chicago and New York.

Jubilee calendar

With our Bicentennial celebration of independence from Britain drawing to a close, the British want us to know about their upcoming Queen Elizabeth II Silver Jubilee year.

To mark the 25th anniversary of the current monarch's reign, they have issued a special 1977 edition of the annual Royal Britain Calendar.

The theme of the 12-page, 13 1/2 by 12-inch calendar is the Royal Family, with full-color photos of the Queen and the pageantry of her career since the coronation in Westminster Abbey in 1952.

Other monthly illustrations include scenic city and countryside views in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and England.

The Silver Jubilee calendar is available by mail order from British Gifts, P.O. Box 28558, Los Angeles, Calif. 90026. Suitable for Anglophile Christmas giving, the 1977 calendar is priced at $4.50, including handling and postage.

TODAY, the metropolis is edging toward three million; its clutch of modest skyscrapers around Dominion Square is surrounded by taller structures; the plaza fronting the twin clamshell towers of the new City Hall has become a recreational center, the imagination-staggering CN (Canadian National) Tower has become a landmark reality, and the suburbs are studded with residential highrise developments blending into forested parks.

All this has been accomplished without visible evidence of growing pains. Giant construction cranes still stalk the city, but civic planners three years ago balked the builders of concrete canyons with a 45-foot height limit rule in the remaining downtown area. Public transportation works and there is no spray paint graffiti on subway trains or the walls of the sparkling stations.

THE TIME seemed ripe this month for a revisitation to see Toronto from the ground again. The easiest part was getting from here to there. American Airlines flies to Toronto five times daily from Los Angeles, including one nonstop and a Long Beach-built DC10 jumbo jet in the four connecting flights through Chicago.

The only question was whether my wife and I could savor the full flavor of the city in a weekend. No way, obviously. But it is possible to sample an amazing variety of its attractions between Friday evening and noon Sunday. We managed to squeeze almost all of the following into Saturday, without breathing hard at any point.

Friday night, after dinner in the continental-style dining room in a corner of the enormous lobby of Western International's new Hotel Toronto, we strolled the shopping avenues of the central city neighborhood until nearly midnight. As in 1971, we were not alone.

Throngs filled every block of the inner city, with no diminishment in numbers as the hours grew later. It would be foolish to say Toronto has no crime, but the popular American sport of mugging has yet to catch on here.

A LEISURELY start Saturday put us in viewing range of the skaters in the City Hall plaza rink, which in summer is a public pool. We walked two blocks back to the hotel to the subway and caught a train north to the Royal Ontario Museum, where a special exhibition of pre-Columbian gold artifacts from Peru will continue to attract visitors through November 21.

We finished lunch in a second-floor arcade overlooking a courtyard sheltering a huge maple tree in time to cross the street and catch a Gray Line sightseeing bus, always the best way to become acquainted or reacquainted with a city. The three-hour tour covered Chinatown, the huge University campus, other main points of the city, garden-like parks and several exclusive suburbs.

FOR MOST of the time we were never out of sight of the CN Tower, standing like a sentinel on the horizon. Stretching 1,815 feet to the needle tip of its television mast, the tower supports open-air and closed observation platforms and a revolving restaurant in a pod at the 1,200-foot level.

Explaining that Tower restaurant reservations need to be made months in advance, the bus driver dropped us off near the pedestrian bridge to the tourist attraction. One look at the line at the gates to the elevators told us we should have staked out a claim last February.

FORTUNATELY, we did have reservations at Lord Stanley's, a no-nonsense Medieval Feast restaurant at 26 Lombard St. No folderol, no speechmaking, no crude table and bench, no ceremony, no sickening sweet mead. Also no fork or spoon, but you do get California wine with the meal.

For the standard price of $7.95, you get a bib around your neck, a bowl of delicious soup and a slab of home-made bread to dip in it, followed by a huge wooden platter heaped with chicken, spare ribs, kebabs on skewers, onion rings, breaded mushrooms, corn on the cob, crisp bite-size potatoes, grapes, nuts and other surprises.

If you can finish all of that, host Marvin Greenberg will try to talk you into a piece of cheesecake, made by his wife, Annette. Don't turn it down.

Hawaiian arts at Ala Moana

Today's visitors to the Sandwich Isles are fascinated by the familial Hawaiian arts of the past two centuries.

Their interests range from the fragrance and beauty of the traditional flower lei to the exquisite and increasingly valuable hand-stitchery of the Hawaiian quilt.

The Ala Moana Hotel in Honolulu has led guests into a renaissance of arts and crafts so well known to Hawaii's kupunas (ancestors) and visitors of every age group, mostly female, find a joyous time (manawa hoo hauoli) in trying their own hands or hips in "the old Hawaiian way."

A full spectrum of Hawaiiana is offered at the Ala Moana under the guidance of Napua Stevens, director of guest activities.

In the main lobby of the hotel, Hawaiian quilting is taught on Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 1 p.m.; hula lessons at 2 p.m.; lei making on Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p.m., and lauhala weaving at 2 p.m.

THE REGAL lady behind this beehive of artistic activity is in fact a queen — Napua Stevens was the Queen of Pa'u Riders (in which stately Hawaiian beauties in gorgeous, flowing, Hawaiian divided-skirt gowns of velvet or satin, ride spirited Hawaiian horses) for the 1973 Kamehameha Parade.

Born in Hawi, Kohala, on the Big Island of Hawaii, Napua believes that visitors should feel they are part of Hawaii and learn by doing. At the Ala Moana Hotel guest activities are really active and really Hawaiian.

Her book on Hawaii's heirloom quilts "The Hawaiian Quilt" was published in 1971 and is in its second printing. She teaches Hawaiian, lectures in classes and appears on educational television. It's probable she will continue to do all of these things as well as handle guest activities at the Hotel.

The Ala Moana is one of the Americana Hotels operated in the Pacific by American Airlines. Others include the Chosun, in Seoul, Korea, and the Pago Pago Americana in American Samoa.

Fly Mexicana to Mexico. We're the best thing going.

Sunny islands with no income tax

San Francisco

Dirk Brink keeps an eye on the Far East for me: "The coming tourist islands are the Maldives, two hours by air from south India. Twelve hundred tropical islands.

"Two hundred have people on them. There's no income tax. No death duties. No visas required. There's no crime. No air pollution and the water is good.

"The main island has only 30 automobiles. Less than 100 motorcycles. Hotel room is $15 with three meals. Warm sunny beaches. The people are friendly Indian types.

"They must be Mohammedans. The entry form at the airport wanted to know how my health was and 'Are you bringing in any dead or live pigs?'

BRINK is Far East man for Deak & Co. Except for Zurich, the world's biggest money changers. (Deak offices will move a million dollars through foreign exchanges or sell a tourist $20 worth of travel checks.)

About the Maldives: Write him at Compass Travel, 406 Shell House, Hong Kong.

"The British kept the Republic of Maldives going by renting an island for an air base. Now they've moved out. They left an airport with the most sophisticated equipment.

"Looked like a good place for charter groups. Really new and untouched."

PITY THE poor peso: I phoned a friend in Mexico City who said: "Figure you'll get 25 pesos to the dollar in hotels. So it looks better than when the pesos sold for 12.50 to the dollar.

"But wages are going up — by Government decree. Average will be 20 per cent. Hotels are asking 25 per cent more. Tourist restaurants want 15 to 20 per cent increase.

"About the only thing that hasn't changed is the price of tacos on the street stands. They never saw a dollar bill. The peso looks just like it always did. It's the bankers, not taco dealers, who lose confidence in money."

A COUPLE of bon voyage books for winter cruisers: "Jody" by Jerry Hulse. Warm, loving, dramatic — and non-fiction. Already in Reader's Digest. Definitely headed for best-seller list.

Also for the best-sellers: "The Woman Warrior" by Maxine Ting Hong Kingston. American-born girl growing up with her family who brought beliefs, cultures, opinions with them from a small peasant village in China.

"Do you think we should get the new swine flu shots for Europe?"

I don't know whether to get them just to live in the U.S. Since I had regular flu twice overseas — (man, Galway is NO place to be sick!) — I get flu shots every fall.

I don't do much advance medication for travel. I carry aspirin and some Lomotil. If that doesn't do it, I'm a goner anyway.

"Any particularly healthy places you know for vacations?"

I always come back from Hawaii feeling extra good. I do well, too, at 5000 feet elevation — around Guadalajara and Cuernavaca, Mexico. But Mexico City at 7400 feet knocks me out after a week or so.

Erle Stanley Gardner was a desert man. He felt at his best in dry, hot countries. Baja was his favorite. Robinson Jeffers had to live by the sea. A friend of mine with emphysema says he feels best living in the Canary Islands — really more North African than Spanish.

Ten days on a cruise ship should cure you of anything from depression to flat feet. Which is probably why it's the most popular thing in travel now. Estimate is a million or more people will ship out this year.

Cruise ship hazards are sunburn, falling in love, the late, late bar and those enormous midnight buffets. So watch it.

PENNY-WISE TRAVELER

How to read foreign menu and avoid rice

Just like pretty people in postcard pictures, we were basking in the bright white Spanish sunshine in the flower-filled patio of a Majorcan restaurant. Since one of our number was an "old hand" who'd been there before, we agreed to leave the ordering to him.

The wine was flowing freely by the time the first course arrived, a steaming casserole of fish and rice. Naturally, being good, clean-plate gluttons, we wiped it out in minutes.

Then the second course arrived, a steaming casserole of meat and rice. Obviously it wasn't our leader's day. On the other hand, this kind of "Oh get across the point that taxes, tips or both are not, not, not included in the bill.

"Tout compris" means tips, taxes or both are included, and if you don't see those words anywhere, be sure to inquire.

"Plat du jour" translates to "specialty of the day" and is often your best choice. Before ordering any main dish, though, it's wise to determine if it's "garni," accompanied by salad or vegetables. If it's not, chances are the waiter will say something in question form like "Rice?" or "Potatoes?" and if you indicate you'd like it, you'll get it — as an extra.

COFFEE OR tea will be brought after the meal unless, when you order, you specify that you want them at the same time. Outside of North America it's generally expected that you'll drink wine, beer or mineral water with your meal. If you want cola or milk, you'll shock the average Continental waiter, but elsewhere they're more understanding.

"Pour Partager" is the French way of asking to have one dish split and served to two people. Its equivalent appears in other languages the world over and is one of the most saving phrases to know.

It not only magically reduces the size of your tab, but is the only reasonable way to handle dining in countries like Brazil, where one order of anything could easily satisfy five starving people.

Someday maybe there'll be an equally easy way for single travelers to order half portions, but don't hold your breath waiting for it.

dear!" development is likely to happen at least once to every traveler who has to deal with a foreign menu.

So, how do you safeguard your stomach and budget and work your way around this particular tourist trap?

IF YOU'RE smart, you do a crash course in "menu hurdling," boning up on how to order without fear of anything or anyone. Hotels and restaurants on credit-card lists generally use bills of fare printed in the local language plus English or have someone around who can translate for you.

However, there are two other things you should know. One is that there's good and usually cheaper eating in restaurants off the tourist circuit, where translations are not available. The other is that translations are often inaccurate or inadequate.

Fortunately, there is a system you can use to counter the worst possible problems. The first step consists of learning all the bad words, the ones for all the foods you wouldn't touch with a 10-foot fork.

THERE ARE other steps necessary, however, since sometimes the things you dislike most are attractively disguised to break through such a limited defense. Liver, for instance, can easily be slipped to you hidden behind a good-sounding something like "mixed-grill."

This is the kind of challenge you prepare for by running down to the library and asking for a cookbook with recipes from the country of your choice. Cookbook reading serves two purposes. You learn to spot dangerous dishes and, as a bonus, discover "sleepers," specialties you could learn to love.

There is, for instance, a Greek "caviar" made of eggplant mashed up with lemon juice and garlic that spicy-food fans go bananas over.

While you're at the library, look up the Los Angeles address of your destination country's national tourist office, and write asking for any brochures they have on food and restaurant customs. The French, for one, will send you plenty.

THEN, EVEN if you're not going to France, acquaint yourself with some key French restaurant phrases. Certain of them are borrowed from time to time by the restaurants of other nations and, if you understand the French, you'll be alert and ready for other countries' equivalents.

"Couvert," for instance, is "cover charge," the amount you will have added to your bill merely for giving the restaurant the pleasure of serving you. In some places, the "couvert" includes the bread that is automatically placed on your table, but often that's extra as well. (If you don't eat it, point it out at check time and it will generally be removed from the bill. Butter is often not served unless you ask for it — in which case, prepare to pay more.)

To order the "menu" in French means you want the restaurant's set meal. If what you really want is the list of what's available, you need to ask for "carte." If you see the words "prix fixe" on the "carte," they usually indicate the presence of a "menu" meal. It may even be offered with a number of choices, and it will probably be cheaper than ordering individual dishes a la carte.

"EN SUS" means there's an extra charge for whatever it is that's listed in front of these words, and "S.G." means the price depends on the weight and current market price — so to be sure of what you're getting into, ask.

"Non compris" is another way of saying that whatever it is is also extra, but it's most often used to

GAL-IVANTING

It's so chic, this must be the Place

PARIS, France — If you ever have coveted a custom made no-bra, Char-mis at 7 Place de la Madeleine in Paris is the place to get it. During our interview, Madame Belin, the manageress who herself generously supports the natural look, assured me that a custom made no-bra is as good as no bra at all. Its spidery lace is handspun by sisters in a French nunnery and looks like no lace at all. Its spaghetti straps are all but invisible. The only tangible evidence that it exists is a beguiling little tassel that flutters at the bra's plunging cleavage.

Ah, the French!

I could hardly wait to place an order until I learned that it would cost $80.

Somewhat, the institutional haute couture designer's boutiques failed to and the Bank of France. He tore down what was constructed and made a new start.

THEN ALONG came Napoleon. In 1805, he razed the unfinished edifice for a second time to set up the Greek Temple we have now, dedicated to his conquering armies. Before its completion, however, Louis XVIII had ascended to the throne and proclaimed the new building a church. The final threat occurred in 1842 when the Madeleine very nearly was turned into Paris' first railway station. With that fate averted, it today provides a setting for Paris' most fashionable church weddings.

The Madeleine's dignified, windowless pavilion stands on a platform 28 steps above ground, surrounded by a series of Corinthian columns. Ladies corseted by Madam Belin across the street and aristocratic white-haired gentlemen find its steps as pleasant a place to rest on a sunny day as do students in flared jeans who study there and the saffron-robed Hare Krishna cultists lunching on cold rice from wooden bowls.

What draws the array of citizenry is the view down Rue Royale. The obelisk of the Place de la Concorde, the Palais Bourbon and the dome of the Invalides a half-mile distant cascade into misty shapes framed by ornate stone walls of 18th century buildings curving around opposite corners. Once private residences, these buildings now house the headquarters for Thomas Cook and the leathery finery of a Cerruti 1881 men's clothing store.

IN SPITE of its historic attraction, merchants around Place de la Madeleine cater more to local Frenchmen than to tourists. Clerks do not speak English, but they understand money, so you can make yourself understood.

Robert Thibier's window is a place to pick up original interior design ideas. While I was there he featured an antique sleigh chair with curly legs, upholstered in poison green velvet and placed as a conversation piece in the shop's entrance hall. Nearby at No. 11 is Au Vase Etrusque. Gifts of classic porcelain, crystal and Sevres ware from this house are among those most prized by the socially prominent brides wed in The Madeleine.

N.Y. Mafia family 'shoots for lasting peace'

By NICHOLAS GAGE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK—The Brooklyn crime "family" of Joseph A. Colombo Sr., torn by factional strife for the past 17 years, is trying to achieve a lasting peace in classic Mafia style—with a few more killings, according to law-enforcement officials and underworld informants.

John Cutrone, a family member and a seasoned veteran of Brooklyn's gangland wars, was killed Oct. 5 in Danny's Luncheonette in Brooklyn by two men who tried to make the murder look like robbery.

The police have found evidence linking the killing of Cutrone with the murder of a close friend, Gennaro Basciano, who was shot twice in the neck last June 16 in Frank's Diner in Brooklyn.

According to informants, the killers have a third victim in mind, an ally of the two murdered men named Sam Zahralbam, who recently has taken to eating his meals in private.

As the killers of Cutrone fled in a 1967 Buick, witnesses made note of its license plate number, 183-CUC. Last June, witnesses had also remembered the license plate number, 506-2KZ, of the 1971 Ford van in which the killers of Basciano escaped.

Both vehicles are registered to the same name, John Valone, with a different address for each vehicle. No one named John Valone lives at either address.

The police also determined that three more vehicles are registered to the same name, which, informants say, does not bode well for Zahralbam.

Cutrone, Basciano and Zahralbam, who is known as Sammy the Syrian, were all members of the Gallo gang led, until two years ago, by Albert Gallo Jr.

Other Mafia families in the city, long tired of the fighting between the Gallos and the Colombos, were upset by this latest outbreak of violence, informants said.

Crime leaders reportedly felt that the shooting was interfering with business and bringing attention to all Mafia activities.

As a result, several respected leaders got together about a year ago and negotiated a broad peace to bring the shooting to an end, the informants said.

Under the terms of the peace, the three defectors from the Gallo gang—Cutrone, Basciano and Zahralbam—were taken in by the Colombo family, the informants said, while Albert Gallo joined Vincent Gigante, one of the leaders of the Vito Genovese family.

Last February, the peace was shattered by two shots fired into a social club on President Street maintained by the remnants of the Gallo group.

In the club at the time were Gallo's father, Albert Gallo Sr., his nephew Stephen, the son of Larry Gallo; Rosario Musico, who runs the club; and Steve Boriello, a young Gallo stalwart who was wounded in the cheek.

Then, on June 16, Basciano was killed at Frank's Diner.

After that, Cutrone received word that the death of Basciano had ended the problem and that he had nothing to fear.

But a few days later Cutrone made the mistake of visiting his favorite luncheonette unarmed. A man walked in and ordered coffee and doughnuts to go. Then a second man entered wearing a ski mask and carrying a machine gun.

Cutrone bolted for the back room, but was followed by the man who had ordered the doughnuts. He shot Cutrone once in the head, then came back into the luncheonette carrying money he had taken from Cutrone in an apparent attempt to make the assassination look like a robbery.

But after discovering that the killers fled in cars belonging to the same group that murdered Basciano, the police have called Cutrone's death a gangland assassination.

Refurbishing of QM going full steam ahead

By RALPH HINMAN
Staff Writer

A damage control crew of city employees is working almost around the clock to salvage whatever is left of the Queen Mary's already sinking image.

If the low-keyed plans work, the Queen may yet right herself as the profitable tourist attraction she was meant to be.

City employees have been pulled from all but the most critical maintenance jobs aboard the Queen to work two and three shifts daily.

By Christmas they should have completed the first of many plans to refurbish the venerable Cunard liner.

Actually, said Marvin M. Wolff,

acting director of the city's ship-keeping Queen Mary Department (QMD), "We would prefer to say nothing at all until our planned changes are complete."

"But, of course, we're delighted to confirm what Mrs. (Councilwoman Eunice) Sato said during the Tuesday council meeting."

Mrs. Sato revealed that Wolff and QMD employees already were making significant changes in the city-owned former luxury liner.

Her remarks came during a discussion about hiring a Los Angeles marketing and creative development agency, the Liljenwall Group, to promote the ship.

"They (QMD) are making the ship come alive," she said.

As an example, Mrs. Sato cited work in progress on the former first-class swimming pool, closed to public view since the early 1970s.

Wolff said that, although the pool-rehabilitation project is of great importance, it is part of a larger overall program.

"Our objective is to make the project interesting to a qualified private investor," he acknowledged.

Water flowed briefly into the pool Thursday as part of the cleanup program, but it was removed a few minutes later.

By Christmas, however, Wolff expects the tank to be filled and on public display as part of an expanded tour of the ship.

Long-range plans call for its use by visitors, perhaps by next summer.

Wolff emphasized that the refurbishing, as now proposed, could be changed or modified by Robert Liljenwall, head of the newly hired development firm.

"It is his responsibility to develop themes and other programs for us, and obviously what the QMD is doing must mesh with his efforts," Wolff said.

Wolff is a U.S. Maritime Academy graduate, former merchant marine officer and once worked as a television newsmen in New York.

He was QMD operations chief up to Oct. 1, when former QMD Director James Lynch, a retired U.S. Navy captain, left the ship to become acting director of Long Beach Airport.

In addition to the pool rehabilitation, other immediate developments to be ready for the Christmas tourist season include:

—Sharks swimming in a tank to be built within the "Living Sea" museum. The museum has often been criticized as being too unchanging and dull.

—Major additions to the tour, including several displays of attractions not yet seen by the public. They include the sickbay, brig, telephone switchboard and gold bullion storage room, among others. As part of this segment, tour routes are being rearranged.

—A Christmas Nativity scene, with live figures and animals, for paying museum visitors during the holiday season.

—Buckingham Palace-style "changing of the guard" hourly on the wharf.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

THE INFAMOUS "Bridge on the River Kwai" still stands. And so does one of its builders, Donald C. Brain of Long Beach, who for three years and seven months staved off death and despair in Japanese prison camps.

An estimated 60,000 British, Dutch, Australian and American prisoners of war contributed their blood, sweat and tears to the building of that bridge. Half of that number didn't survive captivity. They fell to malaria, sunstroke, malnutrition, cholera, dysentery, construction accidents—and brutality of their jailers.

The long agony of Seaman 2nd Class Don Brain began at 33 minutes past midnight, March 1, 1942, when the executive officer of the heavy cruiser Houston gave the order to abandon ship. Holed by Japanese torpedoes and 8-inch gunfire, the gallant Houston was mortally wounded. Her skipper, Capt. A. H. Rooks, had been killed by a shrapnel burst, the magazines were flooded, a salvo had smashed the engine room.

MOMENTS BEFORE he died, Capt. Rooks had issued an Abandon Ship order; but the Houston was making too much way for the order to be executed. Now, his ship dead in the water, the executive officer, Cmdr. David Roberts, repeated the order. In a matter of seconds, Don Brain and his shipmates were in the boiling, oil-choked, wreckage-strewn waters of the Sunda Strait off Java.

For 36 hours, Don Brain swam, dodging Japanese searchlights, huddling his strength while trying to zero in on a landfall. Finally, he was ashore, bone-tired, lost but at last free of the cruel sea.

His freedom was short-lived. The Japanese militia, puppets of the Japanese, found him and turned him over to their masters. Next thing Don-Brain knew he was making five-gallon cans as a prisoner of war in a factory and helping to dismantle an oil refinery.

"The Japanese transferred the technicians among us to their home islands. I was shipped off to Burma. It could have been worse. My father had worked in the oil fields of Burma on contract, and I knew the land, spoke and wrote the Burmese language. I'd make it."

AT THE TIME he was taken prisoner, Don Brain weighed 185 pounds, stood just under six feet and looked every inch of the football player he had been at Jordan High School, before dropping out to enlist in the Navy in December 1940. He was tough, streetwise, and he figured he could fend and forage for himself.

In the camps along the River Kwai, he had to be tough and smart. The real prospect of the sweat box, a smash to the forehead with a rifle butt, kicks in the ribs and other sadisms kept a prisoner loose, alert and thinking.

"I learned to hold eye contact with the guards. Eyeball to eyeball they wouldn't hit you. They'd cuss and scream at you, but that was all."

'We are bonded by traditions'

Christian stereotyping of men, women hit

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Christians are not free to be themselves because their churches subscribe to outdated notions concerning human behavior, including the stereotyping of male-female roles, a leader of the American Lutheran Church (ALC) said Saturday in Long Beach.

"We are bonded by traditions, the expectations of others, guilt, inhibition and habit," said Beulah Laursen, regional representative of the national ALC governing board.

Her comments were made in a daylong series of workshops entitled "The Shalom Person: Christian Perspectives on Men's and Women's Issues," held at the Christ Lutheran Church, 6560 Sterns St.

The problem of how to achieve "Shalom"—a Hebrew word for wholeness, peace, health and prosperity—was tackled by nine speakers.

Christians, aware that the church is reinforcing sex roles, are feeling boxed in by those expectations, explained conference organizer Sandy Dager of the Long Beach Lutheran Campus Ministry.

"The church has been contributing to the male-female stereotype too long," she said, calling much of the Bible "sexist writing."

"Language reflects our values, and the Bible leaves out women."

She also said the masculine pronoun is always used in reference to God—"an implication that men are closer to God."

In her keynote address, Mrs. Laursen asserted that the women's liberation movement is essentially a "human struggle," declaring that, "We're in the midst of a tremendous, worldwide sex-role revolution."

It will be resisted by many Christians who find that "there's security in the way things are," she said.

The humanistic movement has helped to disprove longstanding notions that characteristics of men are strength, intelligence and aggression, while women are supposed to be weak, emotional and compliant, she said. "Everybody knows each of us has some of these characteristics."

Jesus Christ was known for his compassionate, gentle and loving disposition—traits that are often considered feminine, she said.

"God created male and female persons with qualities in each," she added. "Thank God we are moving away from accepting the 'boys don't cry' syndrome."

The Rev. David Ellingson, campus minister at Long Beach State University, said most men are "emotionally constipated" because "they are taught to keep feelings inside."

REV. DAVID ELLINGSON

Addressing about 75 persons in the church's main sanctuary, he said that men, to be themselves, need to be free. He encouraged men seeking their own identity to join consciousness-raising groups, a kind of group therapy especially for males.

He said society should give additional emphasis to noncompetitive sports, encourage paternity leaves for fathers, promote "2-to-1 jobs," where two people earn one salary in the same occupation, and support vasectomies for men.

But changes in attitude will be easiest with children, Ellingson said, and he said inroads are already being made.

To illustrate, he read examples of new "non-sexist" literature, the titles including: "Grownups Cry, Too," "Some Things You Can't Do Alone" and "Peter Learns to Crochet."

"The most difficult thing for Christian persons is the ability to say 'no,'" said Marge Wold of Garden Grove, author of "The Shalom Woman."

"We're so used to saying 'yes,'" she elaborated during a workshop on "Couples in Transition," which focused on ways married couples can divide household responsibilities. "But you can't be good to others unless you're good to yourself."

Mrs. Wold said she has five children. Her husband of 34 years is Erling Wold, the pastor of St. Olaf Lutheran Church in Garden Grove. In the past 1½ years they have had a "contract relationship."

"It's a working marriage—a series of negotiated and renegotiated contracts," she explained.

They found that writing down what is expected made for a healthier marriage. "Most people enter into marriage with a set of expectations. There is a tendency not to articulate our feelings to the person we're marrying."

She added: "The great American myth is that marriage is an ego fulfillment. There's no way one individual can totally fulfill another's entire needs."

Lakewood council will consider legalizing bingo

Legalization of bingo games by nonprofit, charitable organizations—an issue that has sparked controversy in several Southland cities since last June—is scheduled for public hearing before the Lakewood City Council Tuesday night.

The proposed city ordinance allowing the games under certain conditions was prepared along the lines of a model law drafted by the Los Angeles County counsel.

Council members also are scheduled at the 7:30 meeting to consider an ordinance detailing the placement, number and size of newsmacks to be allowed on city sidewalks, a report on the Dutch Village Redevelopment Study and a report from the Recreation and Community Services Committee urging the adoption of free recreational swimming one day a week during the summer at the city's three pools.

Cities were given the option of legalizing bingo games by certain nonprofit groups when California voters approved Proposition 9 in the June primary election.

Since then, Anaheim, La Palma, Long Beach and Westminster have approved bingo, in some cases only after protracted discussions and heated arguments.

The Norwalk City Council approved a bingo-legalization ordinance, then repealed it after protests from citizens.

Several other cities have legal-ization ordinances under consideration.

The proposed Lakewood ordinance is similar to those already adopted by neighboring cities and spells out the definition of nonprofit, charitable organizations, the requirements for obtaining a bingo license and rules governing the games.

In accordance with state law, all persons involved in staging and playing the games must be at least 18, there can be no admission charge and all games must be open to the public.

In a memo to the council, City Atty. John Todd explained that the Lakewood ordinance was requested by William J. Crawford, president of the Men's Holy Name Society.

Todd said the city received the county's model ordinance from Sheriff's Capt. Rick Merriek.

Sheriff's officials earlier had asked that cities within their enforcement area adopt the ordinance prepared by the county counsel so deputies would not be confused by varying bingo laws in several cities.

Third bidder in race for Irvine Co.

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

A third bidder Saturday entered the sweepstakes to buy the Irvine Co. ranch and development empire in Orange County, topping two other firms.

A consortium of New York and Detroit investors offered $284 million for the firm, posting cash, notes and stocks to bolster their bid, an informed source said.

The combine is headed by Charles Allen of New York, director of a Wall Street investment firm, and Alfred Taubman, a Detroit investor.

Last week Mobil Oil Corp., which had made an original bid of $201 million in oil stock, increased its bid to $285 million cash to meet an offer of Cadillac Fairview Corp. of Toronto, which had offered $145 million cash and $120 million in notes and securities in its $265-million bid.

The Toronto firm countered with a $269-million offer Friday, and Mobil responded with a $273-million package, it was learned.

The new bid of $284 million was not unexpected, since rumors had become prevalent that at least one and possibly two more bids would be filed for the Irvine prize before a Santa Ana Superior Court decides who should be the buyer.

The marketing of the Irvine Co. was laid before Judge James F. Judge when Joan Irvine Smith, granddaughter of the ranch founder and owner of 21.1 per cent of its stock, challenged the first Mobil bid as inadequate.

Paraplegic to speak of 'comeback'

Joni Eareckson, artist and author from Sykesville, Md., who dived into shallow water nine years ago and became a paraplegic, will introduce her autobiography and speak Tuesday in Costa Mesa.

On a nationwide tour, she will make a luncheon stop at the Holiday Inn, 3131 Bristol St. Tickets are available from Maranatha Village, 2400 Sunflower St., Santa Ana.

She had been an "All-American girl" active in many sports until July 30, 1967, when she made the dive that changed her life at the age of 17.

The dive—into Chesapeake Bay in Maryland—paralyzed her from the neck down.

Her book, "Joni," is about her fight to regain a sense of usefulness and her discovery of spiritual faith.

She became an artist, drawing meticulous works with a pen held in her teeth.

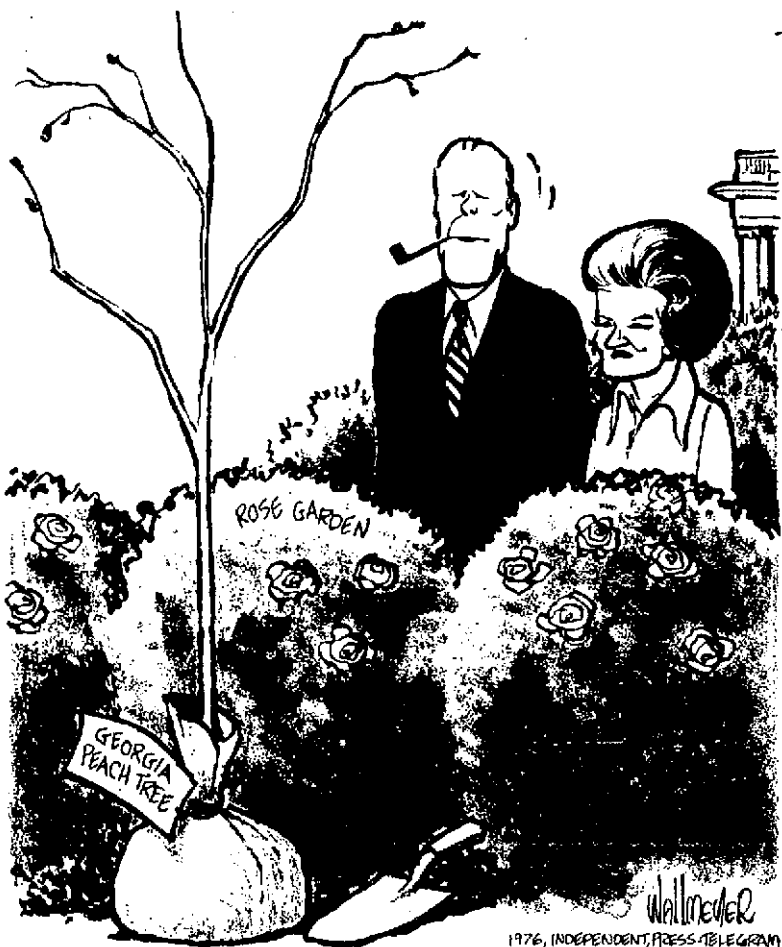

She signs her work "P.T.L."—which means "Praise the Lord."

"WELL, IT LOOKS LIKE THE TRANSITION HAS BEGUN..."

Editorials

To know, or to die

"Consumer Health Education — to Know or to Die" is the title of one of several articles from the Journal of the American Hospital Association, sent to us by Long Beach Community Hospital.

The author of this particular article, Anne R. Somers of the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, said the title "may seem melodramatic, but it is accurate."

An editorial which introduces the special series of articles on consumer health education says "scientific evidence increasingly points to life style and behavior as being directly related to the principal causes of death in this country — heart disease, cancer, stroke and accidents."

"Still, we Americans continue to refuse to follow medical advice, to give up smoking, to eat and drink in moderation and to get enough exercise," the AHA Journal notes.

"THUS, WE stubbornly continue on our headlong rush toward preventable illness and premature death," it continues.

That last paragraph really is the heart of the series. We cannot conquer death. We are all mortal. But we can prevent many diseases and give ourselves a normal, reasonably healthy life-span.

The AHA Journal excerpts were sent to the Independent, Press-Telegram by Janice F. Atzen of Long Beach Community Hospital, who pointed out programs being conducted by the hospital in the field of consumer health education. Similar programs, of course, are offered at other Long Beach hospitals.

In the last few years, for example, Community Hospital has added a diabetic teaching program, a preoperative teaching program with heart surgery patients getting special instruction, a stoma rehabilitation clinic in conjunction with the American Cancer Society, outpatient diabetic classes and a series of rehabilitation forums for stroke patients and their families.

SUCCESS IN consumer health education, however, depends on the individual. Or, as Ms. Atzen puts it, "there is a vital need to arouse the public to their responsibility in health care."

Unfortunately, too many of us "preach it, but don't practice it." Or else we pick up one aspect — jogging, for example — and believe that will assure us of health. To be successful, an individual health program must be well-rounded. It must include exercise, a proper diet, adequate rest, and, especially as one gets older, checkups with a doctor.

"There is an increasing awareness in the health field that the patient must accept responsibility for his or her health to a much greater degree than is currently practiced," Ms. Atzen said.

Much of the benefit of quality medical care provided by physicians and hospitals is lost if the individual ignores medical advice, or refuses to stop habits which are known to cause disease.

Oil and biology

"Environmentalists," like most other people with a cause, often jump to the unwarranted conclusion that no one else has any concern for the ecology — particularly anyone involved in industry.

The four offshore islands which provide sites for several hundred oil wells of Long Beach's tideland field are proof this conclusion is unfounded.

From the start, the design and construction of the Long Beach oil islands were aimed at the smoothest possible interrelationship of the ecology and the economy. Their camouflage — trees and other greenery, waterfalls, geometric shapes and enclosed dericks — has won national awards for environmental treatment.

Now, four surveys by biology students at Long Beach State University reveal that enhancement of the environment by the islands has not been confined to cosmetics.

As part of an LBSU biology

course in invertebrate systematics, students sampled and identified marine invertebrates on the four oil islands. At the conclusion of the surveys, they had identified 237 different species.

Black abalone originally was planted on Island Chaffee, the easternmost of the four, and the survey showed a good population on all four islands. Pink abalone was present on Island Freeman, the outermost island, and each island had an "extensive" population of three to four-inch giant keyhole limpets, the survey report said.

Over all, said Dr. Donald Reish, the class instructor, the Long Beach oil islands are one-third richer biologically than a comparable rocky intertidal area on the mainland.

The point is, protection of the ecology doesn't mean elimination of the economy, and the extremists on both sides should acknowledge this fact.

78 critical days for Carter

WASHINGTON — Much is made by the calendar-worshippers of "The First Hundred Days" or "The First Thousand Days" of a new administration in Washington, but probably more important are the 78 days between the election of a President and his inauguration.

For it is in these 11 weeks that the President-elect must pick the team, set the tone of the new government, establish at least tentative relationships with the White House staff, the Cabinet, and the leaders of the Congress. And these threshold decisions — which must be made even before he takes the oath of office — are likely to determine what happens in his "First Thousand Days" more than anything else.

Maybe this is shoving it too fast, for after a long, hard, close political struggle, the first priority for the survivors is a couple of weeks of rest, and if possible, even of silence. They are visibly bone-tired but there is a problem, several problems coming up between the election and the inauguration that require serious and urgent consultation between the outgoing and the incoming administrations.

BETWEEN NOW and Christmas, we are clearly going to have to face the likelihood of another steep rise in the world price of oil. How to avoid it, if possible, or react to it if it comes, and how to consult between Ford and Carter in the meanwhile?

The strategic arms talks with the Soviets and the fragile peace negotiations in the Middle East can probably be postponed until the new administration is in place at the end of January, but the British financial crisis cannot be finessed much longer, and the Rhodesian peace talks in Geneva are falling apart.

Governor Carter and his aides are well aware of these policy questions, but they have a dilemma. They don't want to be responsible for decisions they can't control and yet they can't be indifferent to decisions about oil prices, Britain, and Rhodesia, which they will have to deal with after they take over the White House.

Also, they don't want to be hurried into choosing Secretaries of State, Treasury,

James Reston

and Defense who can consult with Kissinger, Simon and Rumsfeld. Jack Watson and his staff in Atlanta have made a serious analysis for Governor Carter of the talent available for the main jobs, but the governor has been too preoccupied with the campaign to put his whole mind to selecting his team.

Carter has another problem. He captured his party against the will of many of its political, union, and intellectual leaders, and owes his narrow victory to their exertions in the North. But he doesn't want to be captured by them in the end, or even unduly influenced or controlled by the Democratic Old Boy network in the selection of his principal aides and advisers.

I have the impression that the Carter people are absolutely right in their determination to come to Washington with a fresh team and not with a collection of distinguished has-beens from the past. But also that they may be misjudging and maybe overestimating the problem.

THE DEMOCRATS have been out of power now for eight years, and the main point about the Old Boy Democratic network is that most of them are over the hill. They would be willing to help, and have a lot to give in the short-range period between now and the inauguration, but are not really looking for, and most of them would not accept, long-term jobs which they know to be beyond their energies.

Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, now teaching at the University of Georgia Law School, is a case in point. He is available for consultation. He knows the cards in the old if not the new deck, and he's being consulted. There are many more like him, who can be useful in this critical transition period, but don't want anything for themselves.

It is very awkward now for Governor Carter to consult comfortably with Henry Kissinger, since he made Kissinger a main target of the campaign, but there are many trusted Carter supporters who are trusted by Kissinger, whose main concern now is to avoid unnecessary problems abroad during the transition.

IN THE SHORT run, to assure continuity without confusing responsibility, to get objective help in mastering the facts without committing himself to a Cabinet, Governor Carter has many experienced men at his disposal, including senior civil servants like Gen. Brent Scowcroft, director of the National Security Council staff, who is on the point of retirement.

Actually, the mood in Washington for the transition is not only calm but hopeful. The fevers of the campaign have passed. Even nature, exhausted after the long hot summer, is resting but radiant.

The capital is still ablaze with autumn flowers, Lady Bird Johnson's abiding present to her old neighbors; and from the tidewater between the Potomac and the Rappahannock to the Blue Ridge, the trees are golden red much later than usual.

Everything has been threatened in these turbulent years but nothing has been lost, and Washington is now waiting to hear where the new President is going, and particularly, who's going with him.

Reagan, GOP leader for '80

SACRAMENTO — Now that the 1980 presidential campaigns have begun, some speculation.

If Nancy Reagan had any hopes she and husband Ronnie could start taking it easy on their Santa Barbara ranch, they disappeared with Gerald Ford's defeat by Jimmy Carter.

Republicans across the nation are going to spend the next four years thinking they could have won had Reagan been their candidate and, given the closeness of last Tuesday's outcome, they might be right.

Right or not, it is Ronald Reagan they will turn to for leadership.

In 1980, he will be 69. If his health remains at all close to what it is today, he will be a vigorous 69, fully capable of mounting a full-time campaign and of serving in office for four years after that. There will, after all, be S. I. Hayakawa to remind him that a six-year term can be started at age 70.

EARLY ON IN the 1980 campaign, only one challenger to Reagan appears. That would be John Connally, the born-again Republican from Texas. But Reagan's regulars don't take kindly to anyone not 110 per cent in support of their man, and Connally, laboring under the burden of having once been a Kennedy-Johnson Democrat and therefore already suspect to the Reagan wing of the Republican Party, committed the unpardonable sin of expressing a public preference for Ford just before the GOP convention in Kansas City.

After Reagan and Connally, who? There are some senators whose names crop up from time to time: Howard Baker, Lowell Weicker, Charles Percy, Edward Brooke, Mark Hatfield, Charles Mathias, even, still, Barry Goldwater.

Governors? Carter's success might give present or past governors some hope. Missouri's Christopher Bond was considered a strong possibility for a national role, but the state's voters put an end to that speculation, temporarily at least, last week. Illinois will have a new Republican governor, James Thompson, and he will be examined if only because he had to knock over Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley's choice to get the job.

Michigan's William Milliken, Washington's retiring Dan Evans, Oregon's already retired Tom McCall? They've been open downfield for years, waving their arms and hoping the quarterback will throw them the ball. He, whoever he is, never has.

So, except for Reagan, and perhaps Connally, no tiger jumps out of a list of prominent Republicans. And the Republicans need a tiger.

Of course, four years ago, or two years ago, or even one year ago, Jimmy Carter would not have been identified as the tiger the Democrats needed.

executed; aided by Carter's mistakes, they succeeded in making him the issue rather than Ford's record in office.

They did so, it appears at first glance, through diligent use of two issues. The first was the familiar Republican battle cry. Carter, they said, was a big-spending liberal who would tax and tax and spend and spend and inflate and inflate. In a middle class country whose values have been shaped largely in the Horatio Alger tradition, that is an issue of extraordinary potency, and one which lends itself to the most blatant exaggeration.

The spending issue also helped the Republicans exploit a point first raised by Jimmy Carter himself: trust. Because he had not been previously on the national scene or in Washington, because he was of a suspect breed, a Southern Baptist, and because Carter in the primaries had been more adept than other Democratic possibilities in avoiding the "big-spending liberal" label, the Republicans skillfully pictured him as an unknown quantity and managed to equate that with being untrustworthy. Every presidential candidate, however, is to a great extent an "unknown" before he takes office.

None of this could have brought Ford so close to victory as it did had he not been an incumbent — albeit unelected — President. Manifestly, he was not a spender. Whatever his shortcomings he was not an unknown quantity, hence in the strange logic of this campaign he was not untrustworthy.

So Jimmy Carter, despite his mistakes, didn't "blow it" so much as the Ford campaign nearly won it. Had Carter not been a Southerner able to unite the South in his support, he probably could not have been elected, and his slender victory suggests how closely the country is balanced between the desire for change and reform and the fear that they will take something away from the comfortable.

Tom Wicker

his slender electoral majority; but his election is no less decisive for that, although it remains to be seen whether Carter's narrow margin will inhibit his conduct in office, as happened with Kennedy.

The closeness of the outcome may also tend to confirm the prevailing myth of the 1976 election that Carter "blew" a 30-point lead over Gerald Ford. In fact, no one even remotely familiar with American politics could have believed that Carter ever had such a lead to blow. Polls taken about the time of the Democratic convention were misleading in at least three ways.

At that time, Carter did not even have an opponent, since Ford and Ronald Reagan were still fighting it out for the Republican nomination. Matched against either, the Georgian's theoretical lead was bound to shrink. When his opponent proved to be an incumbent President, the shrinking effect was magnified. Finally, the big leads reported last summer left out of account the fact that there was still a campaign to be waged. Looked at in that more realistic fashion, Carter probably was never more than, say, 10 points ahead of President Ford.

That is, nevertheless, a sizable lead and there's no question but that Ford made spectacular gains throughout the fall to produce such a close election. He and his managers waged a remarkable campaign, brilliantly conceived and almost flawlessly

$1 million for culture

Whether the Bellflower taxpayer likes it or not, he is going to get culture, $1 million worth. The Bellflower City Council has decided to ask the federal government for that much money to renovate the rundown movie house they purchased for $150,000. It was supposed to cost $650,000 to renovate, but suddenly it has been boosted to $1 million. This cultural center will benefit about 3 per cent of the total population of Bellflower, while the rest of the people will be holding the bag.

The City Council likes to brag about no city tax, but a few more boondoggles like this and we will get it in the neck. My property taxes went up 50 per cent, which is no fault of the City Council, but they certainly don't show much fiscal responsibility by their actions. They could have built a building for that amount of money, but since they were stuck with the movie house, that failed, they had to find a way to make up for their mistakes.

I have no doubt we will be stuck with the upkeep of the cultural center, plus how much of the matching funds is anybody's guess.

I hope the taxpayers of Bellflower remember this at the next City Council election. But I don't think there is much hope.

Support Carter

No one can say that Jimmy Carter didn't make it on his own. He went from "Jimmy who?" to being elected president of the United States through his own hard work, determination, and his belief in himself and those around him.

Now that the fight is over and he has won fair and square, he deserves everyone's full support, not just Democrats, but Republicans, independents and everyone else who, at the time, preferred another candidate.

His election is the beginning of a new era in government in this country. Stand behind him and at least give him a chance to prove himself. We may all be surprised to find out just how great he is.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Nov. 7, the 312nd day of 1976. There are 54 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1917, the Bolsheviks overthrew the shortlived Kerensky government in Russia, and Nikolai Lenin became the new head of government.

On this date — In 1859, the Pyrenees were fixed as the boundary between France and Spain, ending a 24-year war.

In 1811, the Shawnee Indians were defeated in the Battle of Tippecanoe in Indiana.

In 1885, the Canadian Pacific Railroad was completed.

In 1942, the Allied invasion of North Africa began in World War II.

In 1944, Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected to an unprecedented fourth term.

In 1956, the British and French proclaimed a cease-fire in the Suez War in Egypt.

Ten years ago: Communist Chinese diplomats walked out of the Bolshevik anniversary celebration in Moscow after hearing Soviet criticism of the Peking government.

Five years ago: Filipinos voted in an off-year election after a campaign in which 130 people had been killed in political violence.

One year ago: India's supreme court reversed Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's conviction on two electoral offenses.

Thought for today: If we all did the things we are capable of doing, we would literally astound ourselves. — Thomas A. Edison, American inventor, 1847-1931.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia named Benjamin Franklin's son-in-law Richard Bache as Postmaster General after Franklin had sailed for France on a diplomatic mission.

Effect of election abroad

ANKARA, Turkey — Although the dull American electoral campaign featured many and often confusing appeals to the so-called ethnic vote, most foreign countries were genuinely indifferent about the results save for a few with very special interests, such as Greece, which figured it might get more support against Turkey from a Democratic than a Republican President.

But this bored attitude abroad is due for an abrupt change before the fresh administration's first year in office ends. For it is perfectly clear that no matter who is chosen to start things off at the State and Defense Departments next January, major shifts in actual policy goals will gradually become identifiable. One may also at least hope that some reform and restructuring of policy methods will be achieved.

Growing interest in third-world relationships that became increasingly marked in Washington from 1973 on will unquestionably have to take a major leap forward. It would be sound for the administration to contemplate the wisdom of Peking's long-term policy of cementing

Chinese relationships with developing nations everywhere.

For much too long a time we have been tardy in that respect. The only things that really woke us up were the energy crisis following the OPEC embargo in 1973 and southern Africa's crisis following the Portuguese empire's dismantling.

Likewise, there is bound to be an increasingly visible moral tone in policy developments — bound to be, because the American people increasingly manifest a desire for it. This must ultimately imply more pressures against excessively dictatorial regimes in Latin America — although the United States is certainly not going to intervene forcibly for or against any ideological credo — and also gradual encouragement to American concerns to reduce their activities in South Africa, unless its pace of racial reform perceptibly mounts.

Benjamin Franklin urged that honesty was the best policy. Morality, it can be argued, or at least an identifiable moral content, is the best foreign policy. Only when this becomes apparent to other nations will our position in the U.N. and our access to reasonably priced raw materials improve.

DEMOCRACY, as we know it, is a dwindling form of government on this crowded earth. If we wish to invigorate the system we so fervently prefer, we must take the lead in facing international problems such as population, food, distribution, cheap financing of poor lands, etc. To date we have talked more than we have acted in these domains.

Finally, it is high time the architects of our defense strategy should reconsider our appalling lag behind the Soviet Union and People's China with respect to passive nuclear defense programs such as mass evacuation plans and anti-fallout shelters.

Ignoring this facet of implicit danger in our contemporary world is stupid — as both Moscow and Peking openly acknowledge by their actions.

One may hope, also, that serious consideration will be given to naming two Cabinet ministers of equal rank to handle our overseas relations: a secretary of state who stays home and tends shop, including congressional relations; and a secretary for foreign affairs who handles the ceaseless negotiations in which we are involved abroad.

IN THAT WAY both our organization and application of policy will be effectively improved. Even Kissinger has expressed himself in favor of this idea.

Of course, the emphasis outlined above may not initially be greeted with enthusiasm by our European allies who have felt for years, primarily because of oil and the Vietnam war, that we tended to ignore them — despite banal speeches and adages.

This area — the sphere of NATO's military planning — is in wobbly condition with a new recession creeping over the horizon and a tendency to doubt American intentions. Moreover, a combination of previous U. S. unilateralism and massive corruption by some of our leading firms has encouraged the Eurocommunism we both fear and condemn — the latter in a provocative, possibly counterproductive way.

One means of helping our friends is by insuring that the next crop of envoys we send — everywhere, but above all to our allies — is experienced, intelligent and professionally competent. All too often in the past we have made the mistake of half-emulating Caligula. That Roman emperor made his horse a consul. We have made too many horses' rear-ends ambassadors.

Tolstoy wants 'the big rubles'

Leo Tolstoy is tired of writing for kopecks. He wants the big rubles.

"So you think you're ready for the big rubles, Leo," says his agent.

Leo Tolstoy says he wants it all. The 250,000-ruble advance. The 1,275,000-ruble paperback sale. The big movie deal. The television sale.

"Such talk is music to my heart," says his agent. "Go home and write me a few hundred words describing your novel."

Leo Tolstoy goes home and writes 250,000 words. His agent cannot wade through it. "Leo, Leo," he groans. "All this talk about Napoleon in somebody's parlor and I can't even keep the names straight. Go home and write letters to John Kenneth Galbraith and Norman Mailer and Philip Roth and ask them to give you some punchy sales lines for the jacket, and maybe I can find a sucker."

Leo Tolstoy writes letters of 100,000 words each to Galbraith, Mailer and Roth. They do not answer. Turgenev and Henry James, however, agree to send jacket blurbs on condition that Leo Tolstoy stop writing them 100,000-word letters.

LEO TOLSTOY shows James's blurb to his agent. It says, "Leo Tolstoy has done it again!" Turgenev's says, "Couldn't put it down!"

Senator Soaper

THE PROBLEM in many towns is that they build pedestrian malls about the week after the last pedestrian moved to Florida.

THE LITTLE BOY down the street resents being silenced at the family dinner table when his life ambition is to grow up to be a consultant.

SAD VOICE in the Bit o' Erin Bar & Grill: "Every time they play those old tunes on the juke box, I realize I'm not nostalgic about anything."

"Leo," says the agent, "I will give it to you from the shoulder. James Turgenev does not sell books."

He tells Leo Tolstoy to forget the book for the time being and write the condensation for The Reader's Digest. The condensation runs to 575,000 words.

"Let's skip the condensation, Leo, and go right to the movie," says his agent. "Once you have written the movie, you can do the condensation of the film and then work backward to the full novel."

At home, Leo Tolstoy writes a great movie. If filmed, it will run for 37 hours, not including intermissions for meals. "Leo," says his agent, "nobody is going to buy a 37-hour movie, a 575,000-word condensation, or a full-length novel that takes a 100,000-word letter to describe."

Leo Tolstoy is depressed. He sees the big rubles eluding him.

"However," says the agent, "if you write the soundtrack music for the movie, it will create a terrific audience, which will then demand that the rest of the movie be made, which will create a huge demand for the condensation of the original novel, which will make everybody want more and have the publishers begging you to write the full-length best-selling novel."

Leo Tolstoy goes home and sits down at the piano. After having a lot of fun learning to play "Chopsticks," he realizes he cannot write music.

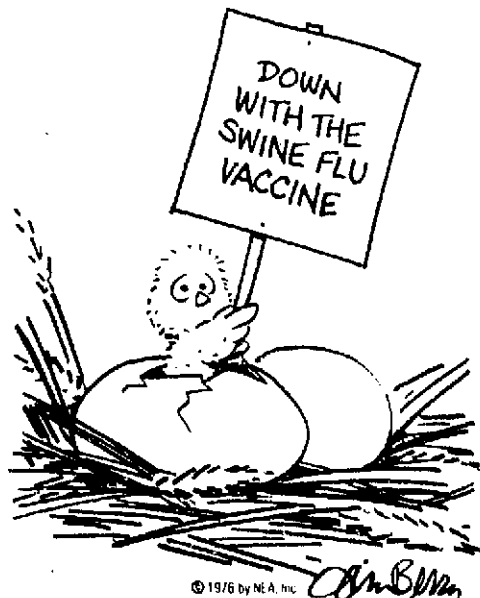

"In that case, Leo," says his agent, "do the comic book first. Then we will hire a composer to write the music for the smash-hit film soon to be made on which the comic book is based, and point out that when the movie is finished it will be based on the full-length best seller soon to be written."

Leo Tolstoy goes home and does the comic book. It is thicker than the Manhattan telephone directory and is very poorly drawn.

"Not to worry," says his agent. "We'll go all the way to the end to start and work backward. Go home and make me a 'War and Peace T-Shirt.'"

Leo Tolstoy sits at home sewing. He sews for days. The T-shirt already covers 14 acres. "Sometimes," thinks Leo Tolstoy, "literature doesn't seem to be my glass of tea." He toys with the idea of chucking it all and looking for the big rubles in the garment trade.

He wants 'something special' for RV Carport 'nice,' but no permit

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

Building a carport for his recreational vehicle to shield it from the view of his neighbors has caused a Garden Grove man a lot of trouble and, apparently, it isn't over.

Frank Mackey decided he should build "something special" for his large recreational vehicle at his home at 11801 Bartlett St. "so it wouldn't be sitting in the street or in the driveway."

So he designed a special shelter for it in front of his garage.

He had it about halfway completed when someone told him he needed a building permit.

To get the permit, he later found out, he needed a variance because it violated the city's sidewalk setback regulations.

"That was eight months ago," he said ruefully.

Last week, following the chain of command, he appeared before the City Council to appeal a ruling of the planning commission.

So far, it hasn't done Mackey any good, although both Mayor J. Tilma Williams and Mayor pro-tem Milton Krieger have agreed to go out to Mackey's house and personally inspect the project before taking final action.

"The mayor came out Thursday," Mackey said Friday, "and he seemed impressed with what I have done."

ALL OF his neighbors, according to Mackey, have expressed admiration for the project.

"The man who lives next door can't see to get out of his driveway when I'm parked in front," he says.

"I've had a lot of favorable comment," he adds. "In fact, a number of people with RVs said they would like to do the same thing."

"Even the mayor was interested in the plans. I told him anybody could have them for nothing if they wanted them."

The carport, as it now stands, consists of a three-foot-high concrete block wall with a framework extending above it with an open roof made of two-by-fours.

"THE LOWER wall is perfectly legal," Mackey says, "but it of course doesn't hide the vehicle at all. So what good is it?"

Mackey plans to put a cross-hatch of redwood lathe over the exterior of the walls and line the inside with green plastic. He also plans to complete the roof, although it won't be visible from the street.

To prepare for the construction he had a tree removed and planted a line of shrubbery in front of the wall.

A handy man with tools, the former criminal investigator for the U.S. Navy, who is now head of labor relations at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard, has practically remodeled his entire house.

HE PUT in the cement for the foundation of the carport and plans to repaint the entire house "whenever this thing is settled."

That may not be for a while, although Councilwoman Kathryn Barr indicated at the last council meeting that she wanted the "problem of recreation vehicles and their parking" settled so that it wouldn't keep coming up again and again.

Mackey is philosophical about it.

"After eight months," he says, "I guess I can wait a little longer."

Swine-flu shots will be given in Downey

Free swine-flu shots will be administered from 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. next Saturday and Sunday at the Stonewood Shopping Center near Firestone and Lakewood boulevards in Downey.

Those 60 and over will receive bivalent A-Victoria and swine-flu shots, and those under 60 will receive monovalent A swine-flu shots.

Precautions to be kept in mind, health officials say, are:

— Children under 3 should not receive flu vaccine.

— People with a known allergy to eggs should receive the vaccine only under special medical supervision.

— Anyone with a fever should not be given the vaccine.

— Anyone who has received another type of vaccine in the past 14 days should consult a physician before taking the swine-flu vaccine.

Two sought in shooting death

Inglewood police said Saturday that they were seeking two men in the shooting death of a Los Angeles woman found in her parked car behind an Inglewood cocktail lounge.

Detectives said the victim, Hermadine Andrews, 48, was found at 11:05 p.m. Friday by patrolmen investigating a report of shots fired behind the Diamond Head Lounge, 3100 W. Century Blvd.

Detectives said the victim, pronounced dead at the scene, had been shot in the back. Robbery may have been a motive, police said.

Larger bid on Irvine

After weeks spent in examining the Mobil and Cadillac bids, the judge was about to decide — apparently for the Toronto firm, since both Mrs. Smith and the Irvine Foundation, which owns 54 per cent of company stock, approved that offer. But the court was unexpectedly given notice of Mobil's new bid of $265 million cash, and foundation directors asked time to study the offer.

Court was recessed until Monday at 9:30 a.m., when the Allen-Taubman bid will be given the court — probably with recommendations from the foundation trustees and Mrs. Smith.

However, Mrs. Smith said she believes that still higher offers will be filed.

An Irvine-based firm, El Taco Inc., has expressed interest in purchasing the acreage for a fast-food restaurant. But Hawaiian Gardens has put Long Beach on notice that it will formally object to the sale.

Solar-energy system will be used in O.C. school

A relatively new school in the Irvine Unified School District will be fitted with a prototype solar heating, lighting and air-conditioning system costing $300,000.

It will be the first in Orange County.

Admittedly it will not be profitable, school officials say, because its anticipated savings in electricity and gas won't amortize the cost for 42 years — if then.

BUT, school officials said, they hope the system will cut in half the annual fuel cost for El Camino Real Elementary School, built three years ago at 4782 Karen Ana Lane, Mission Viejo.

To finance the experiment, the district pledged $38,000 and received the remainder from the federal and state governments. The system will be installed by next March, officials said.

Kenneth Smith of McCaughey and Smith

Energy Associates, Tustin, said his firm designed the system to both heat and cool the school.

Solar panels fitted with rows of specially treated glass tubings are expected to heat water — also specially treated — to 210 degrees on sunshine-blessed days.

THIS super-heated water will be pumped into differing coils for hot and cold days.

On days when there is little sunshine, the school will use its regular electric and gas services.

It is likely that such standby power will be needed when the school is used at night, because storage panels may not be able to retain sufficient heated water for conversion into energy, Smith explained.

The installation will be open for inspection, school officials said.

O.C.'s planners 'often confused'

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

There is so much confusion at meetings of the Orange County Planning Commission that members sometimes have difficulty following what is going on, according to a report by County Administrative Officer Robert E. Thomas.

In addition, according to the report, what the Board of Supervisors thinks the planning commission means isn't always what the commission intends.

THE FULL report will be submitted Tuesday to the Board of Supervisors.

The board ordered Thomas to look into complaints by some planning commissioners that their reports to supervisors are not true expressions of their opinions or of the commission's actions.

Thomas is expected to tell supervisors that much of the problem is caused by the "chaotic atmosphere of commission meetings" and inadequate support from the Environmental Management Agency.

In the report, he notes there is "a casual atmosphere" at the commission sessions with "staff milling around behind the commission."

COMMISSIONERS complained, he said, that meetings "are seemingly confused and with little direction."

Some commissioners conceded that discussions are "complex" and sometimes befuddled, he found.

Yet, he said, most commissioners generally agree that the EMA staff makes a serious effort to relay the commissioners' positions to the supervisors on controversial matters.

But, he said, on some occasions such letters "do not seem to convey the exact specific which they recalled."

MOST commissioners now serving, and some who preceded them, "believe that there is no overt or covert attempt by staff to distort the commission's position on issues."

His investigation turned up a response not allied directly with the issue of proper reporting.

He said many commissioners "expressed dismay" that they were given no formal introduction to their jobs after appointment as commissioners, were not told how the commission operates, had no background briefings and were not even told where they could park their cars while attending meetings.

HE suggested the meetings should be "more efficient" and that staff members must meet deadlines for preparation of materials for commission consideration.

And, he suggested, commissioners should have a chance to review staff-prepared letters to the supervisors before they are sent out.

YANK RETELLS RIVER KWAI TERROR HERE

The guards' behavior varied. The ordinary Japanese soldier wasn't bad, but the Koreans they brought in as guards were mean and ugly and vicious. So were the Japanese military police.

FUNNY THINGS happened, like the Aussies who'd pelt their guards with four-letter words, smiling politely all the while. They thought the language barrier made them safe, and it did until the day they took on a young Japanese lieutenant, a graduate of Oregon State. His English was impeccable.

"Why pick on me?" he asked the Aussies. "I can't get back to the states, either."

In a sense, the lieutenant was a prisoner of war, enduring as was Don Brain.

The prisoners suffered, and their captors suffered along with them. There was never enough food or medicine for either conqueror or conquered. Malaria, dysentery, beri beri and jungle rot were nonpartisan in the war. Loneliness and despair were neutral, too.

Don Brain kept free of despair. "I psyched myself up. I vowed to stand and survive whatever the prison camp threw at me."

Don worked the Burma side of the bridge, key to the narrow-gauge line which ran from the Bay of Bengal to Bangkok and Singapore. Japan's sea lanes were choked off; she was being elbowed out of the skies by growing Allied air power. The bridge was life or death to Japan and to the prisoners who built the span.

CAPTIVITY GROUND ONNo end in sight. Brain's parents in Long Beach finally got a card from him. 24 months after he had been taken prisoner. The card was the only sign of life they had, and it was nebulous.

Don could psyche his mind, but he couldn't do much for his body. His weight dipped below 120 pounds. There were few calories in riceballs, dried fish, yams and melons. "A wedge of pork fat? Man, that was worth a life."

He didn't elaborate.

"We used to cuss hell at Allied bombers. After a raid, the Japanese were more severe with us."

Again, he didn't elaborate.

Some guards amused themselves pulling the wings off bugs. Others found fun in beating prisoners for real or imagined infractions. An American Marine, who had somehow "liberated" five bottles of Johnny Walker Scotch, was forced to sit in front of the guard-house and drink his loot down to the last drop. It was a new high in atrocities: even the prisoners laughed at that one.

The film, "The Bridge on the River Kwai," caught the life of the camps accurately, but there was no commando raid by William Holden. There was a "Colonel Bogey March," however: "B--- S--- is all the band can play. B--- S--- they play it every day," sang the prisoners.

DELIVERANCE DIDN'T come from William Holden; it came from a U.S. Army technical sergeant parachuted into the camp to take the surrender. The sergeant carried general's insignia with him, primed to pull rank on the colonel commanding if necessary.

It wasn't necessary. Don Brain's war was over. He was going home.

Today, 54-year-old Don Brain operates a trucking company in Wilmington and is commander of Alamitos Bay Post 445.

American Legion. He is not given to telling war stories: he prefers to let the past rest with the dead. This is the first time he has told his story in public, and only because he was asked to.

He doesn't hate. He is at peace with himself and his onetime enemies. Even so, Don Brain did not accept the invitation to attend the recent POW-Japanese reunion on the River Kwai. It was extended by the Japanese civilian engineer who built the bridge.

Don Brain's memory went in his place. It was a very private pilgrimage.

Politics

GOP women's group to elect new officers

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

The Long Beach Council of Republican Women Federated will elect and install its 1977 officers at a Wednesday noon luncheon meeting in the Lafayette Hotel French Room.

Poet Bruce Sievers will be featured in the 1 p.m. program, speaking on "The Beat of a Different Drummer: from Green Beret to Published Poet." The meeting is open to the public.

GOP CONFERENCE

The Southern Division, California Federation of Republican Women, will have a legislative advocacy conference at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the Elks Club, Long Beach.

Featured speakers will be Jackie Harker of Encino, president of the state federation, and Nancy Ehlers, the federation's lobbyist in Sacramento.

Luncheon reservations may be made with Melina Morgan, 3612 Country Club Drive, Lakewood.

34TH GOP

Dr. Barbara Shell Stone will speak on "California Politics for the Future" at the 1 p.m. Wednesday meeting of 34th Congressional District Republican Women Federated in the Women's City Club, 1309 E. Third St., Long Beach. Dr. Stone, a professor at Cal State, Fullerton, has A.B., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from USC.

The public is invited.

TRANSPORT HEARINGS

New policies for the state's long-range transportation plans will be discussed at hearings over the next several weeks. Assemblyman Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach, announced.

One hearing is scheduled for 7 p.m., Nov. 15, in the Waite Intermediate School Auditorium, 12110 E. Walnut St., Norwalk, and one for 7 p.m., Nov. 17 in Room 39, Carnegie Junior High School, 2182 Bonita St., Carson.

Cullen said members of the Business and Transportation Agency task force, which developed the proposed plan, would explain the policies and answer questions. He said these meetings were being held to acquaint people with the new policies before formal public hearings are held.

SEAL BEACH LWY

State and county assessment practices will be discussed at a series of unit meetings of the League of Women Voters of the Huntington Beach-Seal Beach Area, President Sherry Baum announced.

Times and locations of the meetings, open to the public, are available by calling (714) 846-8868.

The league also announced a rummage sale for 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Saturday, in the United Methodist Church hall, 6862 Heil Ave., Huntington Beach.

ATTENTION

Recall of 30-30 Rifle Cartridges and Cases Codes Ending -5289 through -6285

We are recalling certain lots of 30-30 rifle cartridges and empty unprimed 30-30 cases due to a structural weakness that can cause a case head separation. This can result in a jammed rifle and possible injury from escaping gas.

30-30 cartridges and unprimed 30-30 cases being recalled are identified by lot codes with the final four numbers -5289 through -6285. The code appears on the back of each box. Example: 3A-6032.

Boxes have these brand names: Federal, Revelation, Wards or Hiawatha.

If you have boxes with these codes call this toll-free number, 800-328-7525 or write:

Customer Service
Federal Cartridge Corporation
Anoka, Minnesota 55303

This notice is limited to 30-30 cartridges and cases with the lot numbers described.

Bandit shut out of motel

A Long Beach motel manager slammed the door in the face of a would-be bandit who fired two shots Saturday before running away, Long Beach police said.

Stereo stolen

Stereo equipment valued at $1,180 was taken from the home of Shirley Zamora, 1525 Alamitos Ave., by a burglar who broke a bedroom window to enter, Long Beach police said Saturday.

Police said Virgil Thompson, manager of Ho-Hum Motel, 1814 Pine Ave., answered the front door at 4:30 a.m. to find a man brandishing a two-inch revolver.

Thompson said that when he slammed the door, the gunman fired two shots that penetrated the door. Thompson was uninjured.

The bandit was described as a white man in his 30s, 6 feet tall, 200 pounds wearing a blue knit watch cap and a false moustache.

Lung tests scheduled in Long Beach

Free tests to detect emphysema and other lung diseases will be conducted this week at a variety of locations throughout Long Beach.

Sponsored by the Long Beach Lung Association, the tests highlight and emphasize the Southland's participation in a statewide Lung Awareness Week.

The tests will be given at the following locations:

—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday: 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.: Long Beach Lung Association office, 1002 Pacific Ave.

—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday: 9 to 11 a.m., Long Beach City College student center, 4901 E. Carson Ave. The tests will be offered Friday from 9 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m.

—Thursday: 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., State Mutual Savings and Loan Association, 5101 Lakewood Blvd.

Known as pulmonary function tests, the procedures measure the quantity of air exhaled in a single breath for one second.

Financial seminar slated

"You and Your Financial Plan" is the subject of a talk at 8 a.m. Monday by Karen Eisenberg, who will set the theme for a half-day seminar at Cerritos College on Women and Financial Management.

At 9 a.m. participants will select one of six sessions: "How to Design Your Financial Plan"; "Investing Your Future —

Securities, Corporate and Municipal Bonds"; "How to Start Your Own Business and Succeed"; "Credit — How to Use It to Your Advantage"; "Real Estate — What You as a Buyer or Seller Should Know"; and "What Every Woman Should Know About Insurance."

Each of the topics will be repeated at 10 a.m. to let woman attend two of the sessions. The closing session at 11 a.m. will feature attorney Joanne Rocks, speaking on "Trusts, Wills and Estate Planning."

Reservations may be made through the Cerritos College Community Service Office. A $3 fee covers costs of the seminar, plus coffee and doughnuts.

O.C. and state sue makers of hair-removal machine

Orange County and state authorities have charged the manufacturers and promoters of a hair-removal machine called "Depilatron" with false advertising, fraudulent business practices and antitrust violations.

Dist. Atty. Cecil Hicks and Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger jointly filed suit Friday in Santa Ana Superior Court against the Depilatron Corp., beauty shops operated in major department stores by Seligman & Latz Inc. and Dr. Melvin A. Shiffman of Tustin, head of Beautitron Inc.

The civil complaint charges that, although Depilatron and "similar machines" such as Beautitron are represented as "a permanent and painless method of hair removal," they do not work as advertised "because it does nothing more than pull hair out with a tweezer."

The complaint also alleges the defendants conspired to fix a $45-per-hour treatment price in violation of antitrust laws.

The complaint seeks a $2,500 penalty for each unlawful practice determined at trial and restitution for customers "allegedly victimized."

Injunctions asking that the defendants be prohibited from engaging in any unfair or unlawful business practices and from engaging in price fixing also were sought. A hearing to decide whether temporary restraining orders should be issued is pending.

Jobless rate in O.C. lowest in Southland

Orange County's October unemployment rate proved the lowest in Southern California while employment increased to the highest level in the county's history, according to the State Employment Development Department (EDD).

The county's jobless rate dropped to 6.1 per cent of the work force, down from 6.5 per cent in September and far better than the October 1975 jobless rate of 7.7 per cent.

In neighboring Los Angeles County, the unemployment rate was 9 per cent for the second consecutive month. Overall, California's unemployment rate was 9.8 per cent, contrasted to a nationwide average of 7.9 per cent.

Orange County employment increased to 775,300 during October, an improvement of 28,300 jobs over the same month one year ago. Seasonally adjusted rates computed by EDD noted that the return of 5,700 employees to school payrolls, and addition of 2,500 jobholders in construction, contributed heavily to the increased employment figure.

Retirement quarters reported renting fast

Rooms reportedly are renting quickly at Chateau Active Retirement Living, a North Long Beach retirement hotel at 3100 E. Artesia Blvd.

Ronald Weisel, administrator of the chateau, noted that the rate of room rentals is substantially ahead of schedule. "We are very satisfied and somewhat amazed at the large number of rooms we have rented," Weisel said. At this present pace, we plan to reach our capacity in just another few months."

For one monthly amount, from $290 for a semi-private room and from $495 for a private room, residents are provided an accomodating room, three meals a day and snacks, daily maid service, a full recreational program and residence in a fully secure building.

The chateau is associated with the Regency Inns of America Corp., a network of retirement residences.

There are three full-size recreation rooms, a king-size living area, two outdoor terraces and a dining area.

Each room is color coordinated, and the lobby, living area and recreation rooms are complimented with quality furnishings and plants.

Further information may be obtained by calling 428-5371 or 979-9874.

Realtors to hear talk on A-power

8 developments starting this year in Anaheim Hills

Eight new residential neighborhoods, all offering single family homes, will be under way in Anaheim Hills before the end of 1976, according to builder representatives.

Four have opened sales within the past three months while the remaining four are to open soon.

Window Hill, a 145-home development by PCB-Sundial Development Co., has models and sales office on Serrano Avenue east of Nohl Ranch Road.

Sunset Ridge by Oaktree Development Co. is a 57-unit neighborhood at the east end of Serrano Avenue.

Woodcrest Estates, a 71-unit project by Westfield Development Co., is beginning sales in the second and final phase of its neighborhood on Canyon Rim Road, west of Woodcrest II.

The Country, 85 homes by Warmington Development Co., and the 34-unit Shadow Run neighborhood, by the same builder, are continuing sales.

The Country is at Imperial Highway and Nohl Ranch Road; Shadow Run is east of Sunset Ridge on Serrano Avenue.

'Freedom time' cited at Parkview Terrace

Freedom from worry — about lawn care, home maintenance, security from vandals or thieves — and freedom to travel appeals to a broad cross-section of buyers, at C. Robert Langslet & Son's new Parkview Terrace in Long Beach, the developers report.

Michael Engle, vice president for the building firm, said, "Many of our buyers are professional people and people who enjoy travel, and they appreciate being able to just walk out, lock the door, and know their property is being looked after."

The security-oriented condominium community is in prestigious East Long Beach, directly across the street from Recreation Park's 18-hole golf course.

The community's mid-rise building stresses security. The underground parking areas are entered through electronically

Tarbell gets top awards

Tarbell Realtors received two first-place and three second-place awards for advertising excellence at the recent international Realtor RELO (family relocations) convention in Toronto.

Tarbell also received top commendation for family service, having helped 2,000 families relocate in the nation.

The President's Trophy for overall Tarbell sales performance has been awarded to Phyllis Colanino of the La Palma office.

operated garage doors, and a glass-enclosed elevator takes residents to the landscaped inner courtyard and on up to the second and third floors.

"One of the most appealing aspects of our community is the lush landscaping which is totally maintained by professionals through the Homeowners Association," Engle noted.

Priced from $57,900, the homes are available in two bedroom two-bath floor plans. Third-story units include skylights and loft areas.

Take the San Diego Freeway to Lakewood Boulevard exit, proceed south to the traffic circle, and continue south on Pacific Coast Highway to Anaheim Street. Turn right on Anaheim to the sales information center.

The inside story on Parkview Terrace.

You've probably read a lot about Parkview Terrace. Maybe you've seen the beautiful 3½ story mid-rise right across the street from Recreation Park Golf Course. But it's what's inside that counts, and what's inside Parkview Terrace is sensational.

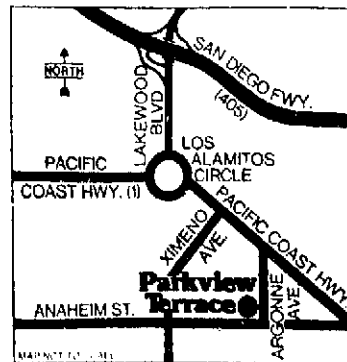

These magnificent two bedroom homes offer a variety of features. Dramatic high ceilings and raised entries. A fireplace and wet bar. A large balcony for sitting or sunning. On the 3rd floor, skylights enhance the beauty of each home. And there's an added loft that makes a delightful den or cozy sitting room.

Kitchen accessories include a double oven and range, a trash compactor and a dishwasher. Bathrooms all have large Roman tubs surrounded by handsome ceramic tile.

Visit Parkview Terrace today and get the inside story yourself. Before the news gets out and the homes are sold out.

Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., has been spilling over with exuberant art this week. creations by students in the 15 junior high schools in Long Beach Unified School District.

Art teachers selected 293 pieces, then spent days narrowing entries to those the museum's galleries will accommodate. That kind of choosing isn't easy; often, it has to be just plain arbitrary, selection dictated by available space, appropriate size and esthetic arrangement. Sherry E. Swan, consultant for fine arts education for the Long Beach schools, has titled the exhibit "Expression of a Special Time — Junior High."

The public is invited to join students and their families today at a reception in the museum from 2 until 4 p.m. Hosts will be Friends of the Museum.

THE COLORFUL show not only reflects expressions of junior high school students' interests, feelings and dreams in any media they can contrive, it also continues the tradition of the museum to foster talents of Long Beach school students, says Jan E. Adlmann, museum director.

Examples of pieces on display are papier mache animals, sandpaper collages, pen and ink drawings, pencil sketches, paintings and a Bicentennial quilt.

Admission is free to this exhibit which will continue through Dec. 5. The museum is open Wednesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m.

Informal parties more fun

By LETITIA BALDRIGE

I recently found a copy of an invitation to one of my parties that I had written as a New York career girl at the age of 26 (a long time ago!). I compared my invitation with one sent by my friend, Lexie, now 26, to her friends earlier this year. The differences between the invitations are marked, to say the least. Mine was written rather self-consciously by hand on a piece of my good, ceru-colored, formal notepaper with matching envelopes. It read:

Tish Baldrige hopes you will come to a small party
Thursday, October 4th
109 East 73rd Street
8 to 11 o'clock

R.S.V.P.

I remember that party, because in spite of the stuffy invitations, I managed to squeeze 30 people into my tiny apartment. I served only Scotch and bourbon, plus an enormous platter of crackers and cheese that was empty 40 minutes after the first guests arrived. We ran out of liquor by 10:30, but an all-night liquor store came to the rescue.

I had a guitarist who played the classical guitar Segovia-style, but who could also accompany us while we sang the hit songs of the day. My having a not-too-clean, hungry, bearded musician from Greenwich Village as the star of our intimate gathering was considered rather daring. I suppose one could say he was a prelude to the hippie folk musicians who were to come into our culture later.

Each guest made his own drink, so my duties as a hostess consisted of emptying ashtrays and answering the doorbell. Everyone went home at midnight (a schoolnight for everyone — work, that is) pleasantly happy, but not inebriated. It was the kind of party everyone quickly forgets, because, except for my would-be Segovia friend from the Village, there was absolutely nothing out of the ordinary.

LEXIE'S INVITATIONS were written by hand, too, but she spoofed the printed fill-ins. She took some regular, 8x11, white bond, executed the master copy and ran off the needed 50 copies on the office copier. Her invitation read:

IT'S A PARTY
WHEN: Saturday, January 10th
WHY: Anti-Depression and Anti-January Blues Gathering
TIME: 8:00 p.m. until???

PLACE: Lexie's, 301 East 78th Street
ATTIRE: Think Thirties
RSVP: 838-6760 (before 5 p.m.) 249-3543 (after 5:30 p.m.)

NOTE: Bathtub gin or its equivalent will be served ... if you are inclined toward other, please BYO.

No Smoke Please

Like mine, her party time meant "eat your own dinners first; don't expect me to feed you." It makes life a lot simpler. But Lexie gave her party a theme, and it intrigued her friends. Some dressed up like gangsters and molls. The group played records from the 30s, and there was a touch of Astaire and Rogers in the air, too, as the gathering danced by the light of subtle, pink light bulbs. The inexpensive "bathtub gin" punch concoction was well-received, and it was also easy on the budget. Very few guests followed the "BYO" routine.

The "No Smoke Please" on the invitation had really perplexed me until Lexie said it meant her party was to be "straight." She was serious in not wanting any kind of drugs to be brought, and no one was to light up a "joint." No one did.

When I think back on my party in another era, this problem of pot had never entered our lives, but I must confess, Lexie's "Think Thirties" party must have been more fun than mine. At 26 she has a lot more imagination than we had. And her friends contributed in many ways, too, including preparing a feast of hors d'oeuvres and goodies they had made at home and brought to the party. The part I like best of all was the "No Smoke" on the invitations. That was telling it like it was going to be. Brava!

Glad you asked that!

Q: I once heard that Clark Gable regretted making "Gone With the Wind." Was this true? — Mrs. Helga Cardo, Richmond, Va.

A: On the contrary. "The only thing that's kept me a big star," Gable once confided to producer David O. Selznick, "has been revivals of 'Gone With the Wind.' Every time the picture is re-released, a whole new group of young moviegoers gets interested in me." (Footnote: The NBC network's two-part TV presentation was expected to play to potentially more people than those who paid to see it in theaters since it was released in 1940. A little-known fact: the original choice to play Rhett Butler was Ronald Colman.)

Q: We just caught up with "Deep Throat," and we're curious. How much did Linda Lovelace's "leading man" get paid for his work in the film? We hear it ran close to $50,000. Is this the truth? — Donald Francis, Detroit.

A: Nothing could be further from the truth. What actor Harry Reems got was $100 for one day's work. The picture made him, but ensuing legal battles have taken it all away again.

TV TALK show host Merv Griffin — perfect posture produces his stiffness.

Q: Does Louise ("Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman") Lasser really smoke cigars? — Ms. Mildred Lurie, Milwaukee.

A: Yes, she once told us. The conversation went something like this: "Would you like a cigar?" "Sure ... This is a good cigar ... I really prefer the cheap ones — and this has that cheap flavor I love! When I am working hard I smoke them a lot out of nervousness and anxiety — they don't irritate my throat as much as cigarettes!" Since Louise was still Mrs. Woody Allen at the time, we wondered if her husband got upset when he came home and found cigar butts in the ashtray. "No," was Ms. Lasser's instantaneous retort, "he knows they're mine!"

Q: Now it comes out that the Mona Lisa had a high cholesterol count. Who figured that one out? — P. Borno, Seattle.

A: Japanese cardiologist Haruo Nakamura, after closely studying Leonardo da Vinci's famous painting. The condition can be clearly seen, claims the doctor, from the yellow in the corner of the left eye of the subject. Louvre experts confirmed that the yellowing was not a discoloration — but part of the original painting.

Q: I've noticed that Merv Griffin always sits, stands and even bows so stiffly it makes you wonder — is it a reaction to nerves, a brace or a corset? — Kate R.R., Raleigh, N.C.

A: Neither. Nor are Merv's nerves responsible. He simply suffers from perfect posture.

Q: I am very active in athletics in school and would like to become a stuntperson when I graduate. My grandfather says it's too dangerous. Is it? How could I get into the business, and would my sex be against me? — Vicki Chapman, Drumore, Pa.

A: If you are athletic and level-headed, your sex is irrelevant.

THE LATE actor Clark Gable as Rhett Butler and Vivian Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara in scene from "Gone With the Wind" — credits movie with fans' loyalty.

PRINCESS Grace of Monaco — Broadway debut as actress long in coming, short lived.

Q: I heard that Grace Kelly was once a Broadway actress. What did she play in? — Mrs. G. Truesdale, Philadelphia.

A: Before she became a movie star, Princess Grace was a famous magazine cover girl in New York. But her burning ambition was the Broadway stage. She read for 40 plays — and was turned down 40 times. She finally landed a role in Strindberg's "The Father" — partly because of her father's longtime friendship with its star, Raymond Massey. This was her only Broadway appearance.

Q: Which do athletes find more difficult — playing baseball or football? — R. L., Omaha.

A: "The most difficult feat in sports," claims authority Leonard Koppett, "is for a batter to take a narrow piece of wood and with it endeavor to hit a small baseball thrown at around 100 miles an hour."

ACTRESS Louise Lasser of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" — knows about cigars.

Las Vegas—new audience for Broadway star

She leaps. She jumps. She slices breakfast melon, knocking over a personally engraved cigarette lighter from Neil Diamond with his autograph in gold. She pours coffee and dances at the same time.

Chita Rivera's movements, even at a ridiculously early morning hour, are big and sassy. I don't know how old she is, but as she prepares for her big nightclub solo at the chic Waldorf's Empire Room, it is obvious that she has swallowed the Fountain of Youth.

On Broadway, she's pow-socko-boom! Now she's spreading out, reaching new audiences, raising her name to its proper place in lights. Theatergoers have applauded Chita Rivera for years in shows like "West Side Story," "Sweet Charity," "Bye Bye Birdie" and "Chicago." Now the rest of the world is getting a look, and the view is sublime.

She just returned from Las Vegas, where she was an opening act for Englebert Humperdinck (the sophisticated Sardi's set is still holding its nose over that one!) and now she's headlining the bill on a cross-country tour that will keep her in Caesars for the next year.

"Listen," she says, directing part of her fabulous Bob Mackie wardrobe toward the ironing board between ringing phones and noisy doorbells that announce more congratulatory telegrams from the legends of show business. "this club act all started when rehearsals for 'Chicago' were halted because of Bob Fosse's heart attack. We were out of work, so I gathered some of the kids together and started working on an act to keep busy. Now it's changed the entire course of my life."

"We got rave reviews in New York, then took the show to Los Angeles and they came out of the woodwork! One night I had Lina Wertmuller, Gina-Carlo Gianinni, Lana Turner and Paul Lynde all in the same room! The act is bringing me new audiences."

"If you're a hard-core theater person from Broadway musicals, there's a large area of the country that never knows who you are unless you're on TV. Those pregnant ladies who stuff nickels in slot machines never get to Broadway. I don't want to just dance for my best friends. I've got enough best friends already."

SHE DIDN'T even mind opening the show for a mediocrity like Humperdinck. "The screaming fans who came to watch his pants rip didn't know what a Chita Rivera was, honey. But they found out. It was a great chance. He was a doll and a gentleman, but his pants were so tight he couldn't move."

"I used to tease him by saying, 'You know, your buns are supposed to move separately!' But it's all show business. I got standing ovations from people from Kansas and Oklahoma who never heard of me in their lives. I was scared to death, too. It's a crazy town. Las Vegas still sounds funny to me."

"After three weeks there, we were putting our faces in chocolate cake. You get desert fever. You get crazy because there's nothing to do, no streets to walk on."

"I got back to New York, and even the doggie-doo smelled good. I did feel like an elephant act, but somebody said to me, 'You're gonna be back in Vegas, honey, and you'll be rolling in money!' I think it was Raquel Welch. That girl is so gorgeous you could crack her face!"

With everything she does, there's the humor that shines through like new sunshine on a foggy moor. She's had to summon it on occasion just to survive the narrow-mindedness of type-casting.

For years, everyone called her a taco or a tamale. Every role for a spitfire or a peasant girl dancing around a campfire would go to the girl with the Latin name.

"After a while you get used to being called a bombshell. Hello. That's not bad. Words like fireworks and explosive aren't bad. That's better than having the critics say 'Here comes Miss Vanilla Pudding again.' I just always figured it was better to keep working. As a creative person, I've got to be creative, or I rot."

"Even between shows, when I wasn't working, I'd go back to ballet class or teach dancing in high schools. I can't be idle. I have too much energy. Even if I choose the wrong thing to do, I've gotta do it."

AND SHE'S CHOSEN some clinkers. Does anybody remember "Zenda" with Alfred Drake? "That one," she roars, "was better than a show called '1491.'"

"John Cullum was Christopher Columbus, and at the end of the show he discovered America with something that looked like the steering wheel from a toy scooter. It had costumes for days, we opened in Pasadena and I played a Spanish Jewess — naturally — a barefoot wench who came in the back door and hissed at the queen."

"My friends said 'Oh Chita, we don't know how to tell you this,' and I said, 'You already have.' It was so terrible I have to laugh when I think of it. It was just one of many Latin hussies I've played."

Half the world thinks she's Cuban; the other half thinks she's from Tijuana. To clear up the mystery, she's a mixture of Puerto Rican and Scottish from Washington, D. C.

Her father was a saxophone player in the Harry James orchestra, and her real name is Dolores Conchita Figueroa del Rivero. "With a name like that on the marquee, you'd have to wear a mantilla and carry a rose in your teeth."

"Ben Bagley made me change my name when I was in the 'Shoestring Revue.' I was mad about Maureen O'Hara, so for three weeks I was Chita O'Hara. Friends would call up, say 'Chita W-h-a-t?' and hang up. It found its way to Chita Rivera. Now I have absolutely no feeling about seeing my name up in lights. It scares the hell outta me."

She lets out a banshee hoot when anyone calls her a star. The word does not exist in her vocabulary. "Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck are stars. They cannot be replaced. I don't even know what a live human star is. I've always been a gypsy, one of the kids in the chorus."

"That's the difference between the Broadway mentality of people like Gwen Verdon and me — dedication, hard work and the development of a craft — and the Hollywood mentality, which is really a job and out of it sometimes comes fame. I couldn't care less about being a movie star."

"I NEVER THOUGHT much about my career. It just sort of happened. I didn't have time to plan it because I was always too busy working. All I ever wanted to do was dance."

"I was trained from the age of 11 to be a ballet dancer, and one day I went to an audition with a friend and ended up in 'Call Me Madam' and Jerome Robbins was the choreographer. That led to other shows, and all the kids cutting their teeth at the same time were people like Sheldon Harnick, Shirley MacLaine, Carolyn Leigh, Dody Goodman, Jerry Herman, Bea Arthur, Artie Johnson, Carol Burnett. I feel so sorry for kids today. They can't possibly have that kind of training. There's no place for dancers to work."

Chita's own daughter, Lisa Mordente, is now a budding musical star herself. Chita and child recently did a flaming version of "America" on the Merv Griffin Show together, and Chita was so excited she could hardly remember her own dance steps.

There's not much show-biz talk at Chita's house. She won't let Lisa play her records. She likes to do it, not talk about it. She does needlepoint, she makes a terrific lasagna, and she eats no meat.

She has been remarkably lucky as a dancer, with relatively few injuries, although she did throw her calf out of joint in "Can-Can" and fell on her knee in "Sweet Charity" and still suffers pain from those old injuries.

"AGE IS THE ENEMY of all dancers. They don't talk about it, but it's there. You cannot dance forever. There comes a time beyond which the muscles don't work."

"My knee injury sometimes swells up like a lump, and it could turn into arthritis, who knows? I can't do 32 fouettes or four pirouettes in a row like I used to. My technique is slipping. But I'm strong and I love what I'm doing. That keeps my muscles in better shape than most people. But I know I can't dance forever, so I'm gradually moving into other areas of acting."

"That old saw about how you don't sing, you dance — or you don't say lines, you dance — well, that's changing. Now you have to be able to do everything. It's sad that when Gwen and I go, there's nobody to take over."

"But I keep my mind clear, young and progressive. That, combined with the right exercise, makes my body move easier. And —" she winks, and you know the and is a big one — "if age does catch up with me, you find me planting zinnias. I'm going to be one Latin bombshell who's gonna be a swinging old lady!"

At that moment...

Against the rest of the week's tribulations — a gangster killing in Los Angeles, floods in Omaha, strikes against the Taft-Hartley law — the stickup at a Howard Johnson's restaurant in Boston rated little attention.

But then, on June 23, 1947, police stop to question a 15-year-old about the holdup, and the youngster, Edward Bancroft, pulls a revolver and starts shooting. He dashes past a school and jabs the gun into the ribs of unsuspecting William Roman, who happens to be 15, too, and forces him to come along.

Using the Roman boy as a shield, young Bancroft darts into an alley and stands off 27 policemen with shotguns and tear gas. He shoots one policeman in the shoulder and peppers squad cars with bullets.

Police seal off both ends of the alley. They try to close in.

"Don't come any nearer or I'll shoot him!" screams young Bancroft, aiming at the Roman boy's back.

Silently, on his stomach, Officer George Toland crawls behind a fence along the alley. As the Bancroft boy eyes the platoon of policemen blocking his ways of escape, Toland stands up, reaches over the fence and stuns him with the butt of a riot gun.

Later, it turned out the boy had nothing to do with the holdup. But he drew two and a half years in the House of Correction for kidnaping and assault.

Frank Cushing of the Boston Traveler flattened himself on a sunporch, overlooking the two boys, and carefully, very carefully, made his picture. "I was wondering if the kid would shoot me. But I wanted that picture."

Pulitzer Prize Winner, 1948

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Got lot in lieu of cash

DEAR MR. SMITH: Four years ago I made a loan to a friend of $1,000. It was not covered by a written agreement. Later, I accepted a vacant lot in payment of the loan. How can I establish my $1,000 cost? — L.I.H.

It is not required that you enclose proof of cost when you report the long-term capital gain from the sale of the property. You should look for anything that might support the facts. Your friend may have given you a receipt for the loan, or you may have copies of correspondence about the loan or property. See if you have a bank statement or other record showing where you withdrew the amount of $1,000 to make the loan. Have all such records available if your tax return is audited.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Upon retiring in 1969, I received approximately a thousand shares of stock from the Profit Sharing Fund. I own this at a very small cost. Recently I sold it to purchase a life

annuity. Do I have to declare the entire long-term capital gain on this year's tax return, or is there some way I can average it out over several years? — R. S. M.

The gain on the sale of the stock is taxable to you in the year sold, notwithstanding that you invested the proceeds in a life annuity. The gain should be reported on Schedule D of Form 1040. You may be able to reduce your tax by income averaging. Obtain Schedule G of Federal Form 1040 right now to make your calculations. If the tax is huge, consider making all possible payments of deductible items, including state income tax, before the end of 1976.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Suppose I buy some acreage for $10, and then pay up all the back taxes of $2,200. Can I deduct this $2,200 for income tax purposes? — W. B. G.

No, you can deduct only the property taxes that accrue after you have acquired the property. The back taxes can be added to your tax basis (cost).

DEAR MR. SMITH: My mother purchased common stock for $2,400. The company was liquidated and she received liquidating dividends, worth $4,900. What is the way to handle this tax-wise? — G. C. S.

Assuming your mother held the stock for more than six months, she reports a long-term capital gain on Schedule D, Form 1040. $4,900 is entered as the sales price, $2,400 as the cost.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I am 69 and my living expenses exceed the $400 per month I receive mostly from Social Security. My only asset is a $60,000 capital loss carryforward. How can I benefit from this prior year loss? — F. B. P.

Selling a low-cost asset for a substantial capital gain is the most obvious way to make use of your capital loss. If you have no such asset, you may be able to think of a relative or close friend who would be willing to make a gift to you of such an asset which you could then sell and offset your loss. If you are, or become, married, filing a joint return would permit you to offset your spouse's capital gains, or to a limited extent, ordinary income, against your loss.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I redeemed growth shares for $8,219 that cost me $6,003 plus 110 shares which had been distributed to my account. Had the funds been deposited in a bank or savings and loan account at prevailing rates, I would have realized approximately $13,338 upon withdrawal — $6,003 principal and $7,335 interest.

Would it be possible to claim a loss of approximately $7,119 on the transaction due to the loss of 15 year's interest? I also cashed in a Keogh Plan paid for me by my employer, a local doctor. I expected to receive at least $5,000 which he had paid into the fund. Instead, I received a check for $2,500 in full settlement from the company. Since I am, in a sense, the injured party, could I properly claim a loss of $2,500? — P. S. S.

Sorry, but no! There is a basic principle involved: no loss is deductible for amounts which have not been expended from tax-paid dollars. Although you don't get a separate, special deduction for the two amounts you lost, you are indirectly getting a deduction. In each case you are reporting a much smaller amount than you expected. That's like getting a deduction. Now, if the receipt of any of those 110 dividend shares were taxable, you can add the taxable amounts to the $6,003 you invested.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice to the Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49801, Tucson, Ariz., 85717, with a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Your identity will not be disclosed.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Guests had to sing for their supper

POST MORTEM on Halloween.

Invitations to a party at the Lakewood Country Club Estates home of Richard and Ruth Hironson requested that party goers come dressed as their favorite song.

Esther and George Albert had everyone guessing the name of the song they represented. With some padding in the stomach, Esther was a slightly pregnant lady and George was her groom. Finally they confessed their song was "It Happened in Monterey."

Bob and Hananah Levine came as clowns in made-by-Hananah costumes. Dr. Dave Eglit won first prize as an Indian chief, complete with war paint. His song was "Indian Love Call."

Maury Symonds was "Cool Hand Luke," Evie Singer was "Second Hand Rose," and Doris Caplan depicted "From Rags To Riches" which is not on my list of remembered tunes. Jack Siomann was the "Candy Man." Now that's one I know.

Bob Levine came as "Happy Birthday" because it really was his birthday.

IF I HAD a calculator I still wouldn't be able to compute one million hours.

This year Memorial Medical Center Auxiliary Volunteers are sporting million hour pins. The pins were awarded to members who have collectively given a million hours of service to patients at the hospital during the past 15 years.

A small group within the larger group holds a record of its own.

They have been lunching together at the hospital every Friday for 15 years. Their combined hours total more than 15,000 (not counting lunch).

This past week they met at the home of Jane Olson to surprise fellow luncher, Ethel Schafer, on her birthday. Ethel must hold some kind of personal record. She has served more than 6,000 hours at the hospital.

Jane also included director of volunteers, Ellen Baker, for the luncheon which featured chicken delight (that's a casserole not a delivery service) cranberry wine salad, homemade rolls and copper pennies. No, not the restaurant; these are sweet and sour carrots.

Surprisers were Roy Lynch, Hazel Burney, Marie Monroe, Anne Hoffman and Mary Mimm.

MORE BIRTHDAYS...

This birthday bunch traditionally celebrates one another's birthday by dining out. They must dine out a lot as there are five couples in the group.

They chose the Riviera restaurant to honor Esther Alban's natal date. Diners were Esther's husband, Dr. Art, Dr. Harry and Syd Alban, Jack Solmann, Doris Caplan, Joe and Ruth Hartstein and Milt and Grace Winnick.

"FRANCOIS" Manhattan will be the scene of a champagne reception today honoring long-time Long Beach furrier Bob Hill and his wife, Betty.

They are celebrating a 40th wedding anniversary.

The party will be hosted by Bob's mother, Dora Hill, and the Hill children, son Bob and his wife, Denise, daughter Sandy Shrewt and her husband, Mike, and another son Gary Hill and his wife, Gloria.

Also among the 80 well wishers will be the Hill's grandchildren, Bob and Susie's children, Cary, Curt, Cassie and Celeste; Mike and Jeff Shrewt and Gary and Gloria's son, Marty.

SURPRISE! Surprise!

LARRY Sessions made secret arrangements to honor his wife, Connie, on their 40th wedding anniversary.

He invited family and friends to Hugo's Restaurant in the Wilshire Hyatt House in Los Angeles for a festive dinner. The couple had celebrated their 36th wedding anniversary there.

Connie surprised Larry by announcing that she didn't want to go out to dinner this year. He finally had to tell her that the plans were made.

So, off they went with son, John Sessions, daughters, Tina and Connie, Bill Forester and Lucy Lowe (husband Hal busy with a meeting).

The management of Hugo's then surprised Larry by presenting an anniversary cake.

ANOTHER anniversary...

This time an open house celebrating the 45th year of Century 21 Muntz Realty in Naples.

Invitations stated that three generations of Muntzes had been involved in the company and added "...since 1931 when Grampa Muntz was selling Bayfront lots for $700."

Note to Bayfront dwellers: Don't you wish you had bought then?

Women are asking

'What's wrong with a back-to-nature approach to beauty?'

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

make-your-own grooming aid.

Chatting with a group of cheerleaders, we discovered they were gung-ho on the back to nature approach. Some were making their own cosmetics from fresh vegetables or fruit. Others were using organic products and lightweight moisturizers. Also, replacing heavy eye cosmetics, was a thorough brushing of brows and lashes — with some homemade on eyebrows to keep them controlled.

Interestingly, when it came to hair styles, they were forsaking stiff sprays, in favor of cutting their hair, so it would be manageable even if a vigorous cheer and yell were called for. As one explained, "If I get my hair cut by a professional, it will be layered to give in place — and look good — with or without curl. I feel it's healthy for my hair, and leaves me worry-free to be my most enthusiastic while cheering for the team!"

P.S. If you'd like a leaflet spotlighting the basic approach to natural grooming, it is yours free. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba and Bonnie Churchill, "Natural Grooming," Independent, Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

AT WIT'S END

A chuckle or two is worth the price

Remember those wonderful people who brought you the "Pet Rock" in time for Christmas giving last year?

Well, they're back again and this time it's the Glass Breeding Kit. This one contains two glass test tubes filled with "male" and "female" sand, along with a fully-illustrated, easy-to-read training manual.

The manual gives you "how to" hints on how to get your sand to

and grow a beach, a desert, hard-to-fill landfill, kitty litter, or filler for hotel ashtrays.

Have you ever wondered what it would be like day after day to sell these faddies? It could make a real yo-yo out of you.

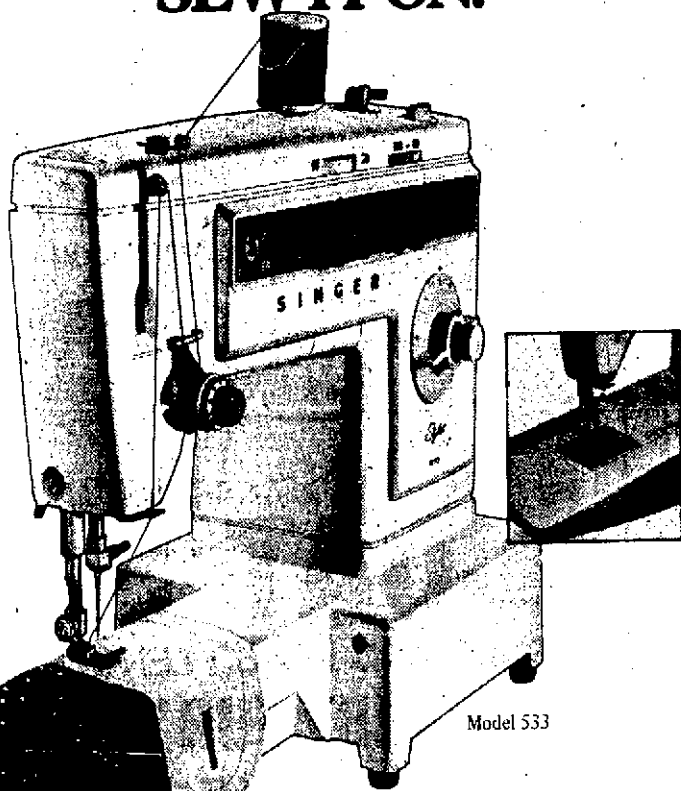

I interviewed a salesperson at one of the local gift shops that carries a complete line of these mind benders.

"How are the pet rocks moving?" I asked her.

"They slowed up a bit after Christmas," she said, "but the Stud rocks are going well."

"How do the Stud rocks work?" I asked.

IF YOU WANT TO SEW SOMETHING ROUND, YOU SHOULD HAVE SOMETHING ROUND TO SEW IT ON.

Flat-bed machines are fine for sewing flat things. But clothes aren't flat. Because people aren't flat. So, if you want to sew a round sleeve to go on a round arm, you need a round arm to sew it on.

Singer has it. On its Stylist* free-arm machine.

Our free-arm lets you get into cuffs, pants, necks, waistbands, armholes and other tight spots. Which means you don't have to sew them by hand any more. Or open the seams. And then sew everything back up again.

And the free-arm isn't the only great feature on our Stylist machine. It makes buttonholes any length in four easy steps. It has a front drop-in bobbin so you don't have to fumble around to put it in. And, for knit and stretch fabrics, there's an adjustable, flexible stretch stitch. And of course, for flat sewing there's our push-button, snap-in cloth plate.

So come to Singer and see the Stylist machine. It's made to solve a lot of problems. Including the fact that you're round. Not flat.

A title for every taste

By NAT HONIG

Among the pick of the recent crop are books about revolt in Russia and Poland, a novel about a six-year-old girl, a scholarly work about speech play, a psychological thriller and a work of science fiction.

The Hatter's Phantoms by Simonon and Maigret and the Apparition, by Simonon, both Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, $6.95 each.

Two more by the Belgian-born French master of the psychological thriller. The Hatter's Phantom deals with mass murder of old women; in Maigret and the Apparition that greatest of modern-day detectives Maigret is helped by his wife as he pits wits against a suave leader in the international art underworld.

The Star Diaries, ($9.95); The Futurological Congress, ($6.95); The Investigation, ($7.95); The Invincible, ($6.95) by Stanislaw Lem, Seabury Press.

Four newly translated gems by the Polish writer who is handsdown the best and most plausibly imaginative science-fiction writer anywhere.

The Silver Crest: My Russian Boyhood by Kornei Chukovsky. Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $6.95.

Russia's most beloved children's storyteller (he died in 1969, aged 87) sets down the endearing account of his rebellious and mischievous boyhood.

The Eastern Front 1914-1917 by Norman Stone, Scribner.

A definitive and fascinating account, the fullest yet, of the First World War on the Russian front which Churchill dubbed "the unknown war."

The Road to Bloody Sunday by Walter Sablinsky, Princeton University Press, $18.50.

An expert on Russian history reassesses the events that led to the Russian revolution of 1905, the organization of the St. Petersburg workers by the young, still mysterious priest Father Gapon, the growing unrest that culminated in the massacre of unarmed workers on "Bloody Sunday."

The Bravest Battle: The Twenty-Eight Days of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising, by Dan Kurzman, Putnam, $10.

A gripping, thorough account of the revolt of the 60,000 Jews penned up in the Warsaw Ghetto after 300,000 had already died in the gas chambers; an uprising doomed, but among the most courageous in history. The revolt began on the first day of Passover 1943, and lasted nearly a month. A pact bound the Jews to take their own lives rather than surrender.

Terra Nostra by Carlos Fuentes, translated by Margaret Sayers Peden; Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $15.

A masterly sweeping book by Mexico's finest novelist, a gigantic historical novel of the pageant of Spain through the centuries and of Spain in the New World.

Catacraft by Mykhaylo Osadchy, translated from the Ukrainian by Marco Carynnyk, Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, $3.95 paperback.

A young Ukrainian poet, at first a devoted Communist, then an outspoken dissenter, gives an account of his trial and imprisonment in a hard labor camp in the Soviet Union. The manuscript was smuggled out of the USSR.

Love Poems from the Hebrew, edited by David C. Gross, illustrated by Shraga Weil, Doubleday, $5.95.

Beautifully illustrated collection of 75 Hebrew love poems. Delicately translated from Song of Songs to today's Israeli poets.

Kassandra and the Wolf, by Margarita Karpanou, translated by N. C. Germanacos Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, $6.95.

The remarkable first novel of a Greek writer, dealing with the frightening experiences of a six-year-old girl, a unique exploration of female juvenile sexuality.

Beyond the Codices: The Nahuatl View of Colonial Mexico, Edited by Arthur J. O. Anderson, Frances Berdan and James Lockhart, University of California Press, $12.

The codices of the Aztecs, written in the Nahuatl language, dealt mainly with pre-Columbian legends and chronicles. This book goes beyond the codices, and gives us a vivid pictures of Aztec life under Spanish rule, with translations from the Nahua of such records as wills, local council minutes, tax records, petitions and correspondence.

The Decapitated Chicken and Other Stories by Horacio Quiroga, selected and translated by Margaret Sayers Peden, illustrated by Ed Lindlof, University of Texas Press, $8.95.

Quiroga, Argentine writer, many of whose works have become Latin American classics, was a sort of combination of Poe, Kipling and Jack London. Here is a collection of some of his finest tales of fantasy, horror, death and adventure.

Kahtabah by Frances Lackey Paul, illustrated by Ric Munoz, ($5.95 paperback). Facts About Alaska: The Alaska Almanac, ($2.95 paperback), both from Alaska Northwest Publishing Co., 130 Second Ave. So., Edmonds, Wash. 98020.

Two fine books from the far north stories illustrating the life of Tlingit (Alaskan Indian) child in the late 19th century and an almanac filled with all sorts of information about Alaska.

Tribal Scars and Other Stories by Sembene Ousmane, Insdape Corp., 1628-1628 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, $2.50.

Beautifully wrought stories by a gifted West African writer about the cultural fetters which still shackle the people even in an Africa of independent nations.

The Life and Death of Leon Trotsky by Victor Serge and Natalie Trotsky, translated from the French by Arnold J. Pomerans, Basic Books, $10.95.

Victor Serge, distinguished novelist and historian of the Russian Revolution, and Trotsky's widow collaborate on an intimate biography of Lenin's colleague, whose murder in Mexico was carried out on Stalin's orders. An important closeup look at Trotsky.

EYE OF THE STORM is Bob Tapia's painting of Golden Hinde II, a replica of Sir Francis Drake's 16th century ship.

Shades of Drake! Golden Hinde!

Marine artist Bob Tapia, originally from San Fernando, now of Sausalito, tells us:

"Imagine a cool, breezy day in San Francisco with bay water churning slightly and the inevitable fog creating textures in the sky. It is the late 1570s and from the horizon, with billowing sails, a magnificent English ship glides into the bay. Her master — Sir Francis Drake, her name — the Golden Hinde."

Four centuries later Golden Hinde II, a full-scale replica of Drake's ship, sailed again into San Francisco Bay to be captured on canvas by Tapia. Now the California State Museum of Science and Industry, 700 State Drive, Los Angeles, is presenting Tapia's collection, commissioned by the Golden Hinde Co., Ltd., through Jan. 16.

Tapia's original oil paintings depict the life and excitement of the vessel, following her course through calm and storm, journeying through time to recreate the romance and adventure of the Golden Hinde II and her voyage. The exhibit also has examples of Tapia's fantasy boats and seascapes portraying the mysticism, drama and power of the sea.

AS A RESULT of her projects in textile conservation and research, and her participation in the Museum Studies Program at Long Beach State University, Mary Schoeser, a student in the art department, has been awarded a $12,000 Rotary International Fellowship. This handsome award will be used for study at the Courtauld Institute in London.

Constance W. Glenn directs the LBSU Museum Studies Program.

While a student, Schoeser served as an intern at Los Angeles County Museum of Art. She also was curator of the Motherwell portion of the LBSU Art Galleries exhibition, "Beyond the Artist's Hand."

MORE NEWS from LBSU: Alvin A. Pine, associate professor of art will give a lecture/slide program Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Lecture Hall 151 on campus.

Pine recently returned from a nine-month sabbatical trip to Afghanistan and Iran to study and observe traditional metalsmithing and jewelry techniques of native craftsmen. During this period, from September, 1975, through June, 1976, Pine also trekked in Nepal and Burma. His record of the sabbatical and his observations will make up the program which is open to the public without charge.

BEGINNING Nov. 15 and continuing through Nov. 19, San Pedro Art Association will have its fall show on display at the Municipal Gallery, 638 S. Beacon St., San Pedro, on the fifth floor. Hours are 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. The public is invited to vote for three of their favorite paintings. The one receiving the largest number of votes will be given a ribbon.

On loan for this show only is a painting, "La Baiana" (The Sweet Vendor), by Brazilian artist Lucia Perdigao.

Competitive paintings by local artists will be judged by a panel of two professional artists and one community representative. Prizes will be awarded in three categories: oil and acrylic, watercolor, and miscellaneous. There also will be a grand prize for best of show.

Competition is open to all artists with only one restriction: the work must be original. Artists must bring their work to the gallery Nov. 15 between 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.

THE PUBLIC is invited to the opening reception for the third in a series of art exhibitions at Pomeroy Art Gallery, 5651 Lincoln Ave., Suite A, Cypress, Saturday from 3 to 10 p.m.

Both Fil Mottola and Vincent, whose work will be on display, will be present.

CAC grant aids inmates

A $10,000 award from the National Endowment for the Arts/Expansion Arts Program for 1976-77 has been made to Artists in Prison, Inc.

"This grant will enable co-directors Vickie Rue and Jeremy Blahnik to develop an original play with music with the women and men inmates of Terminal Island Federal Correctional Institutional Theater Workshop," said program director Susan Albert Lowenberg of Artists in Prison, Inc.

Part of the grant will be used for two 30-week theater games/improvisation workshops at the Neuropsychiatric Institute of UCLA, with emotionally disturbed and developmentally disabled adolescents. This part of the program will be led by Stephanie Liss and Julie Mannix of Artists in Prison, Inc.

THE TERMINAL ISLAND Workshop production will be performed by the inmates who also will do the costumes, lighting and graphics, April 25-30 at the Mark Taper Forum Lab.

"The Terminal Island Workshop/Artists in Prison, Inc. production of 'Convictions,' created and performed by inmates, was presented by the inmates at the Lab in June. It was one of our most important and stimulating projects," said Lab director Robert Greenwald. "We are looking forward to this second event with great anticipation."

Just completed by the Workshop, the six-performance run of Charles Gordone's Pulitzer Prize winning play, "No Place to Be Somebody," was seen by more than 1,600 inmate and outside audience members. It was presented inside the prison Sept. 10-14.

A SECOND GRANT, awarded to Vickie Rue of Artists in Prison, Inc. by the California Arts Council, also will be used for the Terminal Island project. Additional matching funds are being sought for both grants.

Other projects on the agenda for Artists in Prison, Inc., include a Theater Workshop at the California Institution for Women at Frontera, where the women will create a play to tour to other female penal institutions.

A two-year research and treatment project with adult alcoholics at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Sepulveda, two film projects and a paper documenting the state of the arts in social institutions in the United States await additional funding.

BEAMING with pleasure, Curtis Mizufuku displays his design which won Public Corporation of the Art's logo competition.

New logo design accepted by PCA

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

It was a triumphant moment Wednesday for Curtis Mizufuku when he received a certificate and a $500 check for creating the winning logo in Public Corporation of the Arts design contest, nosing out 34 other entries from professional artists and designers as well as students.

Mizufuku, senior graphic design major at Long Beach State University, entered the competition, along with the entire class of 15 students taught by professor James J. Van Elmeren.

"It's not often that anyone wins an award of this cash value," commented Councilwoman Eunice Sato as she made the presentation at a meeting of the PCA board of directors in the City Council Chambers.

Replied the artist, who will graduate from LBSU in May, "It gives me more confidence in my future."

Mrs. Sato is chairman of the City Council's Human and Cultural Affairs Committee.

The new logo will be used on stationery and in many other ways to identify Long Beach PCA.

Congress of the Arts. The congress functions under the Public Corporation of the Arts. Follow-up interviews will be scheduled in December.

At the suggestion of director Laura Killingsworth, the board agreed that, if requested, it will mail the survey questionnaire to any cultural group in the area, whether or not the organization belongs to the Congress of the Arts.

The PCA will meet again Wednesday, Nov. 24, at 4 p.m. in the conference room of its headquarters, 130 Pine Ave. The session is open to the public.

Polay programs season

Next Sunday at 8 p.m., Lakewood Philharmonia will open its sixth season under the direction of Bruce Polay in Long Beach City College Auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way. Concertmaster Stephen Bryant will appear as violin soloist.

On the program will be "Adagio for Strings" by American composer Samuel Barber and "Iberia" from "Images pour Orchestra" by Debussy.

Bryant will be featured in the "Violin Concerto in D-major" by Jean Si-belius and "Tzigane" (Gypsy Rhapsody) by Maurice Ravel. He recently was selected as concertmaster of the Los Angeles Young Musicians Foundation Orchestra and has been chosen to perform with the Pasadena Symphony.

Tickets may be obtained by writing to Lakewood Philharmonia, P.O. Box 487, Lakewood 90714. General admission for single concerts is $2.50. Season tickets are $12. Special rates apply for Lakewood residents.

Who's noticing?

Vi Coulter, left, seems oblivious to heated exchange between Jim Doherty and Laurella Daggett in scene from 'Sabrina Fair.' The three performers, all familiar to Southland theatergoers, appear in Samuel Taylor's Cinderella-type story at Long Beach Community Playhouse, 5021 E. Anaheim St., Fridays and Saturdays through Dec. 11. Call the box office for reservations.

80 LBCC musicians to take part in concert

Compositions by Mozart, Schubert and Dvorak will be performed when Long Beach City College's orchestra department presents its first concert of the school year next Sunday.

Eighty music students will perform at 3 p.m. in the Liberal Arts Campus Auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way. The Chamber Orchestra will play Mozart's "Jupiter Symphony," the LBCC String Quartet will perform the first movement of Schubert's "String Quartet in C-major."

After intermission, the LBCC Symphony will present Dvorak's "Carnival Overture" and "New World Symphony."

General admission is $2.

L.B. Symphony concert Saturday

After its rousing, standing-room-only season opener Oct. 9, Long Beach Symphony is now holding final rehearsals for its second subscription concert.

This will take place Saturday at 8 p.m. in Long Beach City College Auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way.

Conductor Alberto Bolet has chosen an all-orchestral program. He will open the concert with Beethoven's "Symphony No. 3 in E-flat" (Eroica).

The symphony next will play "Dance of the Seven Veils" by Richard Strauss. To complete the bill, the conductor has selected "Ten Basque Melodies" by Jesus Guridi.

SEATING for the concert is limited because, for the first time, the Long Beach Symphony Association can boast of a sold-out season.

However, some seats are held in reserve and others are made available when season subscribers, unable to attend a concert, return them to the symphony office. These then are for sale to the public for that individual program.

It's difficult to deal honestly with alcoholism

Do you think alcoholism is an illness? That question was posed to me in a question-and-answer period following a recent public address. The woman who put the question to me thought more and more people considered excessive drinking as some kind of misbehavior rather than an illness. Certainly it can be an illness, and it can also

dr. walt menninger

mask other serious emotional problems. But the line between normal drinking and excessive dependency upon alcohol (alcoholism) is not easy to draw. After all, during any given month, one survey noted, 58 per cent of the population drink alcoholic beverages — that's about 125 million Americans.

Of those current drinkers, 62 per cent report having one or two drinks on an average day; 22 per cent have three or four drinks a day. Fourteen per cent, or roughly 17 million Americans, admit to having five or more drinks on an average day!

Excessive use of alcohol is a significant problem in this country. The substance is widely available, relatively cheap, and has the capacity to dull your judgment as you take more and more of it. It works like an emotional anesthetic, deadening anxiety and emotional pain.

The capacity of alcohol to reduce one's inhibitions makes it particularly effective as a "social lubricant" at cocktail parties. But this same quality is involved in the problems associated with alcohol — it continues to be the drug most associated with crime, violence, auto accidents, marital problems and child abuse.

WHAT MAKES alcohol abuse particularly difficult to deal with is the tendency of many people to deny their dependency upon it. People can get "hooked" on alcohol and be unable to see the degree to which it controls them, instead of vice versa. That is part of the "illness" of alcoholism.

The alcohol-dependent person is most reluctant to give it up, feeling great discomfort without it. He or she may strongly object to any accusation that the drinking is a problem. Thus the partner in a marriage can feel helpless about confronting the spouse with the criticism or suspicion of excessive drinking.

There is no painless way to cope with alcoholism. But there is an increasing number of good programs, many developed with the support of recovered alcoholics, to help people come to grips with the problem.

How can you tell if someone is an alcoholic?

There are a number of checklists available, but a recent study of the department of psychiatry at the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis found three questions would pretty well screen alcoholics:

Has your family ever objected to your drinking? Did you ever think you drank too much in general? Have others ever said you drink too much for your own good?

These screening questions aren't foolproof, but nearly all (96 per cent) of the definite and probable alcoholics were identified by a "yes" answer to them. What about you?

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him in care of this newspaper. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in his column.)

Smoking adds to heart disease risk

Sixth in a series

By ALTON BLAKESLEE and JEREMIAH STAMLER, M.D.

It is so easy to do, and keep doing... lighting a cigarette. It seems casual, debonair, "satisfying." And it can become a compelling habit. It "scratches the itch" in your lungs that the smoking created in the first place, as one Swedish doctor puts it.

Cigarette smoking also gives you a two to six times greater risk of a heart attack than non-smokers face.

For nearly 25 years, that message has been becoming ever more clear.

Back in 1954, an American Cancer Society study of 190,000 men aged 50 to 69 rang a first loud bell of warning. Death comes prematurely to cigarette smokers, it found. About 25 per cent of these too-soon deaths occurred because of lung cancer. But about 50 per cent came about because of coronary heart disease.

Smoking, that study was saying, has twice the potential of stopping your heart as it does of giving you lung cancer.

Public attention and headlines on that study focused on the cancer rather than heart risk. Perhaps dying of lung cancer may have seemed scarier than being blotted out by heart attacks. That study, by Dr. E. Cuyler Hammond and Dr. Daniel Horn, has been supported and reinforced by study after study, in this country and elsewhere.

THE MESSAGE from them all is: Smoking hurts your heart and circulatory system. The risk is related to the number of cigarettes smoked daily, for how many years, and whether you inhale.

Men aged 30 to 59 who smoke about a pack of cigarettes a day run twice the risk of having a heart attack as non-smokers. And smoking more than a pack a day triples their chances, according to pooled results of five major studies of middle-aged men.

The cigarette influence on risk of having a fatal heart attack, compared with a non-smoker, is dramatized in figures from the American Cancer Society's study of one million Americans and their habits that affect health.

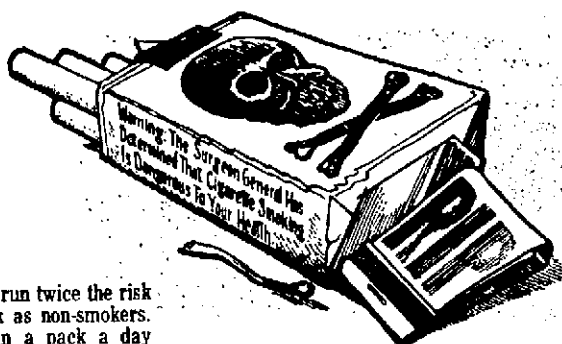

Take one example, men aged 40 to 50. If they smoked half to one pack of cigarettes a day, their chances of fatal attacks were 2.6 times higher than for non-smokers. One pack to two packs daily, the chances rose to 3.8 times higher. More than two packs a day, the risk was 5.5 times greater than for non-smokers.

Middle-aged women who smoke run about three times higher risk of heart attacks than women who don't smoke cigarettes.

The earlier one starts smoking, the higher becomes the relative risk of collision with a heart attack, various studies show. Young men and women are heading for trouble, with risk compounded by other factors, such as high blood pressure and high blood cholesterol.

Four autopsy studies have shown that atherosclerosis of the coronary arteries was more severe in habitual cigarette smokers than non-smokers.

WHEN SMOKERS abandon their habit, the risk goes down. Men who quit cigarettes soon begin to have the same life expectancy and freedom from heart attacks as men who never smoked. This is particularly true if they had quit smoking before having an initial attack.

With heart disease its major killer, the United States also has the highest per capita consumption of cigarettes in the world.

Consumption has seen-sawed. It dropped, briefly, after the first report in 1964 to the Surgeon General of the U.S. Public Health Service, which declared smoking is bad for health.

Subsequently came a ban on TV and radio advertising of cigarettes, and the printing of a warning on each pack of cigarettes saying smoking is hazardous to health.

Many people responded to the cautions. Some 100,000 American physicians have quit smoking, and most are advising their patients to do likewise.

And in the last 20 years, some 20 million American men have said farewell to cigarettes.

American women are doing less well on this score. Still smoking, they are developing lung cancer at a higher rate than ever before. And there is an additive effect between smoking and the contraceptive pill in increasing the risk of heart attack and other blood clotting incidents, especially after age 35 or 40.

All the people who have managed to quit have demonstrated it truly is a soluble problem, one intelligent way of reducing the risk of premature heart attack.

MONDAY: choosing a diet to protect heart.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Deters hepatitis activity

Interferon, an antiviral substance produced by the body, has been used to treat successfully a small group of patients with chronic hepatitis B.

Hepatitis is a disorder characterized by liver inflammation and other symptoms.

About 10 per cent of U. S. patients hospitalized with acute hepatitis B became chronically infected — that is,

ben zinser

they continue to carry hepatitis B substance in their blood.

It's estimated that 100 million persons in the world today are chronically infected with the hepatitis B virus and are therefore potentially transmitters of the infection. No effective treatment is available, and spontaneous recovery is rare.

Dr. Thomas C. Merigan and associates of Stanford University School of Medicine treated four persons. Laboratory-produced interferon from human white blood cells was used.

The patients were injected with interferon once a day either for one week or for a month or more. The interferon significantly reduced or eradicated evidence of hepatitis activity in all patients. The anti-hepatitis effect seemed to be long-lasting for those who were treated for a month or more.

Interferon is in limited supply and is very expensive. Drug companies are beginning to produce the substance in human cells grown in the laboratory, which could increase the supply and decrease the cost.

The research was supported by grants from the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases; the National Institute of Arthritis, Metabolism and Digestive Diseases; and the Division of Research Resources. Details are reported in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Help for asthmatics

Hypnosis is an effective adjunct in the treatment of asthma, but counseling is just as important, says a doctor.

Dr. David R. Collison of Chatswood, New South Wales, Australia, says that good to excellent results were obtained in 54 per cent of a series of 121 patients. All the patients who were improved said they felt better.

Trance depth proved to be an important factor. Results were good to excellent in 36 of the 43 able to go into a deep trance.

The figures were 27 of 47 of those who went into a medium trance.

Only two of those able to go only into a light trance had good or excellent results.

The report is in Clinical Psychiatry News, a medical newspaper.

Vitamin C for flu

The famed chemist, Dr. Linus Pauling, thinks the nation's $135 million swine flu vaccine program is unnecessary.

Dr. Pauling, a Nobel Prize winner, says that large doses of vitamin C can do just as well as the vaccine in protecting against influenza.

Up to 10 grams daily of the vitamin "ought to give 75 per cent protection — as good as the vaccine and without the side effects."

THE FORMULA

Lanolin cream gives skin protection

By and large, the wool we use for clothing and other fabrics has the lanolin removed from it. There is a notable exception however. Our Canadian friends do not remove the lanolin from some wool that is used to knit the heavy sweaters so popular in that beautiful cold country.

By leaving the fat in the wool, a high degree of

water repellency results serving as protection against rain and snow. Here's a formula for a hand and face cream that contains lanolin as an important ingredient.

You'll need one-half teaspoon POWDERED SOAP, two tablespoons DISTILLED WATER, two tablespoons LANOLIN, and two tablespoons GLYCERIN. Mix the soap and glycerin into the water. Now add the lanolin with constant, rapid stirring. Water-soluble perfume may be added as desired. Use as you would any face or hand cream.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Now you can obtain The Formula Book 2, the exciting follow-up to THE FORMULA BOOK, with all new easy-to-make formulas for personal, home, and pet care. Price $5.95. And we now have available both formula books in a handsome gift pack — two oversized paperback books in a durable slip case, ideal for early Christmas shoppers, $11.90. Please indicate whether you want Formula 1, II or the two-volume gift pack. Write to The Formula Book, 6700 Squibb Road, Mission, Kan. 66202.

AAUW sets breakfast

A pre-Christmas breakfast is planned Saturday from 9 to 11 a.m. at Bullock's Santa Ana, sponsored by La Palma Branch of American Association of University Women.

A demonstration of decorating with sheets and a style show using sheets will be featured.

Cost of the brunch event is $4 and reservations may be made with Sueko Nakayama, 17522 Lori Ann Lane, Cerritos, or Marie Maguire, 5792 Roxbury Court, Cypress. Deadline is Monday.

The workshop

Few Americans realize that the very first portrait of Santa Claus was painted at West Point Academy (of all places!) in 1837, by a faculty artist named Robert Weir.

He patterned his portrait of Santa after poet Clement Moore's description, and gave the world the well-known countenance. Since that time, Santa has appeared in many forms, but we think one of the cutest is our Santa train project, pictured below. Your home will be the talk of the neighborhood with this lawn display.

Construction of the train is simple. Just glue the three large, full-size pictures onto plywood, saw them out, and paint by numbers. To remove all guesswork, we tell you exactly which colors to use, how to glue the pictures the best way, and all other information you need. The display will last many seasons because it's all done with waterproof materials.

To obtain the C-5 Santa Train, send $4 (includes first class postage and handling) by cash, check or money order. To see our full selection of easy-to-build Christmas displays, write for a free brochure. Send all orders to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Press-Telegram Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

HANDY TIP: When working with craft projects, an old egg carton makes a handy place to store pins, sequins, etc. The top section makes a nice compartment for storing glue and ribbon. If you have a do-it-yourself question, send it to Steve Ellingson at the above address.

Christmas has traditionally been a do-it-yourself season. That's why we created these clever, easy-to-build yuletide charms. The Santa, sleigh, reindeer, elves, snowman and angel are full-size patterns you trace onto plywood (each just three feet high). Note how the curvatures of the figures have been simplified so that even the novice handy-person can saw them out in a jiffy.

They look delightful on the lawn or garage door, but are equally useful inside as Christmas card holders, fireplace displays or in children's rooms.

Over the centuries, Christmas decorating was traditionally a do-it-yourself thing ... those green boughs our ancestors cut in the forest; the paper rings, popcorn and cranberry garlands that were strung in the homes.

That's why we think you'll like these four projects pictured above with actress Susan Oliver. They're home decorations that you can create, different from those hum-drum factory-made tinsel rings.

With these simple step-by-step directions and pictures (plus patterns), you can whip out one or all of these decorations in an evening or two. You could hang the pom-pom wreath on the front door, the gold star in the hall or entranceway. Then, the more casual looking burlap wreath could go in the den while the fruit and nut ring would be perfect for the kitchen or dining area.

All four projects utilize common materials like corrugated cardboard, dried materials, burlap, Christmas tree balls and white glue. The plastic fruits are available in most dime stores or florist supply shops.

To obtain instruction sheet 588 for all four decorations, send $2.50 (includes first class postage and handling) to the Van Nuys address.

ira corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn: I had a difficult bidding problem and I didn't fare well in the post mortem. I opened one diamond, LHO bid two clubs and partner bid two spades. This was my hand:

♠ J
♥ A K 5
♦ 9 8 7 4 3
♣ A 10 6 5

I didn't like any bids that I might choose so I decided to pass. Was my "crime" deserving of the heavy criticism that followed?

—Dodged the Issue, Columbus, Ind.

Answer: A change of suit by an unpassed responder to the opening bidder is a forcing bid in all standard systems. Therefore, answer number one is that you violated the system by your pass. Did your crime deserve heavy criticism?

I cannot answer that question because heavy is a relative term. Suffice it to say that you should have bid something. I agree that no attractive bids were available, but I would choose two no trump as the best of a bad lot.

Dear Mr. Corn: Rubber bridge, no vulnerability, no part scores. The bidding goes as follows and I held:

♠ Q 9 7 6
♥ 7 6
♣ Q J 4

Should I have passed or should I have competed? I chose the latter and won. My opponents criticized my action and I'm wondering if they ate sour grapes?

Tenacious Tom, Milwaukee

Answer: In all such types of problems, one must ask, "What do I have to gain versus what do I have to lose." In my opinion the chances for probably gain are minimal while the chances for a loss are more substantial. I pass and hope to bid game on the next deal.

Dear Mr. Corn: In some of your answers to bidding problems you suggest bidding games and slams for which I can visualize distributions that can defeat the ideal contracts. Why don't you show all 26 cards and then offer a small prize to anyone who can figure out how to beat the contract?

Seeking Prizes, Memphis, Tenn.

Answer: Most questions I receive are two handed bidding problems, i.e. "How do I reach six spades with these two hands?" I do not usually know what the opposing hands are and if I did, I wouldn't include them unless they were of importance to the reader.

My objective, and the objective of any efficient bidding system, should be aimed at reaching the optimum contract on the cards given.

True, one can think of distributions that may set a game or slam. But if one bids in fear of disaster threatening every hand, he is destined to make many overtricks and to lose many rubbers.

The main idea is to reach the best contract indicated by the bidding.

Dear Mr. Corn: Rubber bridge and my opponent opens three spades. I overcalled three hearts and the trouble started. What is the proper ruling for insufficient bids?

Not Enough, Long Beach, N.Y.

Answer: The offender has two options. He may substitute the lowest sufficient bid in the same suit (four hearts) with no penalty, or he may choose any other bid including a pass (doubles and redoubles may not be substituted). If he chooses the second course, his partner is barred for the rest of the bidding.

Further, if the offender chooses a pass and his partner becomes the opening leader, declarer may require or forbid the lead of a specified suit.

DESIGNER PATTERN

Halter look for holiday scene

Bareback, beautiful and very, very easy to sew for the holidays — it's Diane von Furstenberg's halter jumpsuit. It expresses allure every inch of the way from revealing shoulders to bodice shaping down, down, down to the wide flare of the legs. Printed Pattern M229 is dramatic for parties in crepe, satin, shantung — casual for warmer climes in crinkly cottons, cotton or nylon knit. Don't think of facing a new season or new year without sewing this first.

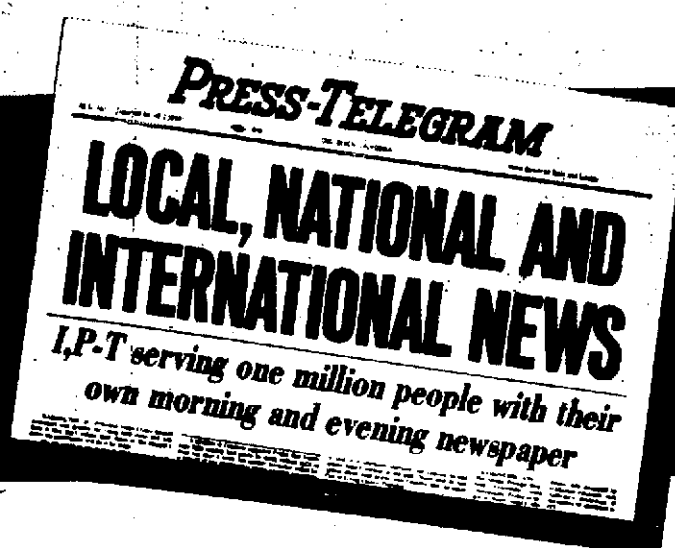

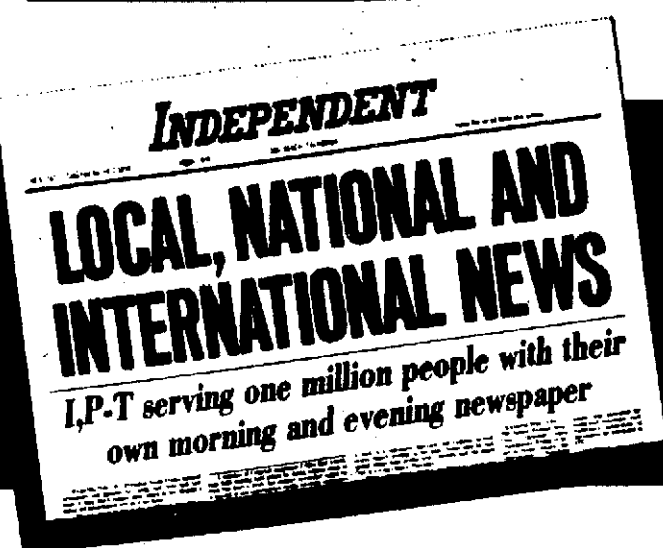

Printed Pattern M229 is available in misses' sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) requires 3 1/2 yards 60-inch fabric.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Menu tasty now as then

Since we have just brought to a close the election campaign of this Bicentennial year, we are repeating a chef of the week recipe written by Senator George Deukmejian who has served 14 years in the California Legislature as assemblyman and senator. He came up with it during a coffee-break.

"The passing of the decade of the 1960's and early 70's, is definitely not an indication of the passing of the problems served to the State Legislature during the last 14 years. We have an especially sumptuous (if indigestion-causing) meal placed before us this session. As your representatives, we will be expected to move forcefully ahead, tasting and sampling various syggessations for solutions to the multitude of problems facing California.

"The Senate received an early recipe for success from the Senate Chaplain, Rev. Robert S. Romeis, who on the second day of the session offered this prayer:

"God of all grace, make us realize that good government, like good stew, doesn't just happen. Help us to see it needs a base of old-fashioned honesty, some balanced portions of common sense, a dash of daring, and more than a sprinkling of vision — all warmed up by a deep fire of love for all human brothers. Enable us to create this kind of government, so that Thou, O Lord, will not have to ask, 'What's cooking in California?'"

"The hors d'oeuvres have been a surprise, if not entirely apprising to some. With the unexpected change in Senate leadership no one quite knows who the chief chef will be throughout the cooking period.

"THE SALAD will be made of crisp portions of

SENATOR GEORGE DEUKMEJIAN

Conservation Measures, underwater oil drilling will be a substantial base, filled with redwood slivers, slices of ripe commercial fisheries problems, state park enthusiasms, and topped with a heavy sauce of pesticide control — as well as pest control.

"The main course will be hot tax reform and budget battles, served on a bed of roasted school, finance and welfare problems.

"The piece de resistance will probably be dessert. We will be offered legalized marijuana 'grass pie' or a generous portion of fruit cake for consenting adults.

"It will be an interesting meal, and one that will prove filling for all. We expect to end the dinner party with bicarbonate of solved problems and salts of a better california, for all."

DEAR ABBY

Give discipline with love

DEAR ABBY: I know the libraries are full of books on the subject, but you seem to put so much into a few words. What financial aid, but Bob is still afraid of his mother. Or maybe I should say he's afraid of hurting her feelings, so he lies to her.

even come home to sleep on Saturday night, but I can't tell his mother that. I wish Bob would tell his mother the truth and get it over with, but he can't seem to do it. In the meantime I have to lie for him. So what's the solution? — HATES TO LIE

DEAR HATES: You don't HAVE to lie. You're not obligated to give Bob's mother any information. When she phones, tell her her son is out and you'll ask him to return her call when he returns.

DEAR ABBY: I am not a vain man, but I'm only 29 and I'm rapidly losing my hair. I suppose I could consider a hairpiece, but I'd rather keep what hair I have if it's at all possible. I've heard that taking female hormones can prevent baldness in men. It makes sense to me because you never see any bald women.

Have you ever heard of men taking female hormones to prevent baldness? Can it be dangerous? If it's okay, will I need a prescription to get it? — GOING BALD

DEAR GOING: Baldness is hereditary. And my consultants tell me, that if men start monkeying around with female hormones, they'll have to start making brassieres in men's sizes. And yes, you DO need a prescription for it, so the ward from here is to forget it.

makes some kids good and some bad? In other words, is there a formula for raising good kids? Is it heredity or environment? — TRYING HARD

DEAR TRYING: That battle has been going on for a long time, but I'm inclined to be on the side of environment.

All kids need discipline. ("Discipline" does not mean punishment; it means "teaching.") Kids need to know how far they can go. And they don't really want everything they ask for.

Reward them when they're good, and deprive them of something they enjoy when they misbehave.

I don't believe in hitting a child. A little slap on the wrist (just enough to hurt his dignity) is all right. However, hitting a child hard enough to hurt him physically may rid you of YOUR hostilities, but it will only reach the child that violence is the answer to all conflicts.

Don't ever tell a child he's "bad." If he misbehaves, tell him you do not like what he DID: don't tell him you don't like HIM.

Give a child lots of love, and when he comes to you with a confession, don't be too hard on him.

DEAR ABBY: Another guy and I have shared an apartment for three years. (I'll call him Bob.) We're both adults and don't depend on our parents for

Gourmet guide

thomey

ORANGE COUNTY has a surprisingly large number of fine restaurants. So, quite logically, many people drive from Long Beach to enjoy the cuisine in our neighboring county.

But the reverse is also true. A lot of Orange County residents drive regularly to Long Beach to enjoy our fine restaurants, such as Francois Manhattan, 1909 E. Fourth St. near Cherry Avenue. The Manhattan was established in the 1940s. For a great many years — long before the remarkable expansion of new restaurants in Orange County — its residents drove to Francois Manhattan and lavished praise on its beef Stroganoff and lobster thermidor, epicurean creations which were then very scarce in Anaheim, Santa Ana and Orange.

Now the younger residents of Orange County are making the same discovery their parents and grandparents made in the 1950s: Francois Manhattan is a treasure of a restaurant! Executive chef Charles Cutshaw, who's been at the Manhattan for eight years — is a Rembrandt or Matisse in the art of preparing the most scrumptious continental sauces. His Stroganoff, thermidor, veal piccata, cacciatore and scallopine sauces are achievements equal to those of the best restaurants in Paris, Rome or San Francisco.

Recently, an Orange County gourmet — youngish and smartly-dressed — left his table three different times in order to tell Pat Wise, the Manhattan's friendly general manager, how much he was enjoying the various dishes in his large table d'hotel dinner. Pat hears such enthusiastic compliments all the time. The Manhattan has such an off-the-beaten-track location that many who discover it for the first time say: "I came here by a lucky accident. No one would ever guess that there's such a marvelous restaurant in this part of town."

The Manhattan has an old-world decor and a great deal of old-fashioned warm hospitality. Its luncheons, from about $3, are so different from those in ordinary restaurants that knowledgeable people, such as physicians, engineers, businessmen and women executives, are continually bringing in their friends who quickly share their enthusiasm. The dinners, $5 to over $8, are huge, including tray of relishes, tureen of epicurean soup, salad or spaghetti; entree, potatoes or rice, beverage, ice cream or sherbet. There are nearly 30 table d'hotel entrees plus specialties as flaming duckling, chateaubriand and beef grenadine for two.

The Manhattan's service is outstanding because many of the employees have been there so long that they have unusual affection for the place. Among the guests' favorites are maitre d' Joe Shaelevitz, Al Hardy, Roy Ghore, Bobby Ortiz, Dora Paul, Ruth Owens, Mickey Rowe, Shirley Zion and Cary Massaro. (The Manhattan is closed Mondays.)

ROBERTO SOLTERO JR.
Sizzlers have outstanding budget dining

HIS NAME IS Roberto Soltero Jr. He is handsome and young, with nearly nine years experience in the restaurant business.

Roberto is friendly, cheerful and works very hard. He is manager of the good-looking Sizzler Family Steak House, Del Amo Boulevard just west of Long Beach Boulevard. I like him very much because he is a young man in whom I have great faith and trust. I have recommended his restaurant many times.

It's important to get it on the record that I trust Roberto because his is such an unusual restaurant. The special all day today at that Sizzler Family Steak House will be steak-a-bob platters for two persons for $2.99, with the coupon that appears in this restaurant section. The coupon offer will be good day and night, today through Thursday.

The offer means that those steak-a-bob platters are approximately $1.50 each. That's an extremely low price. It is, in fact, the kind of low price that makes a restaurant columnist like me shudder in his boots. I am aware of how high food costs are in this era of continual inflation. How can any restaurant offer quality food at such a low price? Will people be unhappy with some of the orders? Will there be complaints?

I am willing to predict that there will be very few complaints this week at that Sizzler Family Steak House. I also know that if any guest is unhappy with his steak-a-bob platter, he will find that Roberto will make an immediate adjustment, provided, of course, that the complaint is justified. More important, I feel that the vast majority of families dining this week will be very happy with their platters, because Roberto can be trusted to offer unusual good quality for that low price.

The steak-a-bob is delicious because Roberto's kitchen staff cuts their own meats, a system that lowers costs and raises quality. The steak-a-bob consists of four pieces of ball-tip sirloin broiled with green pepper, pineapple, onion and cherry tomato. Each serving includes approximately six ounces of beef. Also included are fresh, baked potato or French fries and very good Sizzler toast. Other menu highlights include salads, pastries, beer and wine.

The Sizzler Family Restaurants are a different concept in dining out, offering the kind of steak, baby lobsters and king crab that are usually very high-priced in dinner houses. Through their coupon offers, the Sizzlers make it possible for families on budgets to enjoy such fine entrees at low prices. In keeping with those small prices, the Sizzler's portions are smaller. The coupons are also honored at the Sizzler restaurants at 4081 Candlewood St. and at 1430 E. Pacific Coast Highway.

USC, UCLA romp to easy wins

Trojans go to air for 48-24 win

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

PALO ALTO—On a day when the Cards were stacked against him, Vince Evans called for a reshuffle.

Audubling often at the line of scrimmage, the USC quarterback threw over the top of Stanford's run-oriented defense for four touchdowns Saturday as the Trojans bombarded Stanford, 48-24, before 76,500 fans.

Evans' bullets helped build a 34-3 halftime lead for the Trojans, who had to play without their injured tailback star, Ricky Bell.

The Trojans victory narrowed the Rose Bowl scramble to a Nov. 20 titanic between USC and UCLA, a contest which could have added significance now that No. 1 Michigan has been dumped from the ranks of the unbeaten.

Stanford coach Jack Christiansen refused to be drawn into comparing the Trojans and Bruins.

"They're both very fine football teams," he said. "I wouldn't want to predict a winner. It will probably depend upon the breaks."

But Christiansen complained about USC's lust for touchdowns, charging coach John Robinson and the Trojans of "stomping on little people" in their quest for national honors.

Actually, Christiansen was his own worst enemy.

Although Bell was in street clothes with a sore ankle and an aching hip-pointer, Christiansen stationed six defenders at the line of scrimmage and an umbrella of three more close enough to cut off the run quickly.

The Cardinals invited the Trojans to throw—and they did, more successfully than they could have dreamed.

By halftime, Evans had tied USC's single-game passing record of four touchdowns, three going to flanker Shelton Diggs, who joined 12 others on the Pacific-8 Conference record list.

"It's a little risky to play that way against us," said Robinson. "They overplayed the run and then blew everybody in when they knew we were going to pass."

"We have enough confidence in both of our quarterbacks to throw when somebody gives us an opportunity like that."

Out for a Saturday stroll

Quarterback Jeff Dankworth jogs into end zone with first UCLA touchdown Saturday at the Coliseum, a run of 13 yards that was conspicuous only by lack of any Oregon defenders in the immediate area. Dankworth recovered his balance after slipping at 15, then scored. Bruins did a lot of scoring before day was over, rolling to 46-0 decision.

Fresno St. kicks 49ers into Aspirin Alley, 23-0

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

FRESNO—It isn't often that the Long Beach State football team is mentioned in the same sentence as traditional powers Michigan, Texas and Notre Dame.

Saturday night was an exception—although one the 49ers would have liked to avoid.

But there they are this morning, listed right with Michigan, Texas and Notre Dame in Aspirin Alley.

The 49ers were kicked into the alley Saturday night by an aggressive Fresno State team that delighted a Ratcliffe Stadium turnout of 11,100 by throttling Long Beach, 23-0.

The shutout defeat—Long Beach's first such loss since 1964—dropped the 49ers' season standard to 7-2 and their Pacific Coast Athletic Association record to 1-2.

The triumph, only the Bulldogs' fourth in nine games over-all, improved their PCAA record to 3-1 and gave them second place.

Fresno achieved its first-ever

PCAA shutout in a variety of ways, getting its first nine points on field goals by Vince Petrucci, its first touchdown by quarterback Dean Jones and its last score on a 101-yard interception return by sophomore defensive back Gary Hayes.

In between, a Bulldog defensive unit, led by down linemen Tom Posey, Simon Peterson, Cortez Hill and Larry Fister and linebackers Del White and Neil Porter, kept Long Beach from getting within 15 yards of the Fresno end zone.

On the only occasion the 49ers got that close, trailing 16-0, Hayes came up with his game-breaking interception.

The most remarkable aspect of the first half, from a Long Beach standpoint, was the fact that the 49ers were still in the game by intermission.

Fresno's domination was as thorough in the first 30 minutes as any team the 49ers' have faced in Wayne Howard's three-year tenure as head coach.

From a Fresno viewpoint, the score should have been 28-0—based on the fact that the Bulldogs routinely advanced inside the Long Beach 20 four times in the first half.

But the 49er defense, which entered the contest ranked 14th in the nation, limited the Bulldogs to three Petrucci field goals.

The 5-foot-8, 155-pound sophomore was actually 4-for-5 in the first half, but he had a 38-yard nullified by an illegal procedure penalty.

Petrucci responded to that misfortune by kicking a 43-yarder seconds later. He also narrowly missed a 31-yarder.

Purdue shocks Michigan

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Michigan kicker Bob Wood trotted onto the field with nine seconds left, and for a few agonizing seconds Saturday it seemed that Purdue's chances for a major upset were seriously in jeopardy.

The unheralded Boilermakers, who had lost their last three games, had gone ahead of the top-rated Wolverines four minutes earlier when Rock Supan booted a 23-yard field goal. But a last-ditch Michigan rally took the Wolverines to Purdue's 19-yard line in the game's closing seconds.

Wood, who had converted six of eight field goal attempts this season, lofted his fourth-down kick. It had the distance, but sailed wide to the left and the Boilermakers claimed a 16-14 victory as a partisan Ross-Ade Stadium crowd of 57,205 went delirious.

"I wouldn't trade this win for anything," shouted the jubilant Purdue coach Alex Agase. "It was a great, great team win. What a fantastic job they did."

Duck soup, 46-0, for the Bruins

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

On a Saturday afternoon when 32,158 Coliseum fans perspired more than UCLA's starting offense, the Bruins broiled Oregon's Ducks in no-sweat fashion, 46-0.

The nation's third-ranked football team found little resistance in running up a 27-0 halftime lead. Quarterback Jeff Dankworth, running backs Wendell Tyler and Theotis Brown and yeoman blockers Mitch Kahn, Keith Eck, Greg Taylor, Rob Kezirian and Gus Coppens might as well have shed their pads and showered right then.

Even against UCLA's second and third-string performers, Oregon was no match. Under a different head coach, the Bruins could well have matched with points each of the 90 degrees on the peristyle thermometer.

However, Terry Donahue bent over backward not to embarrass Don Read across the field. He simply had 34 better football players at his disposal than the Oregon head coach.

"He told us before the game that the offensive starters would play until we were ahead by four touchdowns," said Dankworth. "Well, we got three TDs and two field goals in the first half and that was that."

With the smooth senior from Reno at the controls, the Bruins scored points on four of their first five possessions. Sophomore Steve Bukich took over with 7:09 remaining in the second quarter, guided UCLA to its next 20 points and gave way to freshman Rick Bashore for the final 13:04.

Dankworth scored once on a 13-yard dash while Tyler tallied twice on short plunges, but fell 13 yards shy of the 3,000-yard plateau with an eight-carry, 28-yard effort.

Sophomore Theotis Brown, the leading Bruin rusher on the season with 793 yards added only 48 yards in six tries. But his replacement, senior James Brown, scored twice and gained 100 yards—69 of them on a third-quarter touchdown trek over right guard.

King Pellinore is The Champion

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

King Pellinore proved Saturday that training and racing in Ireland is the key to winning big money stakes in America, as he scored a thrilling nose victory in Oak Tree's $350,000 The Champions at Santa Anita.

The Kentucky-bred son of Round Table positioned himself close to the leader, Honest Pleasure, for the first mile of the 1 1/4-mile classic, then dispatched last year's 2-year-old champion at the head of the stretch and appeared home free.

But L'Heureux, who had raced last in the 10-horse field the first half of the chase, stormed through the pack as if shot from a cannon and caught King Pellinore 30 yards from the wire.

As it appeared that L'Heureux had the momentum to surge past King Pellinore, Bill Shoemaker dug spurs into his colt and the Oak Tree meeting's top horse responded to barely hold off the challenge.

King Pellinore, coupled in the wagering with his entymate, Riot In Paris, went off as the favorite of the crowd of 41,073 and paid a modest $3.80.

White up and over for six

Freshman tailback Charles White filled in ably for Ricky Bell again Saturday at Stanford, scoring on this play from the two to give USC 21-3 lead in the second quarter. Recovery of a fumbled punt at Stanford 13 led to the TD, one of seven USC scored. No. 33 is Cardinal defender Savann Thompson.

Vikings win at Pasadena

By PAUL MCLEOD

Staff Writer

Considering the way Long Beach City College had handled its two previous homecoming appearances against other teams—a 68-13 loss at Bakersfield and a 14-13 setback to Pierce in Long Beach—odds were a tough time in their third such test, this time in Pasadena Saturday night.

The odds were correct, but Long Beach stood up to the test, surviving a 14-0 but netted 66 yards on only eight carries.

Pasadena came out gunning. The Lancers, on the merits of a 15-play, 77-yard drive and another four-play 44-yard march, led 14-0 with only eight minutes gone in the game.

But the Vikings fought back. In the second quarter Long Beach rallied twice—on a one-yard plunge by Richard Terry capping an eight-play, 41-yard drive and on a four-yard drive by Gray following a blocked punt by Cory Meredith at the Pasadena nine.

Long Beach missed a scoring opportunity on the last play of the half inside the Pasadena one when Samoa was stopped for no gain as the gun sounded.

The teams exchanged TDs in the second half before LBCC mounted a short, 32-yard drive following another blocked punt at the Pasadena 32.

Although Pasadena had the edge in total yardage (345-333), the Lancers struggled against their own aggressiveness during the contest, being cited 16 times for 163 yards in penalties.

Pasadena has not won a Metro game since 1973. That's a string of 10 consecutive losses dating back to a 14-14 tie with Bakersfield to start the conference season a year ago.

Pasadena ranked first in defense entering the game but could not contain LBCC's ground attack. The Vikings ran up 296 yards on the ground with Andy Gray, returning to the lineup after a two-week absence, netting 76 to lead the team.

Malachi Moses, who rared for 162 yards last week against Pierce, saw limited action Saturday, deficit in the first quarter to record its third win in eight starts this season, 28-21, before 3,400 disappointed Lancers fans at Horrell Field.

The victory kept LBCC from gaining a share of the Metropolitan Conference cellar and assured Pasadena it would remain there for a second successive season.

Pasadena has not won a Metro game since 1973. That's a string of 10 consecutive losses dating back to a 14-14 tie with Bakersfield to start the conference season a year ago.

Pasadena ranked first in defense entering the game but could not contain LBCC's ground attack. The Vikings ran up 296 yards on the ground with Andy Gray, returning to the lineup after a two-week absence, netting 76 to lead the team.

The victory kept LBCC from gaining a share of the Metropolitan Conference cellar and assured Pasadena it would remain there for a second successive season.

Florida tries a gamble...and loses

Tough struggle

Florida's Jimmy Fisher battles Georgia's Ben Zambiasi (44) and Ronnie Swoopes (78) to get into end zone in first period of SEC game Saturday. Georgia overcame halftime deficit to win, 41-27.

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — "When you gamble and don't make it, you've got to suffer the consequences," said coach Vince Dooley Saturday after his seventh-ranked Georgia Bulldogs smashed Florida, 41-27, taking advantage of a Gator gamble that failed.

Florida, leading 27-20, missed on a fourth-and-one try at its own 29. Six plays later, Georgia tied the game and controlled it the rest of the way.

"I could feel what Douglas felt," Dooley said, referring to coach Doug Dickey of Florida. "When it backfires, it's really trouble."

Georgia, amassing more than 500 yards in offense, rode the brilliant quarterbacking of Ray Goff to the victory that propelled the Bulldogs into the favorite's role for a berth in the Sugar Bowl.

Goff scored three touchdowns and passed for two others as Georgia erased the 10th-ranked Gators' 27-13 halftime lead.

"The Lord is No. 1 and we're No. 2," Goff said.

Meanwhile, a dejected Dickey remarked, "We were not out-played, we were out-coached. I made some dumb calls. They assaulted us and took the game away from us."

Dooley said he probably would have gambled also under the circumstances.

since he thought the momentum had changed following his team's 80-yard touchdown drive earlier in the third quarter.

But Erk Russell, Georgia's bald-headed defensive coordinator, disagreed, saying, "I thought it (the gamble) lost the game."

The loss was another frustrating blow for the Gators, who could have clinched their first-ever Southeastern Conference crown. It lifted Georgia to an 8-1 record, 4-1 in the SEC, and put Florida at 6-2, also 4-1 in the SEC.

Goff executed the option offense to perfection throughout, scoring his touchdowns on runs of nine, five, and one yards and hurling scoring passes of eight and six yards to Ulysses Norris.

When Goff wasn't picking the Gator defense to pieces, he relied on the hard running of Kevin McLee, who rambled for almost 200 yards.

Georgia's other touchdown came on a two-yard plunge by Al Pollard, who gained just under 100 yards.

Florida had dominated the opening half with quarterback Jimmy Fisher scoring on a five-yard run and tossing touchdowns passes of six and nine yards to speedster Wes Chandler. Carr got the other Gator tally on a 29-yard run as Florida surged to a 27-13 halftime lead before having its attack choked by the Bulldog defense in the final 30 minutes.

Houston snaps long Texas streak, 30-0

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Houston quarterback Danny Davis scored once and hit a crucial fourth down pass to set up another touchdown and Lennard Coplin kicked three field goals as the 19th-ranked Cougars defeated 20th-rated Texas, 30-0, Saturday.

Arkansas rallies for tie

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Senior quarterback Mark Jackson sneaked the final yard for a touchdown on a tense 80-yard fourth-quarter drive to enable Baylor to tie 12th-ranked Arkansas, 7-7, Saturday.

Arkansas, which was knocked out of the SWC leadership because of the tie, dodged an upset bullet when Lester Belrose of Baylor missed a 32-yard field goal with 16 seconds left.

Belrose had a 15-mile an hour wind at his back, but hooked the ball just left of the upright.

Arkansas now has a 5-1-1 record for the year and is 3-0-1 in SWC play. Baylor is 1-2-1 and 4-2-1.

Arkansas had apparently dealt Baylor a staggering blow in the defensive duel when freshman wide receiver Bruce Hay slipped behind the Bear secondary and caught quarterback Ron Calcagni's 41-yard scoring bomb late in the third quarter.

Hay was all alone behind Baylor cornerback Scooter Reed. Steve Litole added the extra point.

But Jackson countered by engineering a 13-play drive before 47,900 homecoming fans.

Texas Tech scared by TCU

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Rodney Allison staked unbeaten Texas Tech to two quick touchdowns Saturday and the fifth-ranked Red Raiders turned back a bold, gambling upset bid by South-west Conference doormat Texas Christian, 14-10.

Allison winged a first-quarter bullseye to Brian Nelson that covered 88 yards for one touchdown and the junior quarter-

The victory before a sellout crowd of 77,809 ended Texas' 42-game home-field winning streak, which dated from the 1968 opener when Houston tied Texas, 20-20.

It was also the first shutout of Texas since mid-1972 when Oklahoma blanked the Longhorns 27-0, and virtually eliminated the Longhorns from the SWC title race.

Davis' 15-yard pass to Don Bass on fourth-and-eight on the Texas 28 set up Houston's first touchdown in the first quarter.

Alois Blackwell scored on a seven-yard dash on a pitchout from Davis.

Davis, a 175-pound sophomore, sprinted 28 yards late in the fourth quarter for Houston's final touchdown.

Fumbles by Johnny (Lam) Jones at the Texas 15 and Jimmy Walker at the Texas 22 led to Coplin field goals of 30 and 20 yards. He also kicked a 32 yarder after Davis drove the Cougars 59 yards to the Texas 16.

Houston clinched the victory with two last-quarter touchdowns on Davis' run and a one-yard plunge by Charles Lynch, capping a 65-yard drive.

Houston is now 6-2 for the season and 5-1 in the SWC. Texas dropped to 3-3-1 and 2-2.

and sixth-ranked Maryland to a 21-0 victory over Cincinnati Saturday.

The Terps, now 9-0 and winners of 13 in a row over two seasons, allowed Cincinnati just four first downs through the first three quarters.

Maryland missed a scoring chance following a fumble recovery deep in Bearcat territory early in the game, which was watched by scouts from the Orange and Gator bowls.

But the Terps drove 52 yards in 15 plays late in the first period, capping the march with a one-yard touchdown plunge by tailback Alvin (Preacher) Maddox.

The deepest penetration for Cincinnati (6-2) came in the fourth period when it moved the ball inside the Maryland 30. Penalties killed the drive, however, and the Bearcats turned the ball back to Maryland.

Kentucky tops Vandy

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Derrick Ramsey accounted for 202 yards total offense, scored one of two touchdowns and won most valuable player honors as he led Kentucky to a 14-0 victory Saturday over Vanderbilt.

Ramsey collected 118 yards rushing on 13 carries and passed for another 84 yards to push his total to 1,080 for the season, the first Wildcat to pass 1,000 since 1974.

He almost personally authored Kentucky's first touchdown, rambling on runs of eight and 31 yards before dashing the final 16 for the score.

Kentucky's other touchdown was a gift when Preston Brown, calling for a fair catch, fumbled a Kentucky punt on the Vanderbilt 17-yard line just before the third period ended.

Pepper's proud moment: Georgia Tech upsets ND

ATLANTA (AP) — "I told our players that if I live to be 1,000 years old I could never be prouder of a group of players than I am of these guys today," said Georgia Tech coach Pepper Rodgers after his Yellow Jackets upset 11th-ranked Notre Dame, 23-14, Saturday.

Tech (4-4-1) got a pair of touchdown runs by David Sims in the second half while its defense allowed

Notre Dame, a three-touchdown favorite, only 34 yards after halftime.

Passes	8-11-1	0-0-0
Punts	5-46	6-41
Penalties-yds	4-49	3-32

The Yellow Jackets, who had not beaten Notre Dame since 1959 and were on the short end of the series that began in 1922 21-3, stayed entirely on the ground, gaining 368 yards on 70 attempts.

Sims, who scored on runs of 10 and 16 yards, led the rushing game with 122 yards on 15 carries.

"Our chances of winning depended on us shortening the game, not throwing interceptions and not fumbling," said Rodgers.

The Yellow Jackets did not lose a fumble and, since they did not attempt a pass, were not intercepted. Last week in a 31-7 loss to Duke Tech had 10 turnovers.

Notre Dame (6-2) held a 14-10 halftime margin on touchdown runs of two and three yards by Al Hunter, but failed to move the ball at all the second half.

"All of Tech's touchdowns were well executed," said Notre Dame coach Dav Devine. "We had a man assigned to the key and he was simply blocked," Devine said.

"I've won a game before without throwing a pass, but I've never been on the losing side."

'Bama bounces LSU; bowl berth assured

BIRMINGHAM (AP) — Fullback Johnny Davis bulled through the Louisiana State defense for touchdowns of 13 and 58 yards Saturday to lead 15th-ranked Alabama to a 28-17 Southeastern Conference victory with scouts from eight bowls watching.

Davis, stung when demoted to the second team earlier in the season, ran with a vengeance as the Crimson Tide raised its record to 7-2 and virtually wrapped up an 18th consecutive bowl appearance.

LSU, which last defeated Alabama in 1970, has a 4-3-1 record. Tailback Terry Robiskie set an LSU record by scoring the 25th touchdown of his collegiate career, but by then the Tide had put the game away.

Alabama led 14-3 at halftime and each team scored twice in the second half.

Memphis St. fumbles, falls to Vols, 21-14

MEMPHIS (AP) — Wingback Stanley Morgan scored twice on runs of one and six yards Saturday as Tennessee defeated Memphis State, 21-14.

Coach Bill Battle's Volunteers took advantage of a Tiger fumble early in the third period to turn what had been a Memphis State victory celebration into a wake.

Memphis State, hoping for a first-time ever victory over its cross-state rivals took a 14-7 lead into the dressing room at the half.

But the Tiger visions evaporated 11 plays deep in the second half when Morgan capped a 14-yard Volunteer drive with a one-yard plunge that gave Tennessee its second TD. Jim Gaylor kicked the extra points to tie it at 14-14.

Tennessee went out ahead with 10:31 left in the game when second-string quarterback Joe Hough broke three Tiger tackles and scored from the six.

Arizona State loses another, to Air Force

TEMPE (AP) — Air Force quarterback Dave Ziebart connected on a 22-yard scoring pass to Paul Williams with 10 seconds left in the game to give the Falcons a 31-30 comeback-behind victory over Arizona State Saturday night.

The Falcons entered that crucial fourth period trailing 27-12, but came up with three touchdowns as they increased their season record to 3-6 and snapped a three-game losing streak. The loss means that ASU coach Frank Kush will suffer his first losing season ever as the Devils are now 2-6.

Fumble helps Auburn upend Mississippi St.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Cornerback back Henry Davison galloped 20 yards on a fumble return Saturday to launch Mississippi State toward a 28-19 victory over Auburn.

Davison's second quarter touchdown run put new life into the sluggish Bulldogs.

Mississippi State drove 64 yards for another touchdown before the half, with fleet halfback Daryl McGlasker sprinting the final three yards. They added single scores in the third on a one-yard run by fullback Terry Vitano and in the fourth on a 13-yard sweep by McGlasker.

Penn State's defense tough on N.C. State

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Penn State's defense set up three touchdowns and a field goal with three fumble recoveries and an intercepted pass Saturday as the Nittany Lions thundered past North Carolina State, 41-20, for their fifth successive victory.

Two fumbles set up two short Penn State scoring drives in the opening quarter. Quarterback Chuck Fusina banged one yard for a touchdown, and passed 29 yards to Jim Cefalo for another and a 14-0 lead.

After North Carolina State, 36-1, cut the margin to 14-7 on a four-yard touchdown pass from quarterback John Evans to flanker Dave Moody, Penn State recovered a third fumble which led to a 34-yard field goal by Tony Capozzoli. Capozzoli kicked a 28-yarder with 10 seconds left in the half to make it 20-7.

No. Carolina tops Clemson

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Senior tailback Mike Voight scored three touchdowns Saturday to lead North Carolina to a 27-23 victory over Clemson.

The win was the Tar Heels' seventh in nine games and the second in three conference starts, while Clemson fell to 2-5-2 over-all and 0-3-1 in the ACC.

North Carolina jumped to a 21-0 lead in the second quarter before Clemson put together single touchdowns in the second and third quarters and added a field goal early in the final quarter to

THE CHAMPION

Festive Mood, longest shot in the field (75-1) and the oldest contestant (7), was third, nearly two lengths behind L'Heureux, with Riot in Paris, fourth, four more lengths behind.

Honest Pleasure, clearly showing the effects of a long 3-year-old campaign, tired badly after Pellinore stormed past him and finished seventh, eight lengths back of the winner.

Spending the first two years of his career in Ireland turned 4-year-old King Pellinore into a first-rate, durable runner, his jubilant trainer, Charlie Whittingham, said after his colt had picked up The Champions $240,000 winner's share.

"Your horses don't break down in Europe," explained Whittingham, who took King Pellinore under his wing when initial owner Vincent O'Brien brought him back to the U.S. early this year. (Pellinore was purchased two months ago for $1 million by Fred Sahadi's Cardiff Stock Farm.)

"They race on nice, soft turf courses in Ireland, not on all kinds of tracks like we have here. Consequently, they stay sound and can race a couple years longer than they might if they began their careers in the U.S."

Whittingham disclaimed the talk that King Pellinore, whose last dirt race was several months ago, was strictly a grass horse.

"He trains well on dirt, so I had no doubts about his ability to run on the dirt today," said the trainer. "There were just more grass races on the schedule and that's why he has raced consistently on turf."

"But he doesn't like clods in his face. When he was getting some clods in the early stages today, he just went outside and carved his own path."

"I told Bill (Shoemaker) not to let Honest Pleasure open up too much on him, and he was all right down the backstretch. He started loafing when he got on the lead, but as soon as he saw that other horse (L'Heureux), he dug in again."

SHOEMAKER, WHO notched his record 7,150th victory and 118th in races of $100,000 or more value, agreed with the trainer.

"My colt was trying to ease himself a little near the wire, but as soon as Don's (Donald Pierce) horse came alongside, he put his head down and started pulling away," said the 45-year-old reinsman. "I knew I won it."

"It was a beautiful trip, laying right there behind Honest Pleasure, because I knew that horse was really making some fractions up front. I came up to him around the final turn still with a handful of horse."

"I guess we just can't beat that horse," sighed Pierce, whose last start with L'Heureux was a narrow loss to King Pellinore in the Oak Tree Invitational two weeks ago.

"We had early trouble and got far back. Then we made a long run and got right up to Shoe's horse, but never got past him. He really tries, but Shoe's horse is something else."

The Champions

Jockey Bill Shoemaker drives King Pellinore (in the middle of the picture) to a desperate nose victory over Don Pierce and L'Heureux Saturday to win Santa Anita's $350,000 handicap The Champions. Festive Mood, off at 75-1, ran third.

CRAIG PERRETT, imported from the East Coast with Honest Pleasure, admitted that Honest Pleasure's long campaign—he has raced almost constantly without rest for two seasons—had taken something out of the 1975 2-year-old of the year.

"He just didn't have the kick he did a few races back," said Perrett. "He just got tired today. But he makes them beat him if they're gonna. You don't win $800,000 (Honest Pleasure's two-year earnings) by not trying."

But thanks to his Irish "prep" work, King Pellinore tried just a little harder in the world's richest invitational handicap.

THE EMERALD ISLE and Shoemaker have another big chance for glory on Oak Tree's final day of competition today, as Tony Pejsa's stakes-winning Habitony heads a field of 11 2-year-olds in the $132,150 Norfolk Stakes.

Under the conditions of the championship event for juveniles, all entrants will carry 118 pounds for the mile and 1/16 on the main track.

Habitony, an Irish-bred son of Habitat to be ridden by Shoemaker, scored his initial stakes victory in the Sunny Slope in his last outing, Oct. 20. Earlier he was runnerup to Del Mar's top 2-year-old, Visible, in the Balboa Stakes and in the Del Mar Futurity.

Heading the opposition are Eastern invader Hey Hey J.P., fourth in the Laurel Futurity last weekend; Tale Of Power, runnerup in the Sunny Slope, and Replant, third in the Sunny Slope.

Completing the lineup are Transcription, Palopodium, Au Vol, Red Sensation, Paclad, Cathy's Rejoice and Incredibly Lucky.

If all 11 start, a record $99,290 will be awarded to the winner.

Post-time for the first race on getaway day is 12:30 p.m.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Pay ALL athletes, Billie Jean urges

Billie Jean King is finding it delightful being a publisher. In the November issue of her womenSports, Billie Jean comes right out and demands an end to amateur sports in the U.S.

"The answer to America's poor showing in international competition is not more money for better programs, as the AAU and U.S. Olympic Committee would have us believe, but a new financial status for the American athlete," BJK writes.

"If people pay to see an athlete perform, then he or she is a professional and entitled to a living wage. No longer should an athlete be forced to compete and stay poor."

The blast by Billie Jean, who is not poor, should send the advocates of America's amateur system scurrying to the cabinet for more aspirin.

NOT ONLY did Maury Wills turn down the Giants' managerial offer, so did the pride of San Pedro, Joe Amalfitano. Joey, who had told me that he wanted a big league manager's job in the worst way, opted to remain as a coach with the Padres. Something must be radically wrong up in San Francisco.

His Newport Beach friends insist that Andy Messersmith asked Atlanta owner Ted Turner to trade him back to a California team. If true, that would have to be a new record for gall.

Walter Alston didn't see much benefit in watching a game from the stands, as he did the final week of the season at the insistence of Al Campanis. "You can't spot pitching flaws," claimed Alston. But he made one concession: "The game does look a lot easier from up here." That's what press boxers have been saying for years, Smokey.

Is Joe Ferguson headed back to the Dodgers and a reunion with his old friend, Tom Lasorda? Tom is looking for another catcher and since the Cardinals now have five — Doug Rader became the latest when he was traded by the Giants for Willie Crawford — Ferguson apparently is available.

A MUCH-NEEDED monthly Long Beach sports luncheon program will kick off Dec. 3 at the Queensway Hilton. The affair will be sponsored by four organizations—the Century Club, 49er Athletic Foundation, Grand Prix Committee of 300 and L.B. Chamber of Commerce.

Rick Bryson, Long Beach's answer to Robert Redford, will chair the program, which will feature athletes, coaches and video film clips.

Tab per luncheon is $8, which may be a mistake. The price is okay for affluent members of the aforementioned groups, but it hardly figures to attract much of the general public. Interesting John Q. Fan in Long Beach sports was the luncheon idea in the first place.

QUICK QUOTES

Dwight Jones — "I'm dead-set against the PCAA postseason conference playoff that will determine who represents our league in the regional playoffs. I think the conference champion should go directly to the regionals without a special tournament. Long Beach State was the only school to vote against the tournament, but now we're stuck with it. In a tournament some team can get lucky and then the best team won't be in the regionals."

Norm Sherry — "I'm an admirer of Reggie Jackson, and not just because of his big bat. During the playoffs, he did a helluva job putting down Howard Cosell. As usual, Reggie came through in the clutch."

Charles White, USC's phenomenal freshman tailback — "Don't let scores fool you. Even though we beat Cal, and Missouri beat us pretty good (46-25 in the season's opener), Cal had the toughest defense we faced. Missouri wasn't really that good. We just were awful that night."

THE ANGELS have hiked their ticket prices 50 cents in all areas except the general admission sector. Which prompted president Red Patterson to remark, without even a smile:

"Angel baseball is still the best sports buy in California."

Compared to what, Arthur?

Before they upped their ticket prices, the Angels surveyed the major professional sports market and came up with this average ticket price information:

Pro football is $8.89; hockey $7.71; basketball $6.12; tennis $5.13, and baseball a mere $3.45.

GIANT OWNER Bob Lurie dispensed a remark the other day that makes me tend to doubt his sanity.

"My attitude is that the Bay Area and all of Northern California is Giant territory," declared Lurie. "If we put the right product on the field, we can draw a million to a million-and-a-half fans."

"Even if (Charlie) Finley keeps the A's in Oakland, that's no problem. We give a good product and we'll draw the people, even if the A's start winning world championships again."

Oh, boy! Lurie must have been out of town a few decades. The Giants' problems started when the A's came to Oakland. Further, economists have stated time and time again that there's no way two baseball clubs can survive in the Bay Area. Even with one claiming all that "Giant territory."

THOUGH he was only a bystander, Don Sutton said the recent World Series was a real disappointment to him.

"I've been a Yankee rooter since I was a kid and I couldn't root for the Reds since I geared myself to hate them all year," said the Dodger pitcher. "You can't change your feelings that quickly."

"The Yankees should have approached the Reds like bullies ready to beat up somebody. Instead, they pussyfooted and were timid. You can't be timid and beat that Big Red Machine."

PROPHCY

GAME OF THE WEEK
Cincinnati 20, Rams 14

Riverfront Stadium clash Monday night is a virtual 'must win' affair for both — for the Rams if they are to maintain their slender lead over San Francisco in the NFC West, and for the Bengals if they are to hold off the resurgent Pittsburgh Steelers. Seattle's rout no coverup for some of genuine problems that beset Rams — not all of which are on the field. Ram offensive line has not been effective and could be handled by improved Bengal defense. Cincinnati has won 10 of last 11 at home. Rams are 4 for 6 on Monday Night Football. Anderson better than whoever Rams start at quarterback. Teams have played only once before, a 15-12 victory for the Rams at the Coliseum in 1972.

The rest of the winners:

Home Teams Capitalized
SR: Series Record Includes Official League Games Only

Atlanta 20, SEATTLE 17 — Atlanta enjoyed top offensive spurge of season last Sunday but that's no proof that heretofore tepid attack has come alive. Seahawks' defense not exactly 'seven blocks of granite.' Strictly a tussle in Kingdome where home team has been known to get psyched up.

SR: First meeting.
Baltimore 30, SAN DIEGO 17 — Baltimore owns finest offensive balance in league and Jones could destroy porous Charger pass defense. San Diego running game was stopped cold at Pittsburgh. Colts' have allowed only three rushing touchdowns.

SR: Even, 1-1.
CHICAGO 20, Oakland 17 — With three-game bulge in AFC West, Raiders could be coasting. Bears young, tough and on the verge of being a contender; not the type of team to be taken lightly. Win over Minnesota should be great confidence-builder and another upset here would come as no surprise.

SR: Oakland, 1-0.
DALLAS 27, N.Y. Giants 10 — Dallas offense averaging more than 400 yards per game; Giants defense yielding in neighborhood of 330. McVay for Arnsperger not real answer for winless Giants, who have been blanked last 10 quarters.

SR: Dallas, 19-8-2.
DENVER 31, Tampa Bay 10 — Old college rivals, McKay and Ralston, hook up again; this time with Ralston holding the aces. Buff offensive resurgence may prove to be mirage against consistently tough Denver defense. Best Tampa has done on road is 20-point loss to Houston.

SR: First meeting.
GREEN BAY 25, New Orleans 17 — Pack had put four reasonably good games together before running into roadblock in Detroit. Both have shown they can win with their respective limitations. Marginally stronger case can be made for Green Bay at home with Dickey at the controls.

SR: Green Bay, 3-2.
HOUSTON 21, Cleveland 20 — Houston's health is questionable and Pastorelli's disenchantment can hardly be a morale-booster. Cincinnati setback notwithstanding, Cleveland making strides. Tough game to figure. Houston must relocate vanishing defense and quit dropping passes.

SR: Cleveland, 9-3.
Miami 27, N.Y. JETS 10 — Miami could have won first meeting this year by 40 points but settled for 16-0. Jets never got inside Dolphin 20. Miami defense shored up with return of Anderson, Matheson and Arnsperger as indicated by sharp performance vs. New England. Unfortunately for Jets, they can't play Buffalo every week.

SR: Miami, 11-10.
MINNESOTA 16, Detroit 13 — Despite Vikings' recent series domination — 15-2 last 17 — this could be war. Minnesota barely won first meeting this year, 10-9, as a lopsided favorite. Detroit defense has given Tarkenton his most difficult times last few encounters and is flexing its muscles again; held Vikes to 168 yards in first match.

SR: Minnesota, 18-11-2.
NEW ENGLAND 30, Buffalo 17 — New England proving to be more of a homebody than traveler. Last three at Foxboro, Pats have played like champs. Snapped Bills' nine-game series skein earlier this year at Buffalo and with top-rated rushing game complementing Grogan versatility, should have little trouble with fading foe.

SR: Buffalo, 18-15-1.
Pittsburgh 30, KANSAS CITY 17 — If KC's defense were 50% as good as its offense, it might be a contender. But it isn't, so Chiefs are just another struggling also-ran. Steel Curtain hasn't allowed a touchdown in 13 quarters so game presents an interesting matchup — explosive KC offense vs. stingy Steeler defense. How Chiefs will stop punishing Pittsburgh ground game is another matter.

SR: Pittsburgh, 3-2.
St. Louis 20, PHILADELPHIA 16 — If Cards try to coast after tough win over San Francisco and before big games against league powers coming up, they could be in trouble. Philly gave away first '76 tilt with four turnovers that led to four Cardinal scores. Eagles healthy now and spirit is up.

SR: St. Louis, 30-27-4.
SAN FRANCISCO 24, Washington 13 — 49ers lost heart-breaker at St. Louis and must now fight to keep pace with Rams. Before getting burned by Card 'big play' offense, 49ers had not allowed TD in four games. Except for St. Louis in a storm, Washington has not beaten a team of distinction this year. San Francisco down four could overpower SFC offensive line.

SR: San Francisco, 5-3-1.

Saul grades out perfect on playing-in-pain charts

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

RICH SAUL
'Not as much fun'

CINCINNATI—It started with the knee.

"Until I got my knee hurt," Rich Saul says, "I never missed a game, never missed a play."

"But when you get one major injury, say a knee, then you have others because you're compensating and it leaves other areas vulnerable."

Now the Ram center wears braces on both knees, a special pad on the hand he broke two years ago, several layers of tape on the shoulder he separated last season, high-top shoes to support his ankles, one of which is chronically sprained, and a splint for the twisted thumb on his snapping hand.

The doctors and trainers can do only so much.

"I sprained the ankle in training camp," Saul says. "They tape you up pretty good, but if they taped it tight enough to stop all the pain, you couldn't move."

"You'll be going along and it'll feel good for two or three days, then you'll sprain it again and whatever you've gained, you've lost. Once the season starts, you never get time to heal."

It would be fortunate for Rich if his teammates did not read this.

Poor baby! they might say. Give the guy a purple heart.

The retired Joe Scibelli, who played guard alongside Saul, was watching a Rams game early this season when a player went down. Scibelli was concerned until he saw it was number 61.

"Oh, it's Saul," Scibelli said in relief.

Why do you say that? he was asked.

"I went out and tried to play tennis with my wife in the off-season, and after the first game I noticed I was limping. I'm 28 years old and I have a future in this game, but it's no fun."

"There's an arthritis buildup (in old injuries). It stays with you and you really feel it later on in life. You spend some nights awake at 2 or 3 in the morning. When the weather changes, you're a pretty good weatherman."

"Football isn't that much fun when you're out there in practice limping around. No matter which way you stand, you can't get comfortable. There's always something aching. You don't feel like joking around. It becomes a lot less fun than it used to be."

It must run in Rich's family. His twin brother Ron, a starting guard with the Washington Redskins, has had only one injury free season in his pro career.

In fact, when the Rams drafted Rich out of Michigan State, he was an all-America linebacker but had a questionable knee from his junior year.

Before Ken Iman was traded and retired, Saul played his first five seasons on the special teams, which did not enhance his health.

"I play a reckless sort of game," he says with a wry smile. "I'll fly through the air... anything to make a play."

He isn't sure how long he can keep it up.

"I wasn't sure what I was going to do this year," he admits. "I'm in real estate, and my broker's talking about me running one of his stores."

"I set up my wife with Diane Youngblood (wife of Jack) in a stationery store and they're doing well. I have a lot of investments—houses, duplexes and units."

So why continue to play in pain?

"Ever since you're a kid you want to," Rich says, "you always want to play. I got a chance to start the last couple of years and I want to see if I can really do it. So you play one more year."

"But I don't know how much longer it's going to be, because a lot of the fun's gone out of it."

ITASCA JUST TRIPLED THE AVERAGE MOTOR HOME PROTECTION.

The 1977 Itasca Owner Protection Plan is already an industry phenomenon. It'll cover you for no less than three years or 36,000 miles. And not just on a few isolated parts, either. We'll cover the inside, the outside, the underside—anything operational, except normal replacement items like spark plugs and oil filters.

In fact, if you keep your 1977 Itasca serviced regularly, we'll assure you that for three years or 36,000 miles, no repair job resulting from a mechanical malfunction will ever cost you more than $25. And for the first year or 12,000 miles—Itasca's Limited Warranty period—it won't even cost you a penny.

How can we afford to offer such a plan? Because we think our Itascas can stand up for a lot longer than three years or 36,000 miles.

And we've got more than a few reasons for feeling so confident.

WE'RE BUILT ON A SOLID FOUNDATION

The Itasca chassis, drivetrain and engine are built and backed by Chevrolet. And you can't get much more reliable than that.

WE ONLY INSTALL EQUIPMENT WE CAN STAND BEHIND

Every interior appliance we install is thoroughly tested. It has to be. Because we also back our appliances for three years or 36,000 miles.

WE'VE GOT THE DEALERS TO MAKE IT WORK

Itasca is one of the fastest growing motor homes in years. And one reason is because we already have over 150 carefully screened, qualified dealers around the country.

If you have a problem with your Itasca, no matter where you are, there's an army of people who can solve it.

WE'VE GOT THE BACKGROUND TO GIVE YOU THE BEST

Itascas are built by the people who make Winnebagos. No doubt, you've heard of them.

Winnebago people have been doing things right for a long, long time. And we think Itasca is the culmination of all that know-how and experience.

Our background has taught us how to offer comfort and quality at prices as low as $15,037* for our 25' mini, $17,526* for our 25' full-size motor home. And these manufacturer's suggested retail prices even include transportation.

Now, a lot of other people will tell you they're just as proud of their motor homes. But how many of them will back up their words with 36,000 miles of protection? *DEALER PREP AND TAXES ARE EXTRA.

$300 BONUS OFFER

The first sixty buyers of a new Itasca, from October 21 through November 28, 1976, will get their choice of a microwave oven, a portable color TV or a $300 cash rebate. Make your best deal with a participating Southern California dealer, then present this coupon for your bonus.

Calvin notes big difference in NBA: the checks don't bounce

"I guess if I'd wanted a big family I could have had a kid in every city—six stops, six kids. I just hope things work out that I can finish my career here." — Mack Calvin.

Mack Calvin noticed a big difference from the ABA in the NBA right away.

"You usually get paid on the first and 15th," one of the Lakers' newest employees says, "so I was surprised last week when it was only the 28th and they gave us our checks four days early. I couldn't believe it."

"Last year down at Virginia, my wife Gale would take a check to the bank and it would be 7 or 8 days before it was any good. It was embarrassing for her. They'd just give her the runaround."

That was life in the American Basketball Association, where Calvin lived the first seven seasons of his professional career, performing for five different franchises that always seemed to be falling out from under him.

Lacking national TV and big city roots, the ABA suffered from severe lack of exposure, so Calvin's earliest fans remember him only as a star guard at Poly High, Long Beach City College and USC.

But Mack remembers. "The only time people heard what was happening in the ABA was when the checks would bounce," Mack says. "It bothered me somewhat. Every year I would make the all-star team or first team all-league but we didn't get any recognition. All the good years I had, nobody even knew what team I was on."

CALVIN WAS drafted by the Lakers (14th) and the L.A. Stars out of USC in 1969. After playing his rookie season for the Stars, he was traded to Miami.

"I was there for two years and that team folded," he says. "I was out in the dispersal draft and went to Carolina. After two years, that team folded."

"Then the Carolina coach, Larry Brown, the assistant coach, Doug Moe, and general manager Carl Scheer and I went in a package deal to Denver."

That single season with the Nuggets was the happiest of Mack's career.

"We had a good team and I had a helluva year. I was in a good situation, it was a good town, a good franchise. I was really happy."

But Denver wished to acquire David Thompson, the all-America from North Carolina State, and figured Virginia would nab him first in the draft.

"Denver had to give up something to get his draft rights," Mack says, "and Virginia wanted me, so I was stuck again, going to a weak team."

CALVIN MISSED the first three months of the season with a knee injury. He didn't need surgery, but while he was out coach Al Bianchi was fired and Mack was hanging around not doing much, so

"They asked me to be the interim coach. I stopped after five games when my checks started bouncing."

There are other memories that will help him to appreciate the merger that saw four ABA franchises and assorted players absorbed into the National Basketball Association.

"When we were in Carolina and had to go to Memphis, we would leave at 8 o'clock in the morning and wouldn't get there 'til 2:30, 3 o'clock."

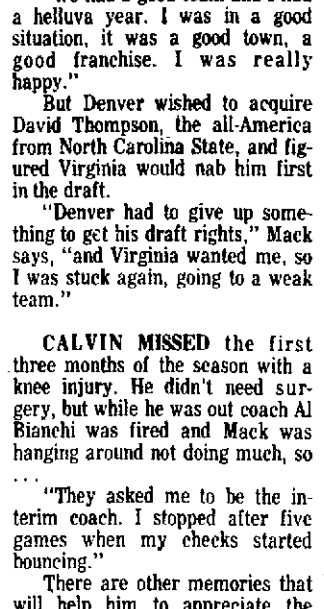

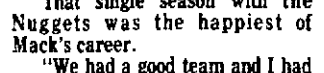

That's not bad time for a bus ride, Calvin is told.

"It was a plane trip," he says. "Piedmont Airlines—you know, a prop job—and we had six stops. A milk run."

"Those things were frustrating, but I was able to make some money. I've been fortunate that I've invested my money wisely and saved some. I'm just happy to still be playing basketball."

Rockets host West Covina

The Long Beach Rockets will call on their hot pitching duo — Greg Harris and Don Driskill — again this afternoon when they host West Covina in Southern California Winter League play at Long Beach City College, 1:30.

The two young pitchers combined on a two-hitter last Sunday as the Rockets edged the L.A. Lions, 1-0. Driskill worked the first three innings and hurled hitless ball. Harris, the former LBCC ace, took over in the fourth and shut the Lions out on two hits the rest of the way. En route to the win, Harris struck out eight and walked none.

The Rockets scored the only run they needed in the fourth when first baseman Monte Bollinger singled with one out and came home on leftfielder Dan Parma's triple.

Doug Stodgel will be behind the plate, Tony Muser in centerfield for the Rockets, who are 2-2 on the season.

Christiansen bitter, claims Trojans out to pour it on

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

STANFORD — The bitterness and the animosity linger on. It is USC and Stanford. It is a fierce rivalry. Sometimes foul. And it always brings out the latent anger in some men. Like Stanford coach Jack Christiansen, whose job on the Farm is considered by many to be in jeopardy. Christiansen was a man in control of his emotions in the wake of a 48-24 embarrassment Saturday afternoon but his inner anger was evident as he accused what he called the poll-conscious Trojans of pouring it on and rubbing Stanford's bloodied noses in the dirt. "It must be great to inherit a national powerhouse," Christiansen said of first-year Trojan coach John Robinson, "then get another team down, jump on it and kick the (bleep) out of it."

"That must be good for the ego," he added acidly. It was only four years ago that Christiansen and John McKay became embroiled in a dispute of highly publicized proportions.

While walking back to the dressing room McKay was accosted by some less than discreet Cardinal fans who hurled complimentary remarks about USC's black players. McKay snapped that he would like to beat Stanford "by 2,000 points some day." When Christiansen was apprised of the remark he refused to debate the issue and would only say, "I don't want to get into a urinating contest with a skunk."

Since that time, football relations between the schools have been strained at best.

Even the departure of McKay to the professional ranks and the arrival of Robinson has done nothing to diminish the ill feelings.

"You can change coaches but that doesn't necessarily change the philosophy," Christiansen said in reference to USC's habit of running up scores. Required to perform without the services of Ricky Bell, the Trojans stunned Stanford with the pass. Vince Evans throwing for four scores and Rob Hertel one.

"It didn't surprise me that they came out passing, especially after we heard Bell wouldn't play," Christiansen said. Then he added tersely, "and it didn't surprise me that they were still throwing when the score was 41-10."

Reminded that the Trojans had also inflicted crushing defeats on Oregon (53-0) and Oregon State (56-0), Christiansen said, "It was the same way today. But then, I expected it."

"If you're playing for

Are the Trojans a dirty football team? "I wouldn't want to use that term," Christiansen smiled, "but you might."

But as upset as he was, Christiansen also was gracious enough to give the Trojans an accolade or two. "They just physically beat us, both on offense and defense," he said. "There isn't any doubt they kicked the hell out of us, outmuscled us. They were just too tough and too quick."

Christiansen said the game's pivotal play came in the second quarter when it was still a respectable (14-3) game. Savann Thompson of Stanford was standing at his own 13 and signalling for a fair catch when the ball ticked off his fingers and Steve Obradovich recovered for the Trojans. Moments later, Charles White was in the end zone and the Cards were left for dead.

Christiansen claimed Thompson was hit before the ball got to him. "It's amazing when 50,000 people can see an error and the guy who is supposed to call those things can't. That was the play of the game, in my mind."

Thompson corroborated his coach's version. "Somebody hit me on the knee," he said. "They (the Trojans) were yelling and screaming at me, trying to break my concentration and while I was waiting for the ball, somebody got me on my knee. They should have called it."

Thompson and fellow defender Rich Waters were also involved in another big play, Evans' 56-yard TD strike to Shelton Diggs on the third scrimmage of the afternoon.

"It was a foulup on our part," said Christiansen. "We were supposed to be in a man-to-man coverage and when you in a man-to-man you're supposed to stick with your man."

"Rich was supposed to hollar if they went deep," Thompson explained. "I didn't hear him."

That was the beginning of a bad and bitter day for Christiansen.

When it was over he said, among other things, of course, "I'm hoarse, I have a cold and I want to die."

Under the circumstances, it seemed like a good idea.

SC OUTBOMBS STANFORD—

The Trojans extended their streak of holding the opposition without a touchdown to 11 quarters before Stanford quarterback Guy Benjamin punched over from the 2 on the final play of the third quarter. "Stanford got 24 points, but only 10 when we had our people in there," noted Robinson.

USC picked off four Stanford passes, cornerback Ricky Odom grabbing three and safety Dennis Thurman the other. "Benjamin took a peek at the man he was going to throw to when he lined up behind the center," said Odom. "I just followed his eyes when he was setting up, and just looked the ball into my arms."

Although he wound up with respectable statistics (16 of 32 for 144 yards), Benjamin was only 6 of 7 with two interceptions in the first half when the Trojans ran away with game.

Freshman Charles White, filling in for Bell, ran for 136 yards in 23 carries and scored twice. "Ricky said he wished he could be out there," said White, "so I tried to do what I could to make up for his absence. He told me to squeeze the ball and run, and I did."

Evans said the Trojans "won it for Ricky Bell and Mike Carey."

Carey is a reserve cornerback who is scheduled to undergo surgery early next week. He has Hodgkin's Disease.

"It's a sad thing," said Evans. "It put kind of a special touch on the game."

USC scored twice in the first three and one-half minutes. It took the Trojans only three plays after the opening kickoff to get their first. Evans throwing a 57-yarder to Diggs, who had gotten behind Stanford defenders Savann Thompson and Rich Waters.

On the first play after the next kickoff, the Cardinals got cut, and paid the price. James Lofton's pass off a reverse was intercepted by Odom at the Stanford 42, and the Trojans didn't blow the opportunity.

Five plays after the interception, Evans threw a 21-yard scoring pass to Diggs, who was given strong blocking by tight end Bill Gay in his race for the end zone.

Down 14-0, the Cardinals regrouped. Mike Nichel ran 44 yards to the USC 10 on a fake punt and, after three plays had advanced the ball only to the 9, Nichel kicked a 28-yard field goal to cut the Trojan lead to 14-3.

USC manufactured a break early in the second quarter. The Trojans grouped around the Cardinals' Thompson, as he prepared to field a punt at the Stanford 13. They yelled and waved their arms, causing Thompson to fumble. Steve Obradovich recovered for USC, amidst a claim by the Cardinals that Thompson had been bumped on the fair catch.

Five plays after the recovery, White dove the final two yards for a 21-3 lead.

On the first play after the kickoff, Odom intercepted a slant pass to Stanford's Tony Hill at the Cardinal 26 and returned it to the 15.

Evans passed nine yards to split end Randy Simmin for a touchdown.

Late in the second quarter, the Trojans went 80 yards in six plays, Evans tossing a 23-yard scoring pass to Diggs in the corner of the end zone. Walker's kick was blocked, but USC had a 34-3 halftime advantage.

The Trojans extended their lead to 41-3 in the third quarter after Thurman's interception set them up at the Stanford 8. White ripped up the middle for the last three yards.

Benjamin capped an 80-yard drive with a two-yard run to cut the deficit to 44-10 on the last play of the third quarter, but early in the fourth period Hertel connected on a 16-yard pass to flanker Mike Robinson to finish off a 65-yard USC drive.

Reserve quarterback Mike Cordova led the Cardinals to two touchdowns against USC reserves in the fourth quarter.

With Michigan beaten by Purdue Saturday, Robinson was asked how he would vote in the coaches' poll this coming week.

"You have to stay with a team that's unbeaten," said the USC coach. "I'll probably vote for Pitt, UCLA and USC, in that order."

Asked if Pitt's weak schedule would keep it out of the No. 1 spot in the polls, he said: "No, Pitt will get a chance to lose. They'll play a good team in a bowl, and they still have to face Penn State."

"Don't forget, Pitt has beaten Notre Dame."

When it was noted Georgia Tech had beaten the Irish Saturday, Robinson gasped.

"Are you kidding? Well, I guess I don't sound so profound after all."

Ed isn't A royal performance yet over — even if king had hair sticks

By JOHN SPEAR

When last heard from, I was complaining about a local performance of a very forgettable Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "Allegro."

Some of you may wonder what kind of performance of R&H might elicit a favorable response in this quarter. The answer will be found at Jordan High auditorium in the Long Beach Civic Light Opera's current production of "The King and I."

In the first place, this stands as one of the best of American musicals. Secondly, the CLO performance is at worst adequate and, in most respects, excellent.

The orchestra, under conductor Robert Billings, was well-rehearsed and did well by the fine score. The acoustics were good, with the exception of one loudspeaker that sounded as if it had succumbed to the swine flu.

The pivotal role of Anna was in the capable hands of Kathy Davis. Her clear voice did well by the British accent, and the security in her acting grew with the evening to a positively scintillating "Shall We Dance."

Burton in film version of 'Equus'

Richard Burton is starring in the film version of Peter Shaffer's prize-winning stage play "Equus."

The filming is under way in Toronto under the direction of Sidney Lumet, who directed "Murder on the Orient Express" and "Dog Day Afternoon."

Burton played the role of Dr. Martin Dysart for 12 weeks on Broadway. Peter Firth, who created the role of the disturbed young man, also stars.

Where the drummer is at right now is rock. It wasn't always that way.

"I started out in 1938 playing country-western music," Cassidy said. "Then it was polka, and then Dixieland and then the early forms of jazz. Later it evolved into the big band jazz sound."

THE BAND is trying to stage a comeback on the strength of its latest album, "Farther Along," a typically diverse work in which four of the five original members play together for the first time since a 1971 split.

It's the group's eighth album and, according to some critics, not its best. The old man of the skins bristles at the criticism.

"It's a worthy piece of music — it stands up for itself," Cassidy said. "We are human beings affected by everything around us, just like you are. What we record is dictated by the times and where we are at the time."

Under the circumstances, it seemed like a good idea.

On the first play after the kickoff, Odom intercepted a slant pass to Stanford's Tony Hill at the Cardinal 26 and returned it to the 15.

FUN FACTS

from WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT GUM

OCTOBERFEST, ONE OF GERMANY'S MOST FAMOUS FESTIVALS, BEGAN ON OCTOBER 17, 1810, THE WEDDING DAY OF THE FUTURE KING LUDWIG I.

A QUEEN TERMITE CAN LAY OVER 30,000 EGGS DAILY DURING A 100-DAY UNCOMMON FERTILITY LIFESPAN. SHE CAN PRODUCE ABOUT HALF-BILLION OFFSPRING.

THE PIGMY SHREW IS, BY WEIGHT, PROBABLY THE WORLD'S SMALLEST MAMMAL. APPROXIMATELY TWO INCHES LONG, IT WEIGHS ABOUT AS MUCH AS A DIME.

THE FIRST JET AIRLINE SERVICE IN THE U.S. WAS BEGUN BY NATIONAL AIRLINES, DEC. 10, 1958 ON THE NEW YORK TO MIAMI RUN.

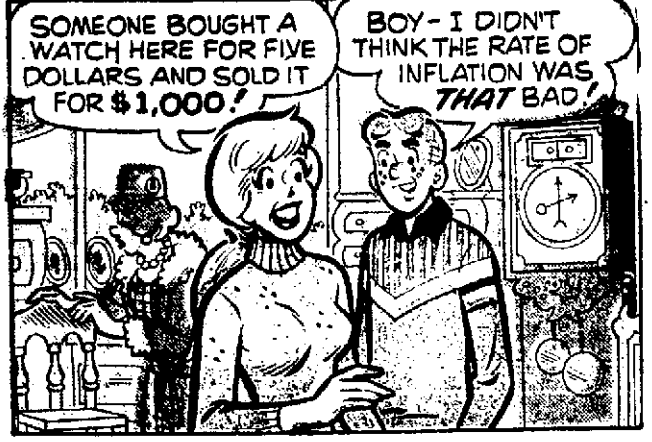

WELCOME TO MIAMI

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT CHEWING GUM

You'll like the big, long-lasting flavor.

Dick will bounce back if series takes pratfall

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

Dick Van Dyke could never be a politician. He's too straightforward. The other politicians would drum him out of the corps.

Why, if he were running for office and it looked as though he didn't have a chance to win, he'd probably come right out and say so.

That's the impression I got of Dick during an interview in the commissary of NBC Studios in Burbank the other day.

Dick's new comedy-variety series, "Van Dyke and Company," is in trouble. It has been finishing third in its time period behind ABC's "The Streets of San Francisco" and CBS' "Barnaby Jones."

Rumors have been rife, as rumors are apt to be, that "Van Dyke and Company" may follow the already canceled "Gemini Man" in a fast disappearing act from the NBC lineup.

But, now, NBC has shifted the variety series, starting this week, from the 10-to-11-p.m. Thursday slot to the 8-to-9 time period the same evening, replacing "Gemini Man."

So what does Van Dyke think about the show's future?

"I don't think we're going to make it," said Dick.

Just like that. Why, it jarred me almost enough to make me drop my glass of iced tea.

EVEN THOUGH Dick feels his show would have appeal to youngsters, he doesn't think the shift to the "family hour" will help his show's ratings. "The competition will be even tougher there — against 'The Waltons' and ABC's 'Welcome Back, Kotter' and 'Barney Miller' — than it was when we faced the two action-adventure series," said the lanky star with the bright blue eyes and grayish hair.

For a man whose TV series may be going down the tube before long, Van Dyke was in remarkably good humor during his lunch break from rehearsals. He came across as the unassuming nice guy he appears to be on the tube, and he didn't badmouth anybody for the scheduling woes that have plagued his series.

Because the first presidential debate aired on Thursday night, Sept. 23, Van Dyke's show premiered on Monday night, Sept. 20. The following week, it was pre-empted by the two-hour premiere of "NBC's Best Seller: Captains and the Kings." Three weeks later it was bumped by a World Series game, and last week it was knocked off the air again by a two-hour "Captains and the Kings" show.

"A guy came up to me the other day and said he'd seen my special," Dick said, emphasizing the word special. "That's what it seems like we've had — some specials, rather than a series."

IT MIGHT be enough to drive some TV stars to drink, but not Van Dyke, who's a recovered alcoholic, as he disclosed a couple of years ago while making the TV movie "The Morning After," about a drunk.

He's taking everything in stride, and knows there'll be plenty of other performance opportunities for him if the series fails.

"If we're canceled, it'll be a first for me," he said. "In 25 years of television, I've never been canceled. But it should be a good character-building experience, I suppose."

Dick has been one of the big names of TV comedy since 1961, when "The Dick Van Dyke Show," one of the tube's best-ever situation comedies, began its five-year run on CBS. He won Emmy Awards three of those years, and the series made a major star also of a young lady named Mary Tyler Moore.

Van Dyke, who has starred on Broadway and in a number of popular movies, did a second situation comedy series, "The New Dick Van Dyke Show," for CBS for three years, from 1971 to 1974.

He realizes it is extremely tough to make a success of a comedy-variety series on TV these days, since, as he puts it, "most viewers seem to prefer a story." He wanted to do a variety series that would be "different," with emphasis on sight-gag humor, to take advantage of his great physical comedy abilities.

"HAS THE series worked out as well as you had hoped?" I asked Van Dyke.

"Yes, everything has worked out even better than I had hoped," came the reply. "We've had a good chemistry, a good working atmosphere. We wanted to do mime particularly (he is joined each week by the five-member L.A. Mime

DICK VAN DYKE ... moving to new time slot

Company, as well as by guest stars), and on every test we've done on the show, mime has rated first.

"I don't regret trying a variety show, and I feel we've done a good job," he added. "And if you're going to have a choice of doing a good series or getting a good rating, I guess I'd pick having a good show."

The series, incidentally, has drawn considerable praise from critics, as did the "Van Dyke and Company" special of last fall, which led to the series.

Carol Burnett will be Dick's guest star on the show scheduled for this coming Thursday night, at 8 on Channel 4, and he disclosed that he and Carol are planning to team up for four weeks this winter on the stage in "Same Time Next Year" at the Huntington Hartford Theater in Hollywood.

THE ACTOR has a commitment from NBC to star in a sequel to "The Morning After," which aired on ABC in 1974 and gained him an Emmy nomination for his dramatic performance as an alcoholic.

The emphasis in the new TV movie will be on institutional treatment available to alcoholics, Dick said, adding that it probably won't be about the same character as the earlier movie. "In fact, I'm toying with the idea of not playing the patient, but rather the therapist," he said.

Van Dyke said he has been offered a number of TV dramatic series, "but I think I'd get bored to tears doing a dramatic series."

How about a situation comedy? Replied Dick: "It would have to be something really different."

Dick and his wife, Marjorie, who was his childhood sweetheart, live in San Diego (Coronado Island), and also own a ranch in Arizona. They have two married sons and two daughters aged 21 and 15.

"What have been the most satisfying years of your career?" I asked Dick, who has hit the 50 age mark.

He thought a moment, then replied: "Now. I'd say. You worry less as you get older. I just enjoy it now. When you're young, the ratings pressure can drive you up the wall."

"Five years ago, I thought I could retire. But now I feel I'd get bored. I really enjoy my work."

That's good news for the rest of us, who can expect to see plenty of the talented performer in the future, regardless of how long his present series lasts.

Reiner's film role not Meathead type

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

"Extras on the set pass me by all day, then later in the afternoon they ask me, 'Are you really Rob Reiner?'"

He is really Rob Reiner. But workers on the set of "Fire Sale" have to be told, because he looks more like a bond salesman than Mike (Meathead) Stivic of the television superseries "All in the Family."

"They shaved off my mustache and cut my hair short," said Reiner as he lunched on location food a few yards from the Hollywood Freeway. "I wear three-piece suits throughout the picture. That's the way the character is supposed to be: Straight. He is a very conservative fellow who is trying to cut the umbilical cord with his domineering mother."

THE MOTHER is Kay Medford, out of "Funny Girl," "Bye, Bye, Birdie" and "The Dean Martin Show." The father is Vincent Gardenia, from "Bang the Drum Slowly" and "The Front Page." The other son is Alan Arkin, who is also directing "Fire Sale." The plot defies description, relating to the current trend of nutty comedies.

The 20th Century-Fox movie was shooting one day at the ordinarily sedate Queen of Angels Hospital in midtown Los Angeles. Reiner, a thinking man's comedian, seemed reluctant to be interviewed, claiming misconstrued quotes of the past. But he relaxed somewhat amid the smoggy roar of the freeway.

"Fire Sale" is his first feature film since beginning "All in the Family" six and a half years ago.

"I'VE HAD other offers, but nothing that would be worth going to Norman Lear and saying, 'Hey, can you let me off for three weeks?'" said Reiner.

"For this script I did it. It wasn't easy to arrange, because Carroll (O'Connor) gets four weeks out of the show, and Sally (Struthers) gets four weeks. For me to be written out of three weeks took a lot of doing. But Norman said, 'If anybody deserves it, it's Rob.'"

Indeed, Reiner and Jean Stapleton have been the steady members of the cast while O'Connor and Struthers have conducted their contract disputes. Reiner can remember being off only a couple of shows, one being the pilot that spawned "Maude."

LIKE HIS father, Carl, Rob Reiner is a complex talent, unwilling to be typed in a single area, yet not rebelling against success. He declines to bad-mouth "All in the Family."

"They're a good group of people," he said, "and I can appreciate them because I have been in some bad companies before. I've had nothing but good times on the show, and last year was more fun than ever before."

"Everyone was relaxed. We had a new director, Paul Bogart, who is an absolute joy, sensitive and understanding. He is lower-keyed, and hence his approach added different values to the characters. He was also good at finding new camera angles in the apartment, not an easy thing to do after six years."

REINER remarked that he was unhappy with "All in the Family" only in the early weeks. O'Connor and Stapleton had made two previous pilots with different performers as Mike and Gloria. Hence the daughter and son-in-law were ill-defined for the talents of Struthers and Reiner.

"For the first six-seven weeks I struggled to get the character," Reiner commented. "After that it was easy."

How much longer will "All in the Family" last? "As long as Carroll wants to do the show, I guess, and he has expressed a desire to go for the eighth season, the one after this. I'd like to do it this year and maybe next; it depends on what's going on for me."

AMONG the possibilities: Two development projects for series with CBS and NBC written with Phil Mishkin. Reiner plans to direct, write and act, a resolve he reached as a 17-year-old at Beverly Hills High School.

"My father did nothing to influence me," he said. "He would probably have discouraged me, since he knew comparisons would be made to him. That was a problem. I made my own personal hell trying to do it on my own. Later things fell in place."

'Gone With the Wind' finally reaches tube

"Gone With the Wind," panoramic Civil War drama, winner of 10 Academy Awards including the 1939 citation for Best Picture, will have its much-anticipated network television premiere in two parts — on NBC as a "Big Event" from 8-11 tonight and from 9 to 11 p.m. Monday on Channel 4.

The internationally acclaimed movie drama, which re-creates Margaret Mitchell's best-selling novel of southern life during the strife-torn war years and the postwar era, features an all-star cast including Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland and Hattie McDaniel.

The film, produced by David O. Selznick and released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was, for nearly three decades, the top-grossing box office attraction in the history of the movie industry.

Miss Leigh won the Best Actress Oscar. She was selected for the role of Scarlett O'Hara following a nationally publicized two-year talent search involving 1,400 actresses.

Hattie McDaniel, who won the Best Supporting Actress award for her portrayal of the devoted Mammy, became the first black performer to be honored by the Motion Picture Academy.

Others who won Oscars for their work on this film were: Victor Fleming (Best Director), Sidney Howard (Best Screenplay), Lyle Wheeler (Best Art Direction), Hal Kern and James Newcomb (Best Film Editing) and Ernest Haller and Ray Rennahan (Best Color Cinematography). Producer Selznick received the Academy's Irving Thalberg Memorial Award.

Among the film's most memorable scenes are the spectacular burning of Atlanta; the tragic view of thousands of wounded soldiers lying unattended at a railroad station; and the tempestuous love scenes between Scarlett (Leigh) and Rhett Butler (Gable). For a generation afterward, people talked about the scene where Rhett leaves the plantation and tells Scarlett, "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn!"

ROB REINER, the son-in-law called "Meathead" by TV's Archie Bunker, gets direction from Alan Arkin during filming of "Fire Sale," a movie in which Reiner plays a very conservative fellow. His mustache and long hair are gone. — AP Wirephoto

Does your family's health coverage provide for catastrophic illness?

Does it give you up to $300,000 in protection?

Does it provide good basic coverage as well?

If you've answered "no" to any of the above, Coronet 365 for individuals and families is the Blue Shield plan for you.

Coronet 365

Coronet 365 is a completely new plan from Blue Shield for individuals and families that offers up to $300,000 in benefits in case of catastrophic illness or injury. If you go to any of Blue Shield's 18,000 physician members, they will accept Blue Shield payments as payment-in-full for their covered services. Some people talk about Government Health Insurance for catastrophic coverage . . . but Blue Shield leads the way by making it available to you — now! Here are some of the benefits: FULL PAYMENT for covered outpatient surgical services and in-hospital medical and surgical services of member physicians (for up to 365 days in the hospital!) UP TO 365 DAYS IN THE HOSPITAL WITH: 80% of charges for semi-private room and 80% of all covered in-hospital extras, such as drugs and x-rays. PLUS! After you meet the annual qualifying requirement for Catastrophic Coverage, such services as: doctors' home and office calls, prescription drugs, complications of pregnancy, private duty nursing, rental of hospital beds and wheel chairs, artificial limbs, insulin, and disabilities such as mental disorders.

ACT NOW! There's much more to Blue Shield's Coronet 365 than we can possibly tell you on a single page. So fill out the coupon below and mail it in for more information about Coronet 365. Give yourself and your family peace of mind . . . today!

ARE CONCRETE SWIMMING POOLS OBSOLETE?

Judge for yourself!
This is a SAN JUAN fiberglass, one piece swimming pool being lowered into the prepared ground! A beautiful, full-sized pool with a permanently smooth, non-abrasive finish that algae simply cannot invade! Only one of the reasons why up to 90% of old fashioned cement pools' maintenance effort and expense can be eliminated.

The SAN JUAN POOL comes, in several sizes (shown here, 16 by 34 feet); equipped as you wish and priced demonstrably fairer than a plaster/concrete pool. It's longer lasting, too, because fiberglass, 12 times stronger than concrete, is forever. Colorful, it never needs painting! Moulded in the plant in one piece, in one incredible process, the SAN JUAN has a structural, yet flexible strength that has withstood four major earthquakes. Its smooth finish makes contact a pleasure, not a scratch. Much faster, easier to install... before investing in any pool get the complete story, including color photos of local installations. Get the concrete pool story, too... it only makes ours better!

P.S. Off season, winter prices now in effect! Save importantly.

CRITICS' CORNER

By LEE WINFREY
Knight News Service

PHILADELPHIA — "Serpico" reminds me of the Bible's Gadarene swine: Of all the new television series this fall, no other has plunged so quickly from a level of potential quality down into a pigsty of muck.

I find it impossible to decide whether the Oct. 29 segment of this crime series was most reprehensible because of its preposterous plot, its contempt for women, its psychotic violence, or its lubricious vulgarity. So I'll just tell you a few of the things that happened in the episode entitled "Prime Evil."

1. Frank Serpico was assigned to catch a loan shark named Alex Demico. So he went to an illegal gambling joint operated by Demico, showed his police badge at the door, and was admitted to shoot dice. He quickly lost $23,000.

I laughed out loud. The number of gambling joint operators who would willingly let a policeman they did not know inside to gamble, and thus easily gather evidence, is probably smaller than the number of people who thought Lester Maddox would be elected president of the United States this year.

The number who would let an ordinary policeman have $23,000 in credit is probably smaller.

Serpico be needed on the case at all? How could he get closer to Demico than Sgt. Wagner already is, or into a better position to gather evidence?

3. The dialogue involving Sgt. Wagner was, almost without exception, cheap vulgarity. Demico's name for her was "Panty Hose." In the middle of the show, after calling her a "cheap slut," he watched while a henchman raped her.

Afterward the script added a contribution to the old myth, which so many women are fighting against these days, that rape victims enjoy being assaulted. Sgt. Wagner told Serpico, "It was like I wanted him to do it. Like I needed it."

But she went back on the case. Serpico asked her, "He turned you out (of his house)? How are you going to get back in?" Sgt. Wagner replied, "The way he wants it: On my knees."

4. After working over Sgt. Wagner, and earlier having his henchmen break the hands of a physician who was behind in his loan payments, Demico set out at the high point of the show to kill Sgt. Wagner with a crossbow. He told his chief plug ugly, "C'mon, you can pick up the garbage."

Demico got his comeuppance, though. Sgt. Wagner jumped him from behind and killed him with karate. With a sigh of relief, she fell at show's end into Serpico's embrace.

Richard Danus deserves special mention for this episode. He wrote it.

The censors at NBC deserve special mention, too. They passed this trash for public broadcast.

2. Serpico was told that his contact inside the Demico operation would be a policewoman, Detective Sgt. Marion Wagner. She was living with Demico, functioning as his mistress.

I could scarcely believe they were trying to peddle such a plot line. In the first place, police departments do not assign policewomen to sleep with suspects in order to get information. The women would justifiably object, and doubtless the husbands of those who are married would object loudly also.

In the second place, if Sgt. Wagner is making love to Demico, why would

Morita still laughs

By JAY SHARBUTT

AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (U) — On the final night of "Mr. T. and Tina" on ABC, Pat Morita, star of the canceled show, was at an awards dinner here for James Komack, whose company made the program.

You wouldn't know the series was dead by looking at Morita. He laughed, cracked jokes, gave no hint of gloom. His only regret is that, as a guest speaker, he didn't have enough time for just one more joke.

"I would have said many people offered me condolences for being off the air," he said. "And that people asked me why they took 'T. and Tina' off. I had no answer. So I went to Mr. Komack."

"I said, 'Jimmy, why'd they take us off?' He says, 'Bad ratings.' I say, 'Why'd we get bad ratings?' He says, 'Well, we were on in a very bad time slot. People were still up.'"

THUS SPAKE Pat Morita, stand-up comedian, actor, native of Berkeley, Calif., and a performer now getting his nightclub act back in shape while doing a guest TV shot now and then.

A series cancellation has been known to cause a star deep depression, not to mention repossession of the family Rolls-Royce. But Morita shrugs off his program's demise as part of the hazards of show biz.

He said he hadn't expected the ax to fall so quickly, despite the comedy's low ratings, but added: "Hey, things happen. It's that kind of business."

In two years, Manson could be your next door neighbor.

Shocking as it may seem, in 1978 Charles Manson can apply for parole. Should he get out?

Be watching tonight as Eyewitness News Reporter Chuck Henry begins an intense four-part series on Manson.

You'll hear Paul Crockett, the only man Charlie was afraid of and tried to kill three times. Dr. Louis West, a brainwashing expert, will talk about "programmed killers" and how our society is breeding more Mansons every day.

Finally, you'll see the latest interview with Charlie himself, as he describes his own grisly philosophy.

Don't miss this fascinating Eyewitness Closeup. After all, in two years Charlie and his friends could be the family next door.

ABC AFTERSCHOOL SPECIAL (7), 4:00 p.m. — "P.J. and the President's Son." Lance Kerwin stars in the dual role of Preston and P.J., the story of identical 15-year-olds, one an American President's son, and how they trade places. A modernization of Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper."

MOVIE (4), 8:00 p.m. — "The Great Waldo Pepper." Stars Robert Redford in the title role as a barnstorming stunt pilot in the 1920s, whose thirst for action and determination to make up for his wartime defeat by a German air ace culminates in an all-too-real rematch staged as part of a Hollywood movie.

MOVIE (2), 9:00 p.m. — "Death Wish." Charles Bronson stars in a drama of one man's vendetta against crime in the streets. (Due to mature theme, viewer discretion advised.)

THEATER IN AMERICA (28), 9:00 p.m. — "Taming of the Shrew." The American Conservatory Theatre of San Francisco presents this comic Shakespeare classic.

Advent's VideoBeam® 750 Brings Football (And Everything Else) To Life in Your Living Room.

Advent's VideoBeam® 750 is a totally new kind of color TV set. Its 6-foot diagonal measure picture is more than 15 times the size of the picture most people watch at home.

It brings you TV as you've never seen it. Alive. Involving. In the room instead of in the box.

The VideoBeam 750 is a unique two-piece TV set. Its console unit (about the size of an end table) projects the picture onto a separate screen.

It's as easy to operate as a standard color set. And its big picture is bright and clear. You can watch in ordinary light in an ordinary room.

Until you see Advent color television, you really haven't seen television.

THE BIBLE

Says

J. T. SMITH

DEATH-BED SALVATION

In the past week, I have received two letters wanting to know what I believe about a person who is "saved but cannot be baptized." It is obvious that I have still not made my point clear about one being saved according to the teachings of the Bible. According to my understanding of the Scriptures, there is no person saved who has not been baptized!

This, I am sure, brings up a number of questions. However, I have some questions also. Where, after the Lord's death, burial, and resurrection did He ever promise to save anyone until he had obeyed all that the Lord had commanded him to do? What did the Lord command?

BELIEVE - BAPTIZED - SAVED

Mark 16:16

Notice where the "saved" is in this passage. It comes after baptism.

REPENT - BAPTIZED - REMISSION OF SINS

Acts 2:38

Now where is "remission of sins" promised in this passage? It comes after baptism.

ARISE - BAPTIZED - WASH AWAY SINS

Acts 22:16

Please observe where "sins being washed away" is said to take place in this passage. It is after he was told to be baptized.

In all of these passages where baptism is commanded, salvation always comes about as a result of one believing, repenting, and being baptized. I do not know of any time that one was said to be saved, have the remission of sins, or is said to have his sins washed away before he did all of these things. By what authority, then would I have the right to tell a person that he is saved before he is baptized? I would have none. By what authority do other preachers tell people they are saved before they are baptized? And, where is the passage that so states that one was said to be saved, receive remission of sins, had his sins washed away before he was baptized? I am still waiting for the passage.

Jerry Lewis a host on NBC's 'First 50 Years'

Jerry Lewis, who with Dean Martin made his TV debut on NBC in 1950, has been set as a host for NBC Television Network's "The First Fifty Years," the special saluting NBC's 50 years of broadcasting, to be on "The Big Event" Sunday, Nov. 21, from 7 to 11:30 p.m.

Lewis joins other hosts including Johnny Carson, Dean Martin, Gene Kelly, Angie Dickinson, George C. Scott, Gregory Peck, Jack Albertson, Freddie Prinze, Bob Hope, David Brinkley, Joe Garagiola and Don Meredith. Orson Welles will narrate the four-and-a-half-hour special.

Jerry, who made his professional debut at the age of 5, zoomed to national acclaim when he and Martin teamed in Atlantic City's 500 Club in 1946. In less than a year, their salaries went from $350 to $5,000 a week.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

JUDITH CAMPBELL IN 1960

Q. I am amazed reading about the extramarital affair the late President John F. Kennedy had with Judith Campbell. Where were the assignments held—in the White House? And did not Kennedy realize that Judy Campbell was reporting each time to the late Sam Giancana, head of the Chicago Mafia? Really! This whole thing is so shockingly sordid it is beyond my comprehension. Why didn't the Secret Service do something about it? Surely they must have known that Kennedy was playing around?—Mrs. J. B. W., Philadelphia.

A. Before he was elected President, John F. Kennedy was introduced to Judith Campbell by Frank Sinatra in Las Vegas. Later, in Miami, Sinatra introduced Judith Campbell to Sam Giancana of the Mafia. He introduced Giancana as Sam Flood. For many months the showgirl did not know Giancana's real name or his position as leader of the Chicago crime syndicate. Judith Campbell's first assignment with Kennedy, then a U.S. Senator, took place in the Plaza Hotel, New York City, about March 7, 1960. After Kennedy was elected President in November, 1960, further assignments took place in the White House and elsewhere. The Secret Service, charged with guarding Kennedy, surely knew of the liaison but was powerless to prevent it, since extracurricular sex activity did not endanger Kennedy's life.

Reportedly, Judith Campbell told Giancana of her affair with Kennedy. Giancana did not mind sharing her favors with the President. He may well have thought of using his knowledge to blackmail Kennedy at some later date. The CIA also made the monumental error during that same period of enlisting Giancana and his late henchman John Rosselli in efforts to assassinate Fidel Castro of Cuba.

FBI agents subsequently wiretapped Giancana, learned about his and Kennedy's sexual relationships with Judith Campbell. They reported it to J. Edgar Hoover. Director Hoover in turn reported it to Robert Kennedy, then Attorney General of the U.S. Hoover also notified President Kennedy of the Giancana-Campbell relationship. Kennedy thereupon severed his friendship, not only with Judith Campbell, but with Frank Sinatra as well.

Q. What is the marital status of heavyweight boxer Muhammad Ali? Didn't one of his girlfriends just give birth to a baby by him?—Morton Ingliss, Chicago.

A. Khalilah Ali, married to Ali for nine years, filed suit in Chicago recently for divorce on grounds of mental cruelty and desertion. They have four children. Ali acknowledges that he is the father of an illegitimate daughter born Aug. 6, 1976, to his long-time traveling lover, Veronica Porche. The baby girl, Hana Yasmeen Ali, was born in Berrien (Mich.) General Hospital, according to a parenthood certificate filed with the Berrien County registrar of deeds.

VERONICA PORCHE AND MUHAMMAD ALI

Q. I've been told that people in the hometown of the late Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery speak disparagingly of his memory. True?—Victor Newmarket, New York City.

A. They consider Montgomery "cheap and niggardly" in Bentley, England. Montgomery, who died there in March, 1976, at age 88, left $270,000 in his will. Of that sum, he bequeathed only $165 each to five members of the Cox family, who spent their entire working lives in his service. Apart from this bequest, the Montgomery estate went to Monty's son, the new Viscount of Alamein. Michael Cox, Monty's chauffeur, said of him: "Monty never gave more than he had to. What he left our family is a paltry sum. It will pay for a few rounds of beer."

Q. Is it true that the two highest-paid baseball players are both black?—Ron Gamble, Birmingham, Ala.

A. Hank Aaron, now retired, was paid $240,000 in 1976 by the Milwaukee Brewers, Dick Allen $225,000 by the Philadelphia Phillies. Both are black and reportedly the highest-salaried players in big league baseball last season.

Q. Has anyone in this country made more money from broadcasting than Lowell Thomas, who is 84? I am told he is worth $100 million. True?—K. G., Pawling, N.Y.

A. Lowell Thomas has earned millions as a broadcaster, but it was not until the mid-50's—when he helped found Capital Cities Communications—that he could amass his present fortune, estimated at $10-15 million. Capital Cities owns some 14 radio and TV stations, also newspapers in Fort Worth, Tex., Pontiac, Mich., and Belleville, Ill. Capital Cities also owns Fairchild Trade Papers, which publishes Women's Wear Daily, Home Furnishings Daily, and other trade papers of that ilk. At last count, Lowell Thomas owned approximately 175,000 shares of Capital Cities stock, worth more than $8.5 million.

Q. Why has Susan Ford moved out of the White House—because she is tired of Secret Service surveillance?—Monty Campbell, Charlotte, N. C.

A. Susan Ford and three other sophomores from Mt. Vernon Junior College for Women have moved into an Alexandria, Va., townhouse, the basement of which houses the Secret Service persons assigned to guard Susan. So long as she is the President's daughter, Susan cannot escape the Secret Service. None of the Ford children particularly likes living in the White House.

With Prince Bernhard in Dutch, God Save the Queen!

by Lloyd Shearer

Holland's Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard watch a parade. He had to resign defense and business posts for his role in Lockheed bribery case. However, the government will raise his 1977 pay 16 percent to $355,400 and Juliana's 7 percent to $1.7 million. The money is taxable, in contrast to salaries paid British Royalty.

THE HAGUE, HOLLAND.

Hurt deeply by the scandal involving Prince Bernhard, 65, who played hanky-panky with Lockheed, Northrop, and other U.S. aircraft manufacturers, Queen Juliana, 67, is expected to abdicate the Dutch throne next year.

She probably will be succeeded by her daughter, Crown Princess Beatrix, 38, whose image and reputation contrast sharply with those of her shy and kindly mother.

Beatrix is considered haughty, snobbish, imperious, sharp-tongued, and not nearly as popular with the Dutch people as Juliana, who, after living in exile in Canada and London, ascended the throne in 1948. The Dutch people came rapidly to love this hefty, plain-looking, bicycle-riding queen.

Juliana, who dislikes pomp and pageantry, is nervous and self-conscious in front of photographers. No beauty, she gave birth to four daughters—one half-blind—and the Dutch people have always empathized with her solemn and stolid ways. They may have heard about her husband's reputation as the secret playboy of the Western World, but they made no big thing about it—at least not until the Lockheed scandal broke.

Now they are faced with the prospect of a new queen Beatrix, a graduate of the University of Leiden, who set off a furor in 1966 when she—like her mother—married a German. He is Claus von Amsberg, who served during World War II in one of Hitler's panzer divisions. When Beatrix and Claus were married, many Dutch executives boycotted the ceremony, and the Dutch people demonstrated in the streets of Amsterdam.

First male heir

However, von Amsberg and Beatrix produced a son, Prince Willem-Alexander, the first male heir to the Dutch throne in 77 years. Moreover, von Amsberg is a low-key personality. And the people seem to have warmed to him because he learned to speak fluent Dutch and stayed clear of internecine politics and business affairs.

There is a possibility that Crown Princess Beatrix may not accept the Dutch throne in 1977 if her father, Prince Bernhard, is subjected to continued humiliations by further disclosures of his many past activities. In that case, her son, Prince Willem-Alexander, 9, would become king of the Netherlands and a regency would rule until Willem became 18.

CONGRESSIONAL AGE PROFILE

Senior citizens of this nation have a powerful lobby in the U.S. Senate. Although those Americans over 65 constitute a little more than 10% of the country's population, their members make up 24% of the Senate.

A study of the 94th Congress, which adjourned last month, reveals that less than 12% of the House members are senior citizens, which reflects approximately the national proportion.

Herewith an age breakdown of the 94th Congress:

Age	House	Senate
25-34	24	1
35-44	90	11
45-54	157	33
55-64	110	31
65-74	43	18
75-84	7	6

In the 94th Congress, the median age in the Senate was 56, in the House, 50.

NAVY SPY SHIP

No one wants the Glomar Explorer, the salvage ship used by the Central Intelligence Agency to recover half of a Soviet submarine in 1974.

As a result, the U.S. Navy has taken over the 618-foot ship.

For the past two years, the government tried unsuccessfully to find another federal agency that might use the $65 million ship, but no agency wanted it. So the government asked the General Services Administration (GSA) to sell or lease it. GSA offered Glomar at $30,000 a day, but no one would touch the ship, which is equipped to lift 2000 tons a day from 20,000-foot depths.

The Glomar Explorer, built by the government in secret cooperation with the late Howard Hughes, will be mothballed at Suisun Bay, Cal., after another $2 million is spent on preserving its engines and secret equipment.

The Glomar Explorer will be equated with the failure of a mission by the CIA. Nothing especially worthwhile was found on the half of the Soviet submarine that was salvaged from the Pacific.

FRANCO FADING Generalissimo Francisco Franco -- who was buried last November in the basilica of the Valley of the Fallen, a monument to the civil war dead, 60 miles from Madrid -- is rapidly fading from the memories of the Spaniards he ruled for almost 40 years.

Crowds of visitors who once thronged his grave have given way to a mere trickle. Franco is buried in a vault on which the only inscription is his name.

More people visit his El Pardo residence in Madrid, a 32-room, 16th-century palace that has been turned into a museum. The entrance bears a plaque which reads: "El Caudillo worked tirelessly for the peace, well-being, prosperity and enhancement of the fatherland."

The showpiece of the residence is Franco's bedroom, spotted with glass cases which display 10 of his most splendid uniforms. Franco was a little man, 5-foot-3, who loved to dress in military gaud.

Spanish postage stamps and coins bearing his image are rapidly being replaced by new ones with the portrait of King Juan Carlos. The king hasn't visited Franco's gravesite since the funeral.

Of the World War II dictators -- Hitler, Stalin, Franco, Mussolini, Chiang Kai-shek -- none survive. Mao Tse-tung came into power in China in 1949, and Tito of Yugoslavia consolidated his power a year later. Only Tito, wracked by hepatitis, continues.

SWISS BANK SECRECY

Bank secrecy has broad public support in Switzerland, according to a public-opinion poll conducted by the Isopublic Institute of Zurich.

Approximately 63% of those people questioned favor retaining bank secrecy, while 27% want it abolished.

Bank secrecy has been a way of business life in Switzerland since 1934. The law making it possible was adopted then mainly to protect Jewish depositors from reprisals in Germany. In the 1930's Hitler ordered the death penalty for anyone transferring money abroad without authorization. To protect those people who did, Switzerland later introduced numbered bank accounts as a common practice. It is still in force, although the law on bank secrecy no longer applies to criminal and bankruptcy investigations. It does, however, apply to agents investigating tax-evasion cases. They are barred from examining bank accounts.

The poll on bank secrecy was paid for by Swiss Credit Bank, one of the country's three largest.

NUNS' RIGHTS

Italian nuns know their rights and mean to exercise them. Several months ago a bank in Bologna bought an institution in which several nuns had worked for years. Overnight the sisters found themselves out on the street. Seventeen applied for unemployment insurance.

Lawyers for the bank argued in court that the nuns were ineligible for such benefits because their work was purely humanitarian, not financial. However, the court ruled that nuns, like all Italian workers, were included in the laws and therefore deserved unemployment compensation. In Italy approximately 150,000 nuns are employed in nursing and child care facilities.

JEANNE CORDELIER

'BED SELLERS'

The confessions of two active French prostitutes have made the list of best sellers in Paris. The memoirs of Jeanne Cordelier, 32, entitled "Derobade" (The Dodge), sold more than 250,000 copies in four months and is No. 1 on the list at this writing.

The other "bed seller" is "Ulla About Ulla," which has sold 100,000 copies.

Unfortunately, it seems the practice of writing about their lives throws these young women into fits of severe depression.

The prostitute who calls

'ULLA': THAT'S WHAT SHE CALLS HERSELF

herself Ulla has just recovered from her second suicide attempt, while Jeanne Cordelier admits, "The more I write, the more obsessed I become with suicide. A good pistol, blood and brains which spurt out on the wall--that's what I think and write about."

Why have these seamy confessions proved so popular in France? They are not only sex-ridden, they are frequently humorous. Jeanne Cordelier writes that after engaging in amorous exercises, the Japanese immediately wash themselves with Scotch.

SUICIDE

West Berlin and Hungary have the highest suicide rates in the world, according to incomplete statistics of the World Health Organization.

WHO reports that an international comparison of suicide rates is of "questionable value" so long as the reporting methods of specific countries vary widely. The report, however, does reveal some interesting trends.

In 1970, for example, in West Berlin 67.5 men per 100,000 and 33.8 women per 100,000 took their own lives--15 and 30 times higher, respectively, than in Mexico.

But statisticians consider Mexico's suicide statistics unreliable because of that country's religious constraints.

Greece is the European country with the lowest suicide rate. Hungary, a country where many years ago a melancholy pop tune caused hundreds of people to take their lives, leads the suicide list with rates of 63.8 for men and 23.8 for women.

In an accompanying commentary, the WHO report adds that East Germany, Denmark, Hungary, Austria, Finland, Sweden, and Czechoslovakia are the European countries which consistently have high suicide rates.

HUGHES PROJECT STALLED

earlier this year, Hollywood was most eager to film his biography. Warner Brothers moved rapidly, believing that Paramount was about to sign a $2 million deal with actor-producer Warren Beatty.

Warners agreed to pay Beatty $1,750,000 plus 10% of the gross for his treatment, hoping eventually to make a co-production deal with Paramount. Apparently Beatty signed with Warners. But now the studio is in no great hurry to get started on the project because the Howard Hughes story has not yet ended. No one seems to know who will inherit Hughes' $2 billion estate. And even more important, not too many people seem to care.

MAZDA MAKING U.S. COMEBACK

Four years ago, Mazda,

Japan's rotary-engine car, burst on the U.S. market with surprising success.

It offered a rotary engine, light and compact, with fewer moving parts than the piston engine. Sales were brisk, and the U.S. rapidly became Mazda's second largest export market. Then came 1973 and the energy crisis, and it was shown that Mazdas consumed too much fuel. Sales plummeted. Of the 512 U.S. dealerships that sold Mazdas exclusively, only a few survived.

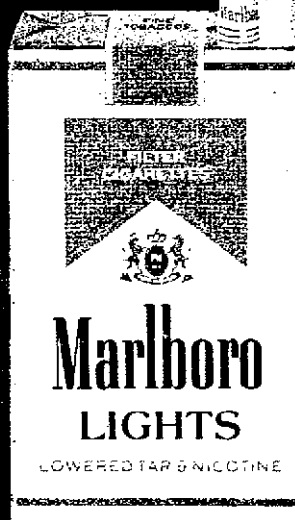

Mazda's parent company, Toyo Kogyo Ltd. of Hiroshima, hopes to make a U.S. comeback with its $7000 luxury model, Cosmo. The company insists that its faith in the rotary engine remains unshakable. "It will eventually become," says corporation president Kohei Matsuda, "the dominant power plant of the future."

General Motors, which bought the rights to the Wankel rotary engine, has suspended production plans. Mazda is the only mass-produced car in the world with a rotary engine.

The World's Greatest Athlete Chases the Big Money

by L.H. Whittemore

Decathlon gold medalist Bruce Jenner and his wife Chrystie are keeping in shape. It is estimated he can make $2 million from TV commercials alone.

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Will success spoil Bruce Jenner? That's the question being asked about the 27-year-old American who was proclaimed "the world's greatest athlete" after winning the decathlon at the Montreal Olympics last summer.

Among those asking it are Jenner himself and his beautiful blonde wife Chrystie.

Says Bruce: "Our lives have changed drastically. I'd like to think it's all for the good, but there have been some drawbacks."

Says 26-year-old Chrystie, who dropped out of college and worked as a United Airlines stewardess to help support her husband while he trained for the decathlon: "Sometimes I'd give my eyeteeth to be back where we were."

For more than three months now the Jenners have been plunged into a grueling round of travels, interviews, screen tests and meetings with agents, producers and promoters that make the 10 track and field events of the decathlon almost seem like a cakewalk in comparison.

They've even added a third member to their team—a 37-year-old bachelor named George Wallach, who has taken over as "personal manager" for the star athlete. Wallach, at whose home in Beverly Hills the couple is staying, is blunt in describing the kind of life he sees ahead for Jenner.

"Bruce can be a one-man business, like Arnold Palmer," he exclaims. "I hate to sound so commercial, but even though Bruce Jenner is a human being, he's also a product. We're making the conversion from 'jock' to 'personality.'" (Last month he signed a contract with ABC to appear on several shows.)

Wallach has estimated that Jenner can make $2 million from TV commercials alone. Among the products under consideration for his endorsement have been automobiles, motorcycles, various foods, men's toiletries and clothing. Another item would be dog food, promoted by the couple's three-year-old Labrador, Bertha, that used to run with Bruce as he trained.

Even dog in the act

"We could feature her as 'the most physically fit dog in the world,'" Wallach points out.

Beyond the commercials, however, there is a delicate problem. Like Mark Spitz, who won seven gold medals for swimming in the 1972 Olympics, Jenner is faced with the possibility of quickly fizzling out as a celebrity. The solution, both he and Wallach feel, is to refrain from "jumping too fast" into too many promotions. That was Spitz's big mistake, in their view, causing him to lose out over the long haul.

continued

Becoming "the world's greatest athlete" at the Montreal Olympics, Jenner couldn't restrain his joy. Overnight, he was an international celebrity.

1. The Fresh Lemon. It does more for and with vegetables than anything in your kitchen. Read on for proof.

2. Lemon Butter. One of the world's great tastes. Just melt  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup butter or margarine. Add grated peel and juice from  $\frac{1}{4}$  fresh lemon; heat. Delicious over any cooked vegetable.

3. Green Beans with Lemon. In small bowl combine  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup dressing with grated peel and juice from  $\frac{1}{4}$  fresh lemon; heat. Serve over hot cooked green beans. Delicious chilled, too.

4. Fresh & Fast Salad Dressing. Use your favorite packaged salad dressing mix, but add fresh lemon juice instead of vinegar. Tastes fresher, zippier, better.

5. Corn on the Cob. Rub with juice from  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup lemon and  $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. salt. Add slowly to 3 egg yolks, beating constantly.

Corn on the Cob. Season cooked corn by rubbing with a wedge of cut lemon. Add butter and salt, if you like. (A sprinkle of grated Parmesan cheese makes a tangy variation.)

6. Peas with Lemon and Bacon. Toss 3 slices bacon until crisp. Remove and crumble. To drippings add 2 (2 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained, juice from  $\frac{1}{4}$  fresh lemon, 1 tbsp. sugar, 2 tsp. instant minced onion and  $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. salt. Stir in 1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen peas, cooked and drained; heat. Garnish with bacon and lemon. Serves 3 to 4.

7. Caesar Salad Supreme. To  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup olive or salad oil add 1 small clove garlic, minced; Toss 2 medium heads romaine lettuce, torn in pieces, with garlic-oil, 1 tsp. salt and freshly ground pepper to taste. Break 1 coddled egg over salad; squeeze on juice from 2 fresh lemons. Add 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce and 6 anchovy fillets (optional); toss well. Add 1 cup croutons and  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup grated Parmesan cheese; toss lightly. Serves 6 to 8.

8. Lemony Dip for Fresh Raw Vegetables. Combine 1 cup sour cream with juice from  $\frac{1}{4}$  fresh lemon,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup crumbled blue cheese and  $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. onion salt. Garnish with parsley and lemon.

The greening of TV. Television quality gets better tonight, as Masterpiece Theatre presents the first episode in Richard Llewellyn's classic, "How Green Was My Valley." Times may change, but the warmth, conflicts and physical hardships of a Welsh coal miner's family have an enduring quality—which is why Llewellyn's novel lends itself so well to this new adaptation for television. The six-part series stars Stanley Baker, Sian Phillips and Rhys Powys: father, mother and son coping with life. Underwritten by a grant from Mobil, Masterpiece Theatre is seen over PBS stations. Later in the season, it will bring back the Bellamys and their servants in "Upstairs, Downstairs" against a background of the Roaring Twenties.

What doth it profit a man? About a nickel on every sales dollar, whether he runs a giant corporation or a neighborhood hardware store. According to latest statistics from Robert Morris Associates, the national association of bank loan and credit officers, a typical hardware store makes $13,200 a year on sales of $300,000, after salaries, including the owner's, are paid. That's a profit of 4.4 percent on sales, and 16.8 percent on "shareholders' equity," assuming the business has a net worth of about $80,000. Meanwhile, a study by Citibank put the profit of leading manufacturers last year at 4.4 percent of sales, 12.3 percent on the basis of shareholders' equity. Interestingly, a major research organization found that many people think these companies make as much as 33 cents on every sales dollar.

Nobody's perfect. Which is why we get so many opportunities to tweak the noses of governmental agencies. On the other hand, sometimes an agency has a kudo coming. Like the Commission on Federal Paperwork, which has been instrumental in passing legislation calling for annual reporting of employee wages, rather than the present quarterly method. If carried out at the state level, too, the new law could save employers—especially small businessmen—millions of hours and some $250 million annually, says the Commission. It will also reduce the Federal Government's paper load by approximately 24 million pages, and save Uncle Sam $20 million a year.

Up to the Summer Games, Bruce and Chrystie had been sole partners in his career. Now they also have a personal manager, George Wallach of Beverly Hills, in their lives. While they sort out news clippings, Wallach deals with agents and advertisers.

ATHLETE CONTINUED

Not until mid-September did Jenner actually capitalize on his overnight stardom. For a guest shot on the Bill Cosby TV show, he earned $7500 after a day's taping session. Otherwise, he played in two celebrity tennis tournaments, both for charity, appeared on the Jerry Lewis Telethon for muscular dystrophy, went on the Tonight Show, and accepted an invitation to the White House.

In August, Bruce and Chrystie flew to Rome so that he could screen-test for the title role in Superman. He failed to get the part, apparently because he photographed too young.

But Jenner maintains an easygoing posture. "Nothing is the end of the world," he says. The worry and planning have been left largely to George Wallach and Chrystie.

"The other night," she says, "the three of us stayed up late, talking about the future. Suddenly I realized that George and I were mostly talking to each other. I kept saying, 'Bruce, we're discussing you! What's your opinion?' Well, he was listening, but unfortunately he doesn't put a whole lot of value on his own ideas. For that reason, he's easily influenced."

Jenner himself admits, "I'm the doer, while Chrystie is the thinker." But he is keenly aware that her adjustment to the whirlwind is just as difficult, maybe more complex than his own.

"Our relationship has become more complicated," he says. "Up until the Olympics, Chrystie and I were like partners. Then suddenly the Games were over. And mainly it's been me getting into new things, while she's been left behind somewhat."

Life more complex

The questions, for Chrystie, go like this: How much does Bruce still need her to participate in his career? Can she develop a career of her own? What is her role, now that so many facets of their lives have changed?

Are you still smoking?

In the years since the criticism against smoking first appeared, many people have given up cigarettes. But many more people haven't.

And that's who we'd like to talk to. That even larger group of people who are still smoking today.

If you're still a smoker, you've probably heard the charges leveled against 'tar' and nicotine. You may have become concerned. And chances are you even tried to do something about it. Like trying several of those empty-tasting low 'tar' and nicotine cigarettes.

If you're like a lot of other smokers, you probably went right back to your old brand, and concluded that a good-tasting low 'tar' and nicotine cigarette has never been invented.

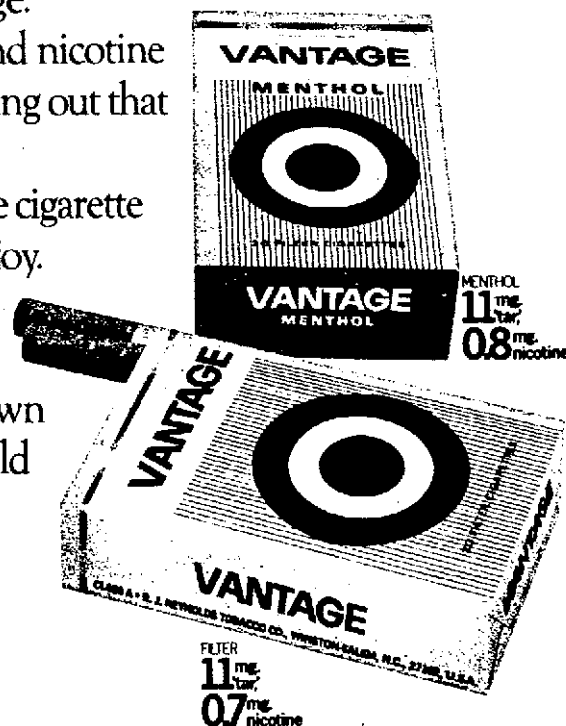

Well, if that's the case, you haven't tried Vantage.

Vantage cuts down substantially on the 'tar' and nicotine you may have become concerned about. Without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavor you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you can smoke. But it may well be the lowest you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

So, if you still smoke, but would like to cut down on 'tar' and nicotine, Vantage is one cigarette you should seriously consider.

ATHLETE CONTINUED

Bruce, a graduate of Newton High in Connecticut (where the stadium has been named in his honor), met Chrystie in 1968, when they both were freshmen at Graceland College in Lamoni, Iowa. At the Summer Olympic Games in 1972 at Munich, he finished 10th in the decathlon. That December, they were married. And one of her unspoken vows was to help her husband in his single-minded quest for the gold medal nearly four years away.

After Bruce's graduation from college, the couple moved to San Jose, where he worked on commission as an insurance salesman; but mainly they lived on Chrystie's stewardess salary of $900 a month. While Bruce trained up to eight hours a day, Chrystie also took charge of family finances, arranged for his travels to various competitions and coped with the intense psychological strain of living with an obsession.

By 1975, Chrystie was seeing a therapist who, over six months, "taught me some skills to cope with things that can get you down." She also turned to the feminist movement, learning to be more assertive about her own feelings and needs. Bruce, however, suffered a setback requiring even more of his wife's support.

"He got cold feet," Chrystie recalls. "One night he said to me, 'Look, the gold medal isn't that big a deal. We've got to put it into perspective. We can't put all our eggs into this one basket.' So we stayed up until 3 a.m., talking, and we came to grips with how badly we both wanted that medal. I wanted it for me, too, by that time, because I'd lived it right along with him. I dreamed of myself throwing the discus."

Overcoming fear

As they talked, Bruce argued that he had "nothing to fall back on" if he failed to win the decathlon. "He experienced the fear that has ruined champions in the past," as Chrystie puts it. "I told him, 'Bruce, you've got to be so hungry for it that nothing else matters. You've got to eat, drink and sleep it. If you don't win the medal, we'll pick up the pieces afterward. But you can't plan ahead that way.'"

Jenner followed her advice as if his life depended on it. At Montreal, he earned 8618 decathlon points—164 more than any predecessor, his face radiating the pain and glory of victory.

"For a while after," Chrystie recalls, "I started thinking that I was the star, too. I just got caught up in all the attention. It can get out of proportion. I don't want to settle for thrills from someone else's experience. I realize that my husband's achievements aren't mine. I'm just not a follower."

Now, when they arrive at a party or public event, Bruce is always mobbed by fans. "I head for another part of the room," Chrystie says. And she's even feeling like "the third wheel" in the relationship between herself, Bruce and manager Wallach. "I call them 'the dynamic duo,'" she jokes. "I'm constantly following them around, listening to 'Bruce Jenner this' and 'Bruce Jenner that.' Well, sometimes I get up to here with Bruce Jenner!"

A wife's problem

It's a problem that only the wife of a superstar can fully appreciate. On the one hand, Chrystie would like to be a talk-show hostess on television, doing her own thing. She'll probably make some commercials by herself, promoting women's clothing or sunglasses, "but you won't see me washing Bruce's magic socks," she quips.

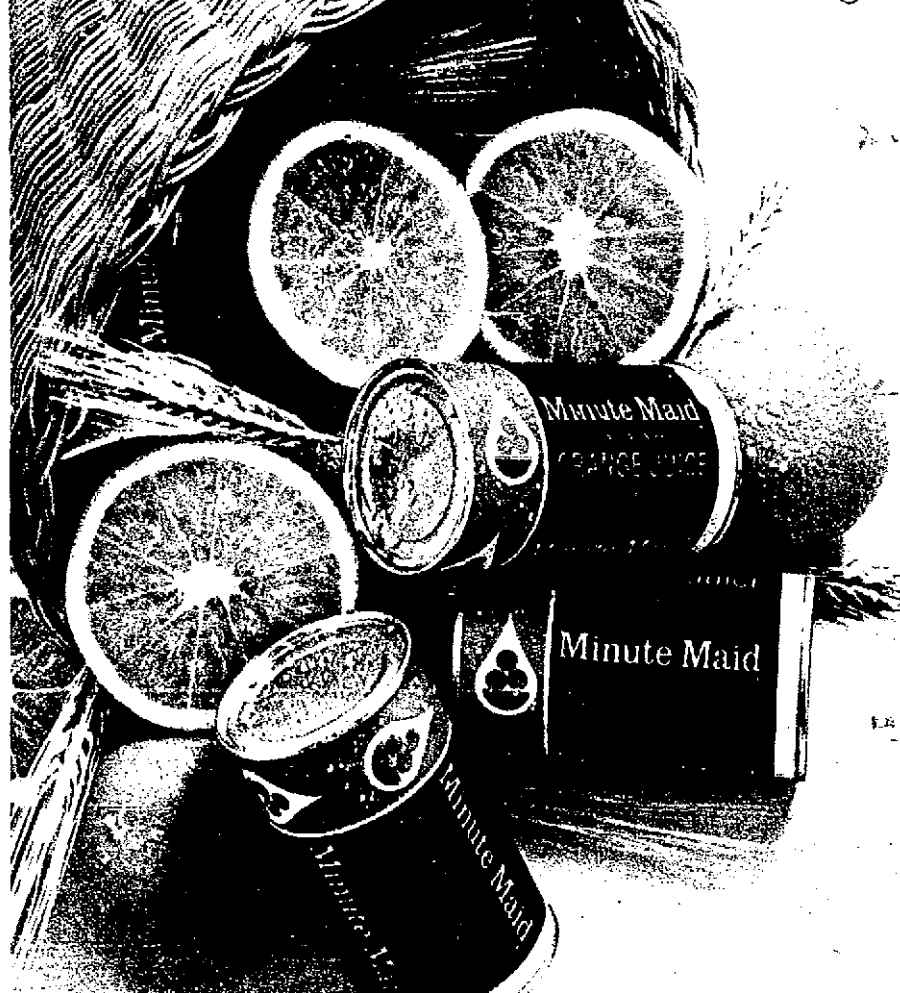

On the other hand, she would like to raise a family and return to their "normal" life of the past. "I have a fear of Hollywood and Beverly Hills," she says. "We have to keep our heads above all this. We don't want the public's need for Bruce Jenner to determine what he is, or what we are. The burning thing in me is to remember who we are and what's always made us happy—like just staying home with each other, for instance."

Much has happened to this young couple in the last several months, but much more, albeit in a less dramatic way, will happen in the next few years. Right now they are asking questions and groping for answers.

Over a quiet breakfast, Bruce and Chrystie talk seriously of how their lives have become a whirlwind. "Sometimes," she laments, "I would give my eyeteeth to be back where we were."

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Young Motherhood

One of the most imprudent things a girl of 17 or younger can do is to become a mother. Young motherhood, in fact, is a serious handicap in today's society.

A six-year study headed by University of Pennsylvania sociologist Frank Furstenberg Jr., comparing the life adjustment of 404 Baltimore girls who became mothers at 17 or younger to 301 classmates who postponed child-bearing until later, shows that young mothers are far more likely to:

- Drop out of school, even though they wanted more education;
- Suffer unemployment, poverty, and welfare dependency;
- Have further pregnancies in their teens;
- Endure breakup of their marriages because of economic pressures.

Furstenberg concludes that most teen-age pregnancies are unwanted and could have been prevented by available community-based fertility-control services.

His study appears in the current issue of Family Planning Perspectives, which carries another article, this one by Frederick S. Jaffe and Joy G. Dryfoos, reporting that each year a million girls aged 15-19 in the U.S. get pregnant—with two-thirds of such pregnancies unintended.

Girls below age 15 account for an additional 30,000 pregnancies. Six in 10 of these end in live births, three in 10 in induced abortions, the rest in miscarriages. More than one-third of all these births are out of wedlock.

OLYMPIC STAR NADIA COMANECI PERFORMING ON EXERCISE HORSE

Comaneci on TV

Nadia Comaneci, the 14-year-old Romanian gymnast who became the darling of the 1976 Montreal Olympics—she won three gold medals, one silver, and one bronze—will appear in a one-hour TV special to be seen in this country on Nov. 23.

The program, "Nadia—From Romania With Love," will be hosted by Flip Wilson and include acts from the Bucharest Circus, musicians, singers, and dancers, as well as a short sight-seeing trip to Count Dracula's castle in Transylvania.

The show is the first co-production between American TV and Radio Televiziunea Romania, the state broadcasting agency.

Shocker

It sounds incredible, but the Australian Council for Educational Research declares it true. About 10 percent of 14-year-old schoolchildren in Australia cannot tell the time correctly.

The council recently made the first national survey of the reading, writing, and arithmetic of 14,000 students aged 10-14 in 600 Australian schools.

The survey found that about 10,000 of the 14-year-olds cannot do simple multiplication and subtraction. About 7500 students aged 10 and 2000 aged 14 cannot understand the simple sentence "He is taller than his sister."

One 10-year-old in every Australian classroom and one child in 100 at age 14

I'm a registered nurse. And while I was in training, there wasn't a day that went by that I didn't see a new mother leave the maternity ward with a bundle of love in her arms and a heap of fat on her thighs and backside. Still I didn't learn. The day I left the hospital with my first baby, I weighed 168 pounds.

It's not as if I didn't know better. But having been a working girl until my pregnancy, I found it difficult to stay home for nine months with nothing much to do but clean house, watch television and empty the refrigerator. By that I mean eat whatever was in it, before filling it up again.

As the scale climbed (to 180 pounds), I kept telling myself it was mostly water—which I'd get rid of when the baby came. And whatever extra pounds that were left, I

I don't know what made me think putting my 9-pound baby daughter on my lap could hide my 168 pounds.

It was around New Year's, I remember, and I made a resolution right then to lose weight. I had seen those stories in magazines about people who'd lost on the Ayds plan, so I decided to try it. I bought a box of Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy, the chocolate fudge kind, at my drug store. I liked the fact that Ayds contained vitamins and minerals, but no drugs or medications.

I read the directions carefully. Then I took one or two Ayds before meals with a hot drink and they really helped satisfy my appetite.

For breakfast, I'd have one Ayds and hot tea; then orange juice and a toasted bagel with half a teaspoon of jelly or margarine. Lunch, I'd have Ayds again and maybe a tuna fish salad. And for dinner, Ayds and tea before a hamburger or steak, or maybe fish.

Gemfire

The Unique Simulated Diamond That Improves On Nature

Have you always wanted a big, beautiful sparkler for your finger, but thought it would be too expensive? Then you want the amazing GEMFIRE—SIMULATED DIAMOND OF THE FIRST WATER.

Just as genuine diamonds, GEMFIRES are created under thousands of degrees of heat. However, in nature, the brilliance of the stone is sometimes dulled by defective crystal lattice. But every GEMFIRE is perfect—without cracks, bubbles or specks to mar its fiery beauty. For GEMFIRES are created in the laboratory under controlled conditions. They are cut and cleaved by master gem cutters and polished with diamond dust to a sparkling brilliance—just as genuine diamonds. In fact, GEMFIRES are so radiant you will be able to make your friends think you are wearing a genuine diamond if you want to—unless they carry around a powerful magnifier—or happen to be diamond experts!

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Young Motherhood

One of the most imprudent things a girl of 17 or younger can do is to become a mother. Young motherhood, in fact, is a serious handicap in today's society.

A six-year study headed by University of Pennsylvania sociologist Frank Furstenberg Jr., comparing the life adjustment of 404 Baltimore girls who became mothers at 17 or younger to 301 classmates who postponed child-bearing until later, shows that young mothers are far more likely to:

- Drop out of school, even though they wanted more education;
- Suffer unemployment, poverty, and welfare dependency;
- Have further pregnancies in their teens;
- Endure breakup of their marriages because of economic pressures.

Furstenberg concludes that most teen-age pregnancies are unwanted and could have been prevented by available community-based fertility-control services.

His study appears in the current issue of Family Planning Perspectives, which carries another article, this one by Frederick S. Jaffe and Joy G. Dryfoos, reporting that each year a million girls aged 15-19 in the U.S. get pregnant—with two-thirds of such pregnancies unintended.

Girls below age 15 account for an additional 30,000 pregnancies. Six in 10 of these end in live births, three in 10 in induced abortions, the rest in miscarriages. More than one-third of all these births are out of wedlock.

Engelbert Joins the Club

Engelbert Humperdinck—the British pop singer originally named Arnold Dorsey—has joined the exodus of rock talent from Great Britain. Humperdinck has become a tax exile in the United States.

"It's the only sensible thing to do," he recently explained. "I've applied for an alien resident's permit. I suspect I'll probably wind up like Tom Jones with a house somewhere in Los Angeles, although frankly I'd prefer to live in Connecticut. It's so much more like England."

"I'm going to miss England like hell, but who can go on paying 96 percent tax? It's like working for nothing."

Law Waxes

Law school enrollment, which climbed sharply a few years ago, is leveling off. So reports the American Bar Association.

Despite an overall increase, in which women now comprise approximately 23% of approved law school enrollments, the pace has slowed.

Law school enrollment has increased steadily in the past decade, doubling from approximately 62,500 students to the current 117,000. But, according to James P. White, Professor of Law at Indiana University's Indianapolis School of Law, "The law school boom of 1973 has passed. Watergate is over, and fewer unqualified students are applying. Scholarships have also not risen proportionately with the increased costs of a law school education."

I'm a registered nurse. And while I was in training, there wasn't a day that went by that I didn't see a new mother leave the maternity ward with a bundle of love in her arms and a heap of fat on her thighs and backside. Still I didn't learn. The day I left the hospital with my first baby, I weighed 168 pounds.

It's not as if I didn't know better. But having been a working girl until my pregnancy, I found it difficult to stay home for nine months with nothing much to do but clean house, watch television and empty the refrigerator. By that I mean eat whatever was in it, before filling it up again.

As the scale climbed (to 180 pounds), I kept telling myself it was mostly water—which I'd get rid of when the baby came. And whatever extra pounds that were left, I figured I'd take off immediately after. What a joke! All I dropped the day my daughter was born was 12 pounds, leaving me with 168 pounds to carry around.

My first reaction was to do something that would turn people's eyes away from my fat. So I paid special attention to my hair. That way, I hoped people would look at me from my neck up only. Unfortunately, it didn't stop my husband from looking up and down at me.

Each time we'd go shopping for clothes, he'd reach for a size 9 and say: "Why don't you buy this?" It was his way of telling me to lose weight. But all it did was make me go home and munch on cheese doodles, hot dogs, candy corn, chocolate—or anything else in the house.

From time to time, of course, I'd go on a self-styled diet, but with little success. Yet I would never take reducing-drug pills or water pills. I don't believe in them.

In desperation, I decided to go back to work. My daughter was walking then and by taking the three-to-eleven shift, I was able to take turns with my husband caring for her. Only listen to what happened. You've heard of people having a tough time finding a job because they're too fat. Well, I had a hard time staying on the job because of cracks about my weight. I got so embarrassed that I quit. Just took off for home in Old Bridge, New Jersey.

I don't know what made me think putting my 9-pound baby daughter on my lap could hide my 168 pounds.

At 112 pounds, I don't need to stand behind anyone to cover up my figure.

It was around New Year's, I remember, and I made a resolution right then to lose weight. I had seen those stories in magazines about people who'd lost on the Ayds plan, so I decided to try it. I bought a box of Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy, the chocolate fudge kind, at my drug store. I liked the fact that Ayds contained vitamins and minerals, but no drugs or medications.

I read the directions carefully. Then I took one or two Ayds before meals with a hot drink and they really helped satisfy my appetite.

For breakfast, I'd have one Ayds and hot tea; then orange juice and a toasted bagel with half a teaspoon of jelly or margarine. Lunch, I'd have Ayds again and maybe a tuna fish salad. And for dinner, Ayds and tea before a hamburger or steak, or maybe fish, string beans, and diet soda. Then in the evening, I'd have a couple of Ayds for snacks.

That way I was able to keep my intake of calories low, yet feel satisfied. As a result, I lost one pound the first week on the Ayds plan. Three pounds the second. And two pounds the third. Being a nurse, I knew it was much smarter to lose weight gradually than rapidly.

In five months, I lost 43 pounds on the Ayds plan. But that's not the best of it. I found with the plan that I could have all sorts of delicious cookies, candies and snacks at home for my husband and friends, yet not be tempted myself.

Actually, I changed my eating habits enough with the help of Ayds so that I was able to get down to 112 pounds by fall. Why, the only plump one at our Thanksgiving table was the bird. As for me, my friends said I was all bones. But my husband said I suited his taste just fine. And he meant it. Thanks to the Ayds plan, I never have to hide behind my child these days.

VEGETABLES IN A RING

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Delicious, nutritious and pretty as a picture, Southern Vegetable Ring with Okra-Tomato Sauce combines four vegetables in a new and delightful way. Serve it for lunch, dinner or supper as the main dish. We're sure there won't be any leftovers!

For a dinner menu, begin with chilled grapefruit sections. Follow with the vegetable ring and hot corn muffins or corn sticks made easily with a packaged mix. Add protein to the menu by serving baked caramel custard for dessert.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

SOUTHERN VEGETABLE RING with OKRA-TOMATO SAUCE

VEGETABLE RING

- 3 cups boiling water
- 1 package (6 oz.) hash brown potatoes with onions
- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen chopped mustard greens
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1/2 cup dairy sour cream
- 1/4 cup grated sharp cheddar cheese

Add boiling water to potatoes; let stand at least one hour; drain. Meanwhile, cook mustard greens according to package directions; drain. Combine potatoes and mustard greens with remaining ingredients; mix well. Pack firmly into oiled five-cup ring mold. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. While ring mold is baking, prepare sauce. When mold is done, turn out on serving plate; fill center with sauce. Serves four or five.

OKRA-TOMATO SAUCE

- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen sliced okra
- 1 can (1 lb.) stewed tomatoes
- 1 cup well-seasoned medium white sauce

Cook okra according to package directions; drain. Combine tomatoes and white sauce; cook and stir over moderate heat until thickened. Stir in drained okra; heat to serving temperature. FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

The Lincoln Mint Announces "THE PRESIDENTIAL GOLD LIBRARY"

Limited Edition in Gold-Available in 24 Kt. Solid Gold. Brilliant Gold Medals
Honoring Every Chief Executive.

In mid-April of 1789, a special messenger dismounted and knocked on the door at Mount Vernon, home of General George Washington. He carries a summons—the General had been unanimously elected as the first President of the United States. Then on April 30, outside Federal Hall in New York, the first Presidential oath of office was administered.

Since that inauguration 187 years ago, the Office of the Presidency has achieved an aura and power that is felt in every corner of our globe. Great and courageous men followed in that office—Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, the Roosevelts, Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy—each one leaving upon America a part of himself.

And now in our Bicentennial year, The Lincoln Mint, one of America's oldest and most respected creators of fine medallion art, is proud to announce a unique collection of limited-edition medals:

The Presidential Gold Library

Medals Struck in 24 Kt. Gold.

There has never been a collection quite like The Presidential Gold Library.

Entrusted with designing and creating the medals was a staff of master artists and metalsmiths long a part of The Lincoln Mint. The bas-relief sculptures may well be the crowning glory of The Lincoln Mint's 70-year tradition of leadership in medallion art.

Unique "Collector's Library"

Its beauty and intrinsic value is only one of many compelling reasons why this limited-edition is so extraordinary. We believe each President deserves a separate album to allow his portrait, personality and deeds to be individually examined and admired.

Thus, each brilliant solid gold medal comes to you in its own separate presentation album. These albums are designed to enhance the magnificent appearance of the medals. Each volume, luxuriously bound and then embossed in 24 kt. goldleaf, carries the Official Presidential Seal—and bears the name of each President described within.

Opposite the medal is a concise monograph by a noted historian narrating the achievements and historical role of that President. Portraits in Gold, portraits in words—an inspiring way to gain a fresh perspective on the lives and struggles of the remarkable men entrusted with the highest office America can bestow.

With your third issue you will also receive a handsome hand-rubbed walnut bookcase to house and display your library. Your name, delicately inscribed on a bronze plate, proudly announces that you are the original owner of The Presidential Gold Library, a limited-edition created especially for you.

Limited Edition Only for Advance Subscribers

This opportunity to acquire The Presidential Gold Library is strictly limited. We are setting a world-wide limit of only 9,999 sets of each size edition. Upon acceptance of your subscription, you will be sent one Presidential album each month until your Presidential Gold Library is complete.

The subject is fascinating and important—and the beauty of lustrous 24 kt. Solid Gold enhances superbly detailed portraits executed by the artists of The Lincoln Mint. Whether you choose the 20 grain size... diameter 3/4" or the 45 grain size... diameter 1", the medals are truly a craftsman's masterwork.

Consider, too, the unique, new medium for displaying your collection—a walnut bookcase with your personal name plate; each medal in its own album.

Also, do not overlook the investment aspects: remember, your price is guaranteed to hold firm until you complete your set!

What a splendid and valued heirloom to pass on to the next generation—and the next! The Presidential Gold Library will long endure as the Bicentennial year's finest tribute to the leaders of our American democracy.

Act now on this rare opportunity to adorn your home or office with these medallion masterpieces. Once closed, our subscription rolls will never be reopened.

1½ oz. Southern Comfort

Stir bitters, sugar, water in glass; add ice cubes and S.C.; stir. Add twist of lemon peel, orange slice, cherry.

COMFORT™ COLLINS

Served in Miami Beach at Hotel Fontainebleau

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
Juice of ¼ lime • 7UP

Mix Southern Comfort, lime juice in tall glass; add ice cubes; fill with 7UP. The best—and the easiest to mix—of all Collinses!

COMFORT™ 'N TONIC

Served at Anthony's Pier 4, Boston

Juice, rind ¼ lime
1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
Schweppes Quinine Water (tonic)

Squeeze lime over ice cubes in tall glass; add rind, S.C. Fill with tonic and stir.

OPEN HOUSE PUNCH

Super punch! Tastes like a cocktail!

One fifth Southern Comfort
3 quarts 7UP
6 oz. fresh lemon juice
One 6-oz. can frozen orange juice
One 6-oz. can frozen lemonade

Chill ingredients. Mix in punch bowl. 7UP last. Add drops food coloring as desired (optional); stir. Add ice, orange and lemon slices. Serves 32.

That's why it makes mixed drinks taste so much better!

It's easy to mix exceptional drinks your whole crowd will enjoy. Just make them like the experts do...with the smoothness and wonderful flavor of Southern Comfort. Comfort™ is a completely different kind of basic liquor that makes drinks taste much better. Try it. Simply pour some over crushed ice. Sip it...and you've discovered a liquor that actually tastes delicious with nothing added. No wonder so many bartenders use it instead of ordinary whiskey to mix Sours, Manhattans, etc.... even tall drinks like the Collins. They know this "switch" improves these drinks tremendously! Prove it to yourself; make both Manhattan recipes below. Compare them...and you've learned the secret of entertaining guests very Comfortably!

ordinary MANHATTAN

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Bourbon or rye
½ oz. sweet vermouth
Dash Angostura bitters (optional)

Stir with cracked ice; strain into glass. Add a cherry. Now learn the experts' secret; use recipe at right. See how a simple switch in basic liquor greatly improves this drink.

Improved MANHATTAN

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
½ oz. dry vermouth
Dash Angostura bitters (optional)

Mix like ordinary recipe. Then sip it. Southern Comfort gives it a far more delicious flavor! Comfort™ Manhattan, as served at Paul Young's Restaurant, Washington, D.C.

PARADE OF PROGRESS

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

A CHIMNEY WITHOUT MASONRY WORK: Made of fiberglass resin, a new chimney has the look and feel of brick and stone and can be installed by a carpenter in a fraction of the time needed to construct a real masonry chimney. Because it weighs only 30 lbs., it requires no special wall or roof construction and can be installed in any type of weather (claims the maker). Available in 4'-high model for rooftop installation and in special sizes. Castle Rock Enterprises, Dept. PP, 88 Hubbard St., Winsted, Conn. 06098. (right)

'IMPOSSIBLE' LOCK: A new replacement cylinder lock reportedly is impossible to open without a proper key. The pins are said to be unreadable by any special tool because they give the tool a false reading by design, while the cylinder itself is armored and drill-resistant. It's available as a mortise cylinder for use with mortise entry locks and as a rim cylinder for surface-mounting auxiliary locks. Suggested retail price: $14.95. Builders Hardware, Dept. PP, 61 Brightside Ave., E. Northport, N.Y. 11731.

BABY PACK: Adaptable to fit a child up to 30 lbs. and providing head support for sleeping, a new baby pack can be worn in front or back—and the baby cannot fall or crawl out (claims the maker, herself a mother). The pack uses no zippers, snaps or buckles that might fail, relying instead on straps and heavy non-slip rings. In indigo denim or canvas, $26 ppd. Andrea's Baby Pack, Dept. PP, 2441 Hilyard St., Eugene, Oreg. 97405. (right)

FITNESS AID: Track jogging can produce jolts, but when you jog on a new mini-trampoline the jolts are softened and absorbed (claims the maker). Useful in home or office for both jumping and running in place, the trampoline can also serve as a springboard for gymnastics, diving board at the pool and, turned on its side, as a baseball or tennis pitchback. It weighs less than 10 lbs., sits 6" to 8" off the floor, accommodates up to 250 lbs., is available in three diameters: 37" at $127.50; 43" at $137.50; 50" at $147.50 ppd. Skip Hellen, Dept. PP, 11259 Virginia Ave., Lynwood, Cal. 90262. (right)

THREE-WAY UTENSIL: Fork-like in appearance, this eating utensil also serves as a knife and spoon. The knife along both edges cannot cut your mouth (claims the maker), and the fork tines and spoon contour are said to allow comfort and ease of handling. Set of six: $9.95 ppd. NEEA Sales Co., Dept. PP, 6770 Crampton Court, Box 19389, San Diego, Cal. 92119.

MARRY NOW, PAY LATER?

In this mad, mad world, marriages on our continent are breaking up at a frightening rate. One analyst states that out of every ten marriages in the U.S. today, four will end in divorce. No need here to get into a religious debate on divorce. We are all agreed that it is at very least a human tragedy. Even when the separated put on a brave front, there remains a certain anguish over "what might have been."

Getting married is not like buying a car. One can get rid of one car and get another without suffering any soul scars. Not so when one leaves one spouse and goes it alone or takes up with another. Often too, there are children whose suffering at the separation of their parents can affect their whole lives.

Surely, if we have any feeling for the good of society and the happiness of individuals, we ought to do what we can to prevent unwise and premature marriages, and to help prepare those who are planning to marry. As a step in this direction, we are pleased to offer a new pamphlet, "Are You Fit to be Tied?" It has a light touch but a serious message in easy language. Write for your free copy today. No one will call on you.

Commemorating the 150th Anniversary of John James Audubon's classic
"Birds of America" engravings....

The SONGBIRDS OF AMERICA

Bell Collection

□ A Series of 12 Bavarian Porcelain Bells depicting America's Most Beautiful Songbirds □ Exclusive Original Works of Art □ Hand Decorated and Trimmed in 22kt. Gold □ A Limited Edition Available Only in This 150th Anniversary Year of Audubon's "Birds of America" □ Original issue price guaranteed.

Birds delight even the most casual observer. They grace our world with beauty and song and inspire us with their freedom of flight. Now the minstrels of the meadows, woodlands, deserts and streams—the songbirds of America—have been captured brilliantly in a series of finely crafted porcelain bells.

Honoring John James Audubon

No one in recorded history has ever devoted such enormous energies and talents to capturing the wondrous beauty of birds as John James Audubon. In his almost life-long quest he recorded in brilliant watercolors the hundreds of birds native to North America.

To honor Audubon's herculean task in this the 150th anniversary year of his "Birds of America," the Danbury Mint has chosen 12 of the most beautiful songbirds of America and portrayed them on fine porcelain bells.

Exclusive Works of Art

One of the nation's foremost American wildlife artists has been commissioned to execute the original watercolor enhancing each bell. Jo Polseno, renowned bird painter, has created the original works of art for the 12 bells in this series. Working directly from life, in the woods and fields of America, the artist has conceived and created his designs—portraying each bird in authentic and exacting detail. By following the techniques used 150 years ago by John James Audubon, Polseno has created birds which seem to come alive. Each brushstroke captures the beauty, color and texture of the songbirds. We believe his achievements are remarkable. The accompanying full color illustrations demonstrate the painstaking accuracy and style which will be characteristic of the original watercolors for this fine collection.

Finest Bavarian Porcelain

The finest Bavarian porcelain has been used in creating this exquisite series. The shape of the bell was specially selected to complement the delicate scenes vividly portrayed. Each bell has been hand decorated with a band of precious 22kt gold. The fine skill of old world craftsmen has been employed to reproduce the fine detail of the birds on each bell. Every bell in the series will bear the hallmark of the Danbury Mint.

A Limited Edition At A Guaranteed Price

The Songbirds of America Bell Collection is being issued as a strictly limited edition. It is available only by advance reservation and only until December 31, 1976. ### Compare Gemfire Simulations With Diamonds

Crown Galleries Offer Glamorous Bargains-by-Mail

We specialize in extra-ordinary values. Check our prices. They are unbeatable -- anywhere. Our Gemfire collection is one of the best values in simulated diamonds -- and one of the most beautiful. All have 58 facets to provide diamond-like brilliance and beauty. Some of the stones in our fashion rings are simulated -- some are not. When we can offer a genuine stone that is beautiful yet relatively inexpensive -- such as the Tigers Eye we do it. Diamonds, rubies, etc. are very expensive, so we use simulations. BUT EVERY RING SHOWN HERE THAT HAS A SIMULATED STONE IS A TOP QUALITY SIMULATION -- NOT CHEAP PLASTIC OR PASTE. All are handsomely-crafted in elegant mountings that you will be proud to own and give to others. YOU CAN'T LOSE. ALL ARE BACKED BY OUR FULL 1-YEAR GUARANTEE. ORDER TODAY!

LADIES RING SIZES 5-10
MENS RING SIZES 7-13

How to Find Your Ring Size

1. Cut a strip of paper 3 inches long and 1/4 inch wide.
2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot, on the strip where it meets the end.
3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.

Glossary Of Terms

HEAVY GOLD ELECTROPLATE (HGE) -- this mounting uses karat gold (either white or yellow) that is electrically bonded to the mounting after it is formed and the gold, by government standard, is 14 times thicker than the designation "gold electroplate".

STERLING SILVER (SS) -- the mounting is 92.5% pure silver, 7.5% other metals for strength, and to eliminate tarnishing is lightly plated with precious rhodium.

CARAT (CT) -- a measure of weight for a diamond - however, Gemfires are given approximate carat values based on size (not weight). In other words, a 1 carat Gemfire is approximately the same size as a 1 carat diamond.

GOLD FILLED (GF) -- a lamination of base metal placed between sheets of gold.

MOUNTING -- MTG.

Read and Save Money

As a car owner, you know how much auto repairs cost these days. Jobs that seem simple have a way of adding up to a small fortune when you drive into your service station or garage.

Is there a way to beat the high cost of getting your car fixed? Yes, there is. It's a simple, sensible, easy-to-follow book called Basic Auto Repairs. Written by automotive expert Byron G. Wells and available to PARADE readers for only $1.50 plus 25¢ for postage and handling, it tells how you can save big money making your own car repairs.

Of course, you can't fix everything yourself, and this book is quick to tell you so. Some major repairs have to be left to trained experts.

But you'll be astounded at the number of things you can do yourself, once you've developed a little know-how, patience and confidence. Basic Auto Repairs will tell you how to find trouble spots, how to diagnose malfunctions, how to go about replacing parts. It is specific in telling you what not to do yourself—advising, for instance, against doing your own tire repairs. It also tells you where and how to shop for automotive equipment and tools you'll need to work with speed and safety.

Beyond its instructions for making repairs, Basic Auto Repairs provides a clear and comprehensive guide to your car and its operation. You'll learn what the various systems—electrical, cooling, engine—do and how they work together. Through diagrams, charts, pictures and text, the book will give you an understanding of your car that you've probably never had before. Even when a major job has to be done by a mechanic, you'll be able to talk to him knowledgeably and confidently. And the tips you'll find on preventive maintenance alone will repay you the cost of the book many times.

Basic Auto Repairs belongs in every car's glove compartment. It will make you a better, safer, and more confident driver—and can save you a bundle at the same time.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $1.50 (plus 25¢ for postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "Basic Auto Repairs" to PARADE, Box 4, Dept. 5, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery. (GENERAL OFFICES: 1346 39TH ST., BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11218.)

The case of 22-year-old Karen Anne Quinlan, who's been in a coma for over two years, now has new dimensions as a moral and legal dilemma.

Life or Death for a Baby

The Next Karen Quinlan Case?

by Amitai Etzioni

Any day now we shall have a new Quinlan case. By this I mean another court battle concerning the right to withhold or withdraw medical treatment, thereby letting a person die. Chances are, however, that next time the debate will center not around an adult, hurt in an accident or dying from a disease, but the even more difficult question of the fate of a newborn baby with severe birth defects. Every expectant mother faces the far-from-trivial risk that her child will be born deformed. Some babies are born with practically no brains; some with damaged spines, heads, bones; others with their intestines disconnected. Thanks to new developments in medicine, more and more of these infants, who years ago would have died almost immediately, now live for years—and even grow up to adulthood.

Increasingly the question arises: what is the moral obligation of the parents,

AIR FORCE JOBS AVAILABLE NOW

A year or so ago, Sergeant Hunter and Airman First Class Morrow were up in the air about their futures.

The Air Force put them on solid ground.

They were paid to learn how to produce for the aerospace team.

Now they have interesting good-paying jobs — skilled in an area that could lead to civilian employment should they decide to leave the Air Force.

But it will be a rare employer that will offer 30 days of paid time off annually — from the first year. Medical and dental care. A solid retirement plan. And the opportunity to serve with dignity and pride as part of the worldwide Air Force community.

It's a great way of life for those young men and women dedicated to the continuation of 200 years of American freedom. Are you one of these people? If you believe you could meet our high mental and physical standards and help make a great Air Force better, and are between the ages of 17-27 call toll free 800-447-4700 (in Illinois call 800-322-4400) for the location of your nearest Air Force recruiter. ## DUNLAN continued the physician, and society toward such a child? How hard should we try to save or to prolong the life of a baby born with serious birth defects?

A study conducted at Yale-New Haven Hospital between 1970 and 1972 illustrates how frequently such decisions arise: the study found 43 babies in that period whose deaths were related to decisions to discontinue treatment of their deformities. Dr. Robert A. Cooke, Vice Chancellor for Medicine at the University of Wisconsin, told a Senate health subcommittee hearing in 1974 that he estimated 2000 infants a year were dying in the United States as a result of decisions made to withhold or stop treatment due to the seriousness of birth defects.

The question of which infants shall be allowed to die and which helped to live is even more complex than the question of artificially sustaining the terminally ill, such as Karen Anne Quintan. For fatally ill or injured persons, the suggested criterion is brain death (or, in the Quintan case, irreversible loss of consciousness), after which the person is judged unable ever again to lead a human life—that is, to be aware, to communicate, be loving, or function on his or her own.

Terminally ill

In the cases of infants born with no brain above the brain stem, or with a condition for which doctors can promise only a very short prolongation of life, the issues are very much similar to those involving irreversibly comatose adults. Such babies are, in effect, unusually young terminally ill patients. However, large numbers of severe birth defects do not fall into this category. Not only is there a functioning brain, but many of these infants, if kept alive, would develop into conscious human beings. To withhold or withdraw life-sustaining measures from such defective newborns thus involves deciding the fate of a person who, despite severe physical or mental abnormalities, is much more akin to you and me than is a once-normal but now brain-dead—or irreversibly comatose—body.

The next dramatic case will involve a seriously deformed infant, according to the author, and the agonizing question will be: Should the baby be permitted to die?

It is important to recognize that developing human consciousness need not entail having anything near a normal IQ. Indeed, most such babies are likely to be retarded in varying degrees. "Consciousness" refers instead to such things as capacity to respond to outside stimuli, awareness of self and surroundings including other people, the ability to love and be loved, and identifiable "personality."

Heart of the dilemma

The potential for human consciousness is at the heart of the dilemma: when, if ever, is it appropriate not to do "everything possible" to save a human being who is conscious or has some potential for conscious existence? Should consideration be given to the quality of that conscious existence? Is it moral to go to great technological lengths to sustain the life of a severely defective newborn if that means the child will be condemned to a life of severe mental and physical disability, extraordinary dependence on others, steady pain and recurrent treatment? What if survival means a lifetime of care in an institutional "dying bin"—or going home to be hidden away from the neighbors? What if it means a constant balancing on the brink of death, in and out of hospital emergency and operating rooms?

What makes these questions all the more difficult to deal with is that the death of an infant is usually more traumatic than the death of an old person. A mother in the delivery room is rarely expecting tragedy. Hence the greater inability to face the issues involved in the decision to let live—or die.

Lacking the public discussions that followed the Quinlan case, the decisions concerning infants are often made by physicians. In many instances they simply tell the parents that the infant died, or was born dead, and "spare" them the decision as to whether all the tools and techniques available to medicine should be used to sustain the infant's life. Conversely, the New Haven researchers reported that during one period the hospital's policy was to treat all infants born with certain severe birth defects "vigorously." Parents were asked to sign consent forms and the

In 1974, a group of doctors at Maine Medical Center requested a court order to continue treatment of a child with no left eye, a deformed hand, several disconnected vertebrae, and afflicted with tracheal esophageal fistula (so it could not be fed by mouth). His parents had refused permission to treat. Ironically, while the court was making its died (feeding the baby by mouth would have killed it) when its parents refused permission to correct a blockage which could be fixed with relative ease. The child was born with Down's syndrome (mongolism). In Norfolk, Va., a child was born with hydrocephalus. Damage from the swelling produced by the accumulated fluids on the brain was expected to be very severe and a decision was made not to feed the baby. However, the Virginia Society for Human Life intervened to the point of trying to have prosecuted whoever made the decision to let the baby starve. The child was sent home.

These cases illustrate how arbitrary the decisions often are—decisions which so deeply affect the lives and happiness of both the infants and their families. What is needed is very much what happened in the Quinlan case as well as in other cases involving fatally injured and terminally ill persons: full-scale debate, spurred on by public hearings, media attention, perhaps court cases.

Basic questions

We must face such basic questions as: What guidelines should be used in such cases? Will we continue to abide by a policy of trying to do "all we can" for all newborns or only for those who have a chance for conscious life? What other guidelines should and could be implemented? Who will make the judgment: the physician, following his or her own values; the parents, who have the final responsibility for the child and who must live with the outcome of the decision; or the courts, which could approve guardians for such children? Or is the legal process ill-equipped for decisions best made "quietly" and informally?

It's necessary to go beyond debates among specialists, exchange of cases in medical journals, and discussions of policy in hospital committee meetings. The public has to be involved. Only by joining in widespread dialogue can we all gradually define our perspective on these agonizing questions.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

babies were operated on even before the parents had a chance to see them, let alone have the nature of the defects explained to them. Some physicians, often of the younger generation, prefer a more open, "participatory" approach and consult the parents. Still others disregard the parents' wishes and insist on their right to treat the infant.

decision, the physicians changed their minds due to reevaluation of the child's prognosis. But the court ended up by appointing a guardian and forcing both the parents and the doctors to go through with the surgery.

At the opposite extreme, five years ago at Johns Hopkins, physicians let a child starve for 15 days until it finally

Charles A. Beardsley, the late president of the American Bar Association, once spoofed his fellow lawyers for their use of high-sounding, nonsensical language. In parody, he said, "Beware of and eschew pompous prolixity."

Beardsley then took lawyers to task for the language used in wills. He said: "And then, if a lawyer were going to draw my will, he would probably start like this: 'In the name of God, Amen. I, Charles A. Beardsley, of the City of Oakland, County of Alameda, State of California, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, and not acting under any fraud, duress, or any undue influence of any person, whatsoever, do make, publish, and declare this my last will and testament, in the manner following, that is to say:'

"And this is all it means: 'I, Charles A. Beardsley, make my will as follows.'"

Over the centuries, the most caustic critics of law language and advocates of reform have been the lawyers themselves. Yet legal language remains as far removed from the mainstream of verbal and written communication as the minuet is from the hustle.

Four centuries ago, Sir Thomas More was a successful London lawyer before he became Henry VIII's Lord Chancellor. His wit was renowned and apparently unailing. History tells us that he jested even on the scaffold to which Henry VIII eventually dispatched him. Sir Thomas continually poked fun at his fellow lawyers, calling them "people whose profession is to disguise matters."

Swift's verdict

Jonathan Swift wrote that the language of lawyers was such that "no mortal can understand." The 18th-century philosopher and jurist Jeremy Bentham was more direct. Law talk, he said, was "literary garbage."

Garbage or not, lawyers still endlessly grind out documents beginning, "To all to whom these presents come or may come; greeting." And with perfectly straight faces they continue to do business with such word tools as: "Now therefore in consideration of the premises and the representations, warranties, covenants, and undertakings of the parties hereinafter set forth. . ."

Thomas Jefferson was sharply critical of his own profession. He held that from time immemorial lawyers had been devoted to cloudy phrases "which from verbosity . . . are rendered more perplexed and incomprehensible not only to common readers but to lawyers themselves."

The only period in American history when plain language was the language of the law was in the early settlement of the Old West. Miners and prospectors made their own law without benefit or hindrance of lawyers. For example:

"All persons buying a claim shall have an undisputable [sic] right to the same."

It May Not Be English But It's Strictly Legal

by George Gordon Coughlin

Lawyers have changed but their jargon hasn't. These attorneys depicted by the 19th-century French artist Daumier would have been understood by colleagues of today.

Some modern lawyers seem to be restraining their verbiage, but the body of the profession clings as if to a life raft to its stilted phrases: "May it please the court"; "Know all men by these presents"; "Comes now the plaintiff"; "Be it remembered."

And be it remembered, also, that the word "witnesseth," often used by lawyers, does not exist—in any dictionary.

Do we need any of that in a busy world with crowded court calendars?

Consider now redundancies rampant in the simplest transactions: false and untrue; separate and apart; each and every; to have and to hold; warrant and defend; from and after; for and during; force and effect; aid and abet; by and with; cease and desist; fraud and deceit; hue and cry; nominate and appoint; in such case made and provided.

Lincoln not immune

President Lincoln wrote his Gettysburg Address as a modest orator rather than the lawyer he was. But amidst the immortal and simple words of his speech is the sentence, "It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this." Let's face it. Fitting and proper is saying something twice. Mr. Lincoln was probably the only lawyer in history to get really effective mileage from a legal redundancy.

The whole bag of esoteric, useless and meaningless words and phrases was inherited along with the law they represent. Archaic legal language has been carefully preserved and elevated almost without alteration to the heights of a sacred trust. Almost from the beginning of recorded law, contracts, writs, deeds, and such were not accepted in court unless framed in stilted, formal words. Wordy language was carefully mummified in law formbooks.

Plain people long ago discarded such quaintisms as thence and thereof, theretofore and therewith, but lawyers love such words. And the here words march on the scene like an army with banners: herewith; heretofore; hereby; hereinafter; hereinbefore.

One of the hallmarks of law language is the use of everyday words to express special legal meanings. To most people the phrase "to make a motion" involves some kind of movement. To a lawyer it means "to apply for a court order." When a lawyer delivers legal papers, he "serves" them, yet no food or tennis is involved. In law, "action" has nothing to do with activity. It means "lawsuit."

Other examples of common words with special legal meaning: executed—signed and delivered; instrument—legal document; master—employer; prayer—request to a court; without prejudice—without loss of legal rights; specialty—sealed contract; plead—file papers in a lawsuit; consideration—essential ingredient of a contract; said—mentioned before.

Lawyers display a weakness for flexible words with ambiguous meaning or no meaning at all. They often use them just because they are vague. Most flexible words, however, slip unconsciously into the tedious double-talk of the legal document.

Consider: reasonable, substantial, and/or, forthwith—all flexible words. A "reasonable" length of time to one may be unreasonable to another; ditto, "substantial," and so on.

There is a legion of laymen who sincerely believe that lawyers use Latin and French phrases and mix up the English language deliberately in order to baffle the public and make something that is simple appear scholarly and, ergo, worth a hefty fee. Such belief is unfounded. Today there is no intention to confuse. Lawyers simply use the language of the trade.

Legal jargon is taught in law schools, and the sad fact is that most graduates can't write clearly because their thought has been obscured by legalese.

Foreign influence

Foreign-language legal phrases abound. Some are needed because they resist simple translation; also, court papers and proceedings containing such phrases and words are the warp and woof of American law. Habeas corpus, for example, refers to an ancient order or writ which commanded that a person (generally a prisoner) be brought before a judge to determine if he is being legally detained. Literally, the Latin translates "you have the body." Since most people concerned with the problem know what Habeas corpus means, there's no point in substituting an awkward translation. Corpus delicti doesn't translate easily. It means "body of the crime." An ex post facto law is a law passed after the occurrence of an act. It would be hard to come up with a simple English equivalent.

But there is an abundance of easily translatable foreign legal phrases: ab initio—from the beginning; amicus curiae—a friend of the court; causa mortis—in contemplation of death; caveat emptor—let the buyer beware; caveat venditor—let the seller beware; cestui que trust—the beneficiary of a trust; certiorari—review by a court; et al—and others; ex contractu—arising out of a contract; flagrante delicto—caught in the act; force majeure—superior force, Act of God; laches—undue delay; lis pendens—notice of pending suit; particeps criminis—participant in a crime.

The most effective route to badly needed reform would seem to be for lawyers and judges with clout to tell the nation's law schools that, while love and respect for tradition are noble emotions, they should not obscure the present. Law schools can, if they would, break away from tradition, teach students to cut through the prevailing tangle of words and uncover the bare bones of simple declaratory sentences. What the law school doesn't teach, the law student isn't likely to perpetuate. It's up to the law schools of America to teach lawyers to talk plain English.

Because More is burnished brown. To make its longer, leaner design look as good as it tastes.

And when it comes to the taste of More, you can enjoy its smooth mildness longer.

my favorite jokes

by bob steele

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bob Steele has been talking to people for 40 years over the same radio station, WTIC in Hartford, Conn. And, when he's not on the air, he often entertains on New England's banquet circuit. He's the father of four sons—the oldest, also named Bob Steele, served two terms, 1970-1974, as a U.S. Congressman from Connecticut—and he recalls: "All of our sons were born while I was broadcasting, and my listeners were invited to help name each one. For one of the boys, I said I rather liked the name John. At that, a fan protested: 'Why John? Every Tom, Dick and Harry is named John!'"

There are grandchildren, too, eight of them, and says Bob: "They're all typical grandchildren, always boring people by opening their little wallets and whipping out snapshots of their grandparents!"

Here are some of Bob Steele's jokes:

I always hoped my wife might have twins, but it wasn't to be. You've heard the definition of twins, of course—infant replay.

Where I live, in Wethersfield, Conn., we have a scientist who's active in genetics. Recently he crossed a praying mantis with a termite. Got a bug that says grace before eating your house.

Speaking of insects, we have two sizes of mosquitoes in Wethersfield: small ones that can go through a screen door and big ones that can open a screen door.

Ours is just a modest house, nothing showy. I never wanted to be wealthy or appear to be. What good is money, anyway? Only this morning I heard a news bulletin about a fabulously rich oil sheik and his 110 beautiful wives. He died while waiting to get into the bathroom!

I see another Howard Hughes will has shown up—in which he left everything to J. Paul Getty.

Speaking of the affluent crowd, a friend of mine says, "I love my girl for what she is—rich!"

An exasperated mother to her crying child at the dinner table: "Eat it. Pretend it's mud."

I've just received a news flash from our sports correspondent in Berlin: The East German pole vault champion has just become the West German pole vault champion!

A man points to a sprig of parsley floating on top of his drink and tells the bartender: "I ordered a Manhattan." The bartender says, "Well, that's a Manhattan." "Then what the heck is this?" the man asks. The bartender says, "Central Park."

Life is tough, a lot of things go against you. For instance, a friend of mine engraved "War and Peace" on the head of a pin only to discover he had left out page 84.

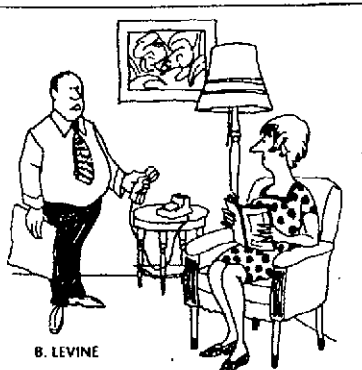

Farmer says: "Effie, now that we've struck oil, you're gonna have some decent clothes." She says: "Nothin' doin', Hank, I been wearin' decent clothes all my life. Now I'm goin' to dress like other women."

On this very date in 1821 French toast was translated into Spanish.

I saw a sign at a political convention recently. It said: "No one seated during the last five campaign promises."

Personally, I enjoy helping in the kitchen. My wife and I do the dishes on a 50-50 basis. I wash 'em and she sweeps 'em up.

I hope nobody thinks I'm a sissy because I do a few chores for my wife. I'm a 200-pounder and tough as nails. However, it's a well-known fact that big, strong men make docile husbands. So do big, strong women.

"I thought it was a recording. It's your mother."

Skyjacker Cooper may be in clear — if alive

EDITOR'S NOTE—There's almost no chance that D.B. Cooper, who parachuted from an airliner with $200,000 strapped to his body, is still alive. But if he is, the statute of limitations for his skyjack runs out Thanksgiving eve.

By JOE FRAZIER

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A miserably wet, windy Thanksgiving eve in 1971.

Passengers waited at the Northwest Orient Airlines counter at Portland International Airport to book on Flight 105 to Seattle.

Many thought ahead to family reunions, turkey dinners.

But one, for sure, didn't.

D.B. Cooper paid cash for his ticket. Then, clutching a paper sack, he boarded the Boeing 727 for the 30-minute flight.

A few minutes after the plane nosed into the storm, he made his move. He showed the stewardess what he said was a dynamite bomb and demanded four parachutes, $200,000 in $20 bills and "no funny stuff."

All the passengers but Cooper got off at Seattle, unaware that anything was amiss.

The money and parachutes were put on board and the jet, with only the crew and Cooper aboard, headed for Reno on Cooper's orders.

Somewhere over southwest Washington, Cooper, with the 21 pounds of money strapped to him, bailed out.

He hasn't been heard from since.

IF HE'S alive, and that's a big "if," the five-year statute of limitations runs out this Thanksgiving eve, Nov. 24.

Or does it?

"We're going ahead on the assumption that the statute doesn't apply, because when he did what he did, capital punishment was a possibility. There's no statute on capital crimes," says FBI agent Ralph Himmelsbach.

Himmelsbach, who has worked on the case from the start, concedes that recent court decisions have muddled the question of whether capital punishment would, in fact, have been applicable.

"We're continuing to process suspects," he said. "Of course, it has slowed down a great deal."

He says chances are good that Cooper is dead.

"Not one of the 10,000 bills has shown up, and we know the serial number of every one of them," he said. And Cooper apparently knew nothing about skydiving.

To sleep

... perchance to vote

S.I. Hayakawa says he has a lot to learn about being a senator. But he does know he likes his 40 winks. And he figures that a dull Senate session will provide ample opportunity for a nap—in his office, not on the Senate floor. Page A-4.

Benighted Daley

... no crowning glory

The kingmaker, Richard J. Daley of Chicago, laid on few crowns in this last election. For starters, his hand-picked candidate for governor was crushed — by the man who put a lot of Daley's cronies behind bars. Page A-6.

1 death, 2 victims

... unit of measure

A 20-year-old student hoping to join the college's ROTC fraternity was killed with a bayonet during an initiation hazing. The student who did it was charged with murder. It was all so sad. As the commanding officer said, shaking his head, the unit has "lost two very fine men." Page A-7.

Flu-shot funk

The swine-flu inoculation program hasn't quite caught on. Only 1 in 10, so far, is taking the preventive needle. By mid-December there won't be much point in continuing the program. Either you'll get flu or you won't. Page A-12.

Southland food strike looms

Associated Press

Southern California and Las Vegas supermarket chains were bracing for a threatened strike Monday morning as last-minute talks continued to avert a walkout.

"The markets are all getting ready for a strike Monday morning," said Food Employers Council spokesman Bob Voigt. "The union is still threatening and we're still far apart."

Voigt said butchers met with management representatives Saturday, and both sides were "still talking, still arguing" late into the night. He said meatcutters and Teamsters would meet today to vote on the latest management offers.

"The chances of a strike right now are about 50-50," said Voigt.

The vote will be completed Sunday night and will require a two-thirds majority to reject the latest pay offer.

But if a strike does come, Voigt vows the stores will stay open.

"We will keep the stores open," he said. "Of course, there will be some blank spaces on the shelves."

Voigt said arrangements have been made to get deliveries from independent trucking companies and suppliers, adding supervisors will be working, too.

"All the companies are prepared differently," he noted. "Some chains will be prepared better than others." He said supermarket chains in Southern California and Las Vegas would be affected and independent stores would be marginally affected.

Voigt said the 1973 supermarket strike involving butchers and Teamsters lasted five weeks and caused widespread food shortages. He admitted there would be some problems again this time.

"We can't replace 20,000 people," he said.

A key issue in the dispute is management's offer to give some 1,600 office workers a pay raise of 75 cents an hour over three years, while offering $1.65 an hour in raises to 8,000 truck drivers and warehouse workers.

Union leaders claim the offers are aimed to divide workers, but management argues they are needed because office workers' wages are out of line with those in other industries.

First flight in former Air Force 1

Carter tries president's wings

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Carter stepped aboard a blue-and-silver presidential aircraft for the first time Saturday and acted like a kid with a new toy.

"This is the one I've been looking for," the president-elect said as he took a long look at the first solid proof of his victory over President Ford in Tuesday's election.

Carter carried his garment bag and a pair of rugged hiking boots up the front ramp and passed the seal of the president of the United States. Then the plane took him to a vacation at secluded Musgrove Plantation among the pines, palms and Spanish moss of this southern Georgia coastal island.

"I thought Peanut 1 had been fixed up nicely until I saw this,"

said Carter, who chartered his own smaller jet during the campaign.

The president-elect inspected the plane from cockpit to tail, shaking hands with the Air Force crew and stewards.

At one point he walked to the rear and looked over a collection of photographs of Ford and his family and asked if a photo of the White House was really the White House.

"That's what I've been looking for," the successful Democratic candidate repeated.

"Do you feel presidential?" he was asked.

"I will when I get off," he replied and then smiled.

"I'm surprised how beautiful it is, how fancy it is," Carter said as reporters trooped in to inspect his airborne quarters.

The plane served former Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon as Air Force 1 until 1974, when it was replaced by a newer craft that Ford still uses. Carter called his new jet "very impressive, very beautiful, very historic."

"I felt like going back and getting my three-piece black suit when I saw this airplane," Carter said. He was dressed casually in sports slacks, shirt and beige cardigan sweater.

"I feel impressed with it but at ease with it," he said as he munched a sweet roll and sipped coffee and orange juice served by a steward wearing a blue blazer with the presidential seal on the pocket.

Carter was trailed through the plane by his son Chip's small black, part-terrier dog, J.B., which darted

To unnerstan' Jimmy, jes' tawk lak this

The Detroit Free Press, a Knight-Ridder paper, is privileged among northern metropolitan newspapers to have two staff members who can speak and understand Cracker. They are Billy Bowles, born in Chattahoochee, Ga., and Remer Tyson, born in Bulloch County, Ga. ("there wun't no town").

Drawing on their lifelong exposure, they offer this guide to that rich and exotic speech, which should help you to understand the new Carter administration.

By REMER TYSON and BILLY BOWLES

When Jimmy Earl gets to the White House, the bluebellies north of the Mason-Dixon Line are going to need a Cracker Dictionary to understand what he's talking about.

The dictionary also will be important to leaders around the world.

English may be the international language, but for the next four years diplomats had better know how to speak Cracker, or have an interpreter who understands the idiom of South Georgia.

For example, when the Carter folks talk about hog-killing weather, they mean it's cold enough to butcher a shoat without worrying about the meat spoiling.

If Jody Powell orders an Ar-Cee Cola and a moon pie, he will be sending for a soda pop bottled by Royal Crown Cola Bottling Co., headquartered in Columbus, Ga., and a chocolate-covered wafer and marshmallow sandwich.

Washington grocery stores will be getting orders for "ash potatoes" — the Deep South name for Irish potatoes.

In no particular order, here are selections from a Cracker Dictionary:

Cracker — Your new President. The term derives from the cracking of long whips by mule-driving teamsters hauling turpentine resin outside of Valdosta, Ga.

Tawk — To speak Cracker.

Mash — To press, as in, "Mash down the brakes, P.W.," or as a Southern gentleman was overheard to say on an Atlanta elevator, "Lady, can I mash your button?" Also, to crush, as in, "Mash that bug, buddy-roe."

Bidness — A company or corporate body, such as General Motors in Dee-Troit City; also, concern, as in, "It ain't none of yore bidness."

Pony-ack — A car put out by the same bidness that manufactures the Shivuh-lay.

Co-Coler — The world's best selling soda pop bottled by a big bidness started by Asa Candler in Atlanta.

Dope — A Co-Coler; also called a bottle dope.

Place — A farm: "He was raised on the Doc Hagan place."

Pender — The nut that Jimmy Earl grows on his place at Plains; also known as gopher or peanut; a South Georgia farmer wishing to inspect his peanut patch is likely to say, "Let's go look at the penders."

Hep — To assist, as in "Hep me through the night"; also hired hands, as in "How much do you pay your hep?"

Chunk — To Throw: "Chunk it to me, Joe Willie."

Litter-tour — Stuff written by Billy Shakespeare.

Lie-berry — Where you find stuff written by Billy Shakespeare.

Tarred — what you are after plowing all day.

Far — what burns in a farplace.

Fixin' — Preparing, as in, "Gimmie time, I'm fixin' to go it."

Cheer — Something you sit on, as in "Pull up a cheer and set down."

Hunker — To squat on your haunches, as Lyndon Johnson said, "Sometimes you have to hunker down and take it like a jackass in a hail storm."

Bait — An excessive quantity, as in, "Mama cooked a mess of collards and fed the younguns a bait of it," or "Quit messing with me, now, Billy Bob, I've had a bait of it."

Ill-noise — Where Chicago is.

Carry — To tote something or escort on foot or in a car ("Kin I carry you to the pitcher show?")

Grits — A tasteless, odorless dish made from ground corn that tastes like whatever you are eating it with.

Coat — What a judge presides over upstairs in the coat-house.

Tol'able — State of personal being that you're doing so-so: "How you feeling?" "Jes' tol'able."

Chillun — offspring, same as young'uns.

Y'all — contraction of you all, can be singular or plural: "Y'all come."

Hillbilly — A term that "Crackers use literally: someone who looks like Snuffy Smith and lives in the foothills of the Blue Ridges, north of Atlanta and south of Chattanooga; an insult to a south Georgia flatlander like Jimmy Carter."

Unduh — Beneath, as in "Unduh the spreading chestnut tree..."

Sody — Fertilizer made of nitrate of soda; also used as in "sody cracker," like a Saltine.

Hit — The pronoun "it"; used in starting a sentence, as in, "Hit's shore good to see you."

Arn — What miners dig out of the ground; also used in, "You jack up the car, Junior, and I'll get the tar arn"; also to press clothes, as in "I'd rather take a whippin' than to arn."

Idden — Same as "isn't" and rhymes with didden, which is the same as "didn't."

Piller — What you put your head on at night.

Young cyclist winds up journey around the world

GLOBE-GIRDLING cyclist Robert Morris, 22, shakes hands with hometown fans in Randolph Township, N.J., after completing 27-month trip around the world by bicycle. He was honored at halftime of a high school football game Saturday afternoon.

—AP Wirephoto

Combined News Services
Twenty-seven months and 32,000 miles after he began, Robert Morris pedaled once around the Randolph High School football field Saturday to end his solo round-the-world bicycle odyssey. The band played, the football game crowd cheered and Morris, 22, was presented a key to the city of Randolph Township, N.J., at halftime.

Morris said he made the trip to "see the world, see the people and to see how they live." He traveled through 30 countries in Europe, Africa, Asia and Australia. He went on to Hawaii and California and finally traversed late-autumn America in a meandering journey through 31 states. Wearing a blue cap and blue sweatshirt, Morris dismounted from his bike. "I'm glad to be here," he said. "The worst part was waiting all day to get here." He had spent Friday night in Hackettstown, only 22 miles away.

His mother, Julia, and his sister, Cathy, hugged and kissed Morris as his father, Robert, slapped him on the back.

When asked what he will do now, the younger Morris replied: "Maybe I'll do some bike racing. Other than that, I don't know; just go to work, get a job."

To get in shape, Morris bicycled to and from the New Jersey shore, between 80 and 100 miles round trip, before embarking on his solo journey, during which he averaged about 140 miles a day.

At a recent stopover in Harrisburg, Pa., Morris said he was disappointed by the lack of hospitality he received in the United States.

"It was a lot different from traveling across Europe or through some other countries," he said. "I really thought people in the U.S. would be friendlier than they were. But they're not as receptive, at first glance, to someone different. You can be riding along and people will just play with you. They have no respect for you."

Morris began pedaling across the continental United States after arriving in California in late August. A few days later, he received a shock while bicycling through Idaho.

He said, "I was minding my own business on the road when these guys drove up alongside in a pickup truck, put the barrel of a shotgun out the window and pulled the trigger."

The gun, however, was unloaded, leaving Morris more stunned than injured.

But there was good news, too. "I never knew there could be so many good-looking girls in Montana," he said.

'Mame' author

Patrick Dennis, whose rollicking tale about a madcap "Auntie Mame" was a runaway best-selling novel, died of cancer at his home in New York City Saturday. He was 55.

Amin takes credit

Ugandan President Idi Amin says he was responsible for Jimmy Carter's election as president. Amin said his endorsement of the Carter candidacy had insured Carter's victory by winning him the votes of "blacks and white revolutionaries," Uganda radio reported Saturday.

The radio quoted the outspoken African leader as saying he was prepared to offer Carter a "wide range of advice" on topics ranging from Africa to the Middle East.

Chess pairings

The International Chess Federation (FIDE) announced pairings Saturday for the first round of next year's tournament to pick a challenger for world champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union. Soviet defector Viktor Korchnoi was selected to play former world champion Tigran Petrosian of the Soviet Union while American Bobby Fischer was matched against Vlastimil Hort of Czechoslovakia. But FIDE is not sure either of those games will be played. The Soviets have demanded that Korchnoi, who defected to Holland in April, be banned from the tournament, and Fischer has been engaged in a dispute with FIDE over the rules of championship tournaments.

Simon unhappy

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon says the flap about his bid to bring a submachine gun back to New Jersey with him is "the grossest invasion of privacy" and "dangerous." Simon, 49, was fuming about the widespread publicity given to his problems in obtaining a permit from a Morris County, N.J., judge to add the .45-caliber Thompson submachine gun to the collection at his Harding Township, N.J., estate.

He said the 55-year-old gun, which still works, is a collector's item and added: "I've been collecting 20 years. I buy unusual guns. The Tommy gun is an unusual gun."

Dick Cavett

Television personality Dick Cavett has returned to New York City's Museum of the American Indian four artifacts that the New York State attorney general's office charged he had obtained from the museum unlawfully.

According to a state investigation, Cavett bought several pieces of pre-Columbian artifacts from private dealers and gave them to the museum, in return for which the museum gave him objects it possessed. Authorities said the arrangement was illegal because Cavett took an income-tax deduction on the pieces he donated, but paid no tax on the pieces he received in return as "gifts."

Mystery disease tied to chemicals

Combined News Services

PITTSBURGH — Federal health inspectors have concluded that the unknown illness that struck workers at an Armstrong County electronics plant was caused by chemicals and a poor ventilation system. About 130 workers at the Essex International Inc. plant in nearby Kittanning complained of nausea, headaches and shortness of breath several times in late September and early October.

Dr. Channing Meyer of the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health said that the chemical culprits were toluene — used in glue — freon, butyl alcohol and butyl acetate. All are cleaning agents.

GM to hear strike deadline

DETROIT — The United Auto Workers will set a strike deadline at General Motors Corp. this week after reaching a last-minute tentative agreement for hourly employees at Chrysler. In negotiations with industry giant GM, the union will be trying to win a pact for 390,000 workers similar to one agreed upon by Ford and Chrysler. UAW President Leonard Woodcock said officials would set the strike deadline early in the week.

Palestinian boat sunk

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israeli navy vessels sank a boat carrying Palestinian guerrillas and captured two other craft in a battle off the Lebanese coast Saturday, the military command said. It reported that one Palestinian was killed and 12 were captured, including two who were wounded. The prisoners were taken to an Israeli navy base, a communique said. It added there were no Israeli casualties.

Ulster bomb injures 25

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — A bomb planted in a car exploded outside a crowded bar at Ballymena in County Antrim Saturday night, wounding 25 persons, police said. Five of the victims were seriously injured in the blast about 25 miles north of Belfast.

A security guard on duty outside a bar in North Belfast was shot dead, authorities reported.

In the County Tyrone town of Omagh, some 7,000 persons joined in a peace march and a brief religious service to protest Northern Ireland's continued sectarian warfare.

Africa peace talks rejected

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — Five black African leaders meeting here Saturday ignored the Geneva talks on Rhodesia's political future and said the only way for blacks to gain power there is through armed struggle. They charged that diplomatic moves for a peaceful transition to black majority rule in Rhodesia, including the Geneva negotiations, only offer time "to consolidate the white racist regimes" in Rhodesia and South Africa.

"Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) will be liberated in the same way as Angola and Mozambique," Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere told reporters.

Show of Christian strength

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Christian loyalists of the Lebanese army staged a military review Saturday to buttress Christian claims that they can guarantee their own security despite continued fighting. The rightist Phalange Party, which fields the Christian militia in the 18-month-old civil war, said 2,000 soldiers paraded before army commander Hanna Saeed with tanks and armored cars.

Peace trip

TOKYO — Foreign sources in Peking reported three officials from Taiwan traveled to Peking to confer with the mainland Chinese government. They said the delegation was sent to China with the approval of Nationalist Premier Chiang Ching-kuo and "through the good offices of U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger."

Easy ordination

Can you please tell me what the city, county and state requirements are for an ordained minister to legally perform marriages and conduct funerals, open a church and in all ways conduct the duties of his calling? F.N.M., Long Beach.

The First Amendment guarantees of freedom of religion prohibit the government from establishing regulations for ministerial candidates. Virtually anyone may start a church and ordain ministers, a classic example being Kirby Hensley, who has ordained more than a million ministers at $2 a head for his Universal Life Church out of his Modesto garage. Once a minister is ordained—that is, recognized by any church (including one of one's own creation)—then that person is qualified to conduct marriages and perform all other duties of a minister. However, the laws of the state must be adhered to in the case of marriage; licenses and blood tests must be secured before the ceremony can be legally performed. Many people get mail-order ordinations for fun, though some are serious. Others have sought ministerial status to avoid the military draft or to claim tax exemptions. The Internal Revenue Service and the military cast a wary eye on exemption requests based on religion. The military law specifically ruled out deferments for part-time or "incidental" preachers. A spokesman for the IRS, pointing out that tax fraud is a criminal offense, said, "If you are trying to set up a tax exemption on a $2 mail order, you will hear from us."

Excess profit taxing

I bought 18 reels of 16mm film at a swap meet and later found out that they're home movies taken in the 1930s of Bing Crosby, his first wife, Dixie, and their sons. The movies also show Crosby and Andy Devine on a fishing trip. I don't know how the films ended up at a swap meet. How can I contact Crosby? I'd like to find out if the films are of any interest to him before I try selling them to Crosby collectors across the country. A.T., Gardena.

Action Line put you in touch with Crosby's business manager, and after he viewed the films in your home and corresponded with you over a year's time, you ended up wanting far more money for the home movies than Crosby was willing to pay. In 1943 Crosby's home in the Toluca Lake district of the San Fernando Valley burned down, and that's apparently when the singer lost possession of his home movies. After the fire, some of the charred remains, possibly including the films, were turned over to a salvage company, and via this route the films may have ended up at the swap meet where you bought them.

Clean sweep

Is the city so poor after the Queen Mary and the Long Beach Grand Prix that it can't afford to clean the grounds and walks of our nice courthouse? Is the city just letting it go to match the rest of the downtown area? And don't tell me it's just one or two days of dirt. There are papers, sticky goop and junk all over the place. The leaves and buds on the west sidewalk haven't been swept in weeks, if ever. If Disneyland with all its crowds can be kept so clean, it seems that a sweeping or hosing down of the sidewalks around the courthouse is not too much to expect. I'm a visitor from Ohio. A.V., Ohio.

The sidewalks around the courthouse and the police station should be cleaned almost daily, but Robert Kennedy, director of the Long Beach Public Service

Action Line

P.O. Box 230 Long Beach, Calif.

Department, concedes that the area has been somewhat neglected during the construction of the nearby City Hall. He promised to send a crew out to clean up the sidewalks. Kennedy said the sidewalk on the west side of the courthouse is lined with a type of rubber tree that drops buds at this time of the year. "When people walk on the buds, it does make a real mess," he said. The construction of the City Hall also has increased the amount of litter in the area, Kennedy said, and has limited access for the sweepers. He added that when construction is completed in the near future, his department plans to clean the entire area regularly.

Record check

I currently am a student at Long Beach City College, and I'm having trouble locating my high-school records. I went to school in Japan at an Air Force base that has since been closed. I am trying to apply for a work-study program at school, but this is impossible without my high-school transcripts. If I don't get a job through this program, I'll have to drop out of school. Can Action Line help? C.H., Long Beach.

You can obtain your high-school transcripts by writing to the National Records Center, Department of Defense Dependent School Section, Washington, D.C. 20409. This agency maintains school records for all branches of the military. When you request your records, you should include your full name, your father's name and rank, the last year you attended school on the base, your father's Social Security number and your Social Security number if you had one at the time you were a high-school student. If you want the transcripts sent directly to LBCC, you should state in your letter that you waive your rights under the Privacy Act and authorize the government to send your records to the college.

Big bell

My sister and her husband are coming from Illinois, and we would love to show them the Korea Friendship Bell. Can you tell us its exact location? U.S., Long Beach.

The huge bell, which measures 12 feet 4 inches high and weighs 37,400 pounds, is located on the hillside west of the 3700 block of Gaffey Street on the old Ft. MacArthur Upper Reservation. Molded by a score of craftsmen at a cost of $400,000, it features a relief of the Statue of Liberty and another of a Korean woman in native dress. Korea's Bicentennial gift to the American people is housed in a belfry constructed in the traditional Korean style from the Shilla Dynasty in the eighth century. The Los Angeles area was chosen as the site for the bell because the county has the largest population of Korean-Americans in the nation: about 100,000.

Employees challenge public session

Secret hospital inquiry asked

VENTURA (AP) — The California State Employees Association (CSEA), which represents most employees at Camarillo State Hospital, says it may seek a court order to close an unusual public grand-jury probe into deaths there.

CSEA spokesman Mike McBride said his group is considering whether to try to close the hearing, scheduled to begin here at 9 a.m. Monday.

Ventura County Dist. Atty. C. Stanley Trom and Grand Jury Foreman

Anthony J. Capritto had asked that the hearing be public, saying the investigation "directly and significantly affects the general public welfare."

Authorities Monday plan to present results of their year-long investigation of 75 deaths by asphyxiation, drug overdose, drowning and other unusual causes at the hospital over a four-year period. The grand jury is to determine if criminal negligence was involved in any of the deaths.

The usually closed grand-jury hearings are to be held in open court under a seldom-used provision of law.

McBride said the CSEA is trying to close the hearing on grounds that employees called to testify may be denied their due-process rights.

He said publicity may prejudice the right of a defendant to a fair trial. However, Trom noted that there are no criminal defendants at this point in the probe.

In his request for public hearings, Trom said they would be merely "investigatory in nature, in that there are no responsible parties (for the deaths) presently known to this office."

If CSEA does get a temporary restraining order halting the public hearing, Trom said he would postpone proceedings until the court issues a final ruling on whether the hearing should be open or closed.

MARINE PILOT KILLED IN CRASH IDENTIFIED

A Marine pilot apparently killed when his single-engine plane crashed into the sea between Long Beach and Catalina Island was identified Saturday by the Marine Corps as Sgt. Robert Stephen Treadway, 22, of Hillrose, Colo.

The plane crashed about 4 p.m. Friday in the channel, leaving only an oil slick on the water, the Coast Guard said. Neither the body nor any wreckage was recovered.

A Marine spokesman said Treadway was a member of a flying club at the El Toro Marine Corps Air Station. Treadway took off in the single-engine Beechcraft shortly after 3 p.m., the spokesman said. He had four hours' fuel.

Two boat skippers said they saw a puff of smoke in the sky about 15 miles from shore and watched it plummet to the sea where it burst into flames.

Explains 'flip' answers Hayakawa says he has a lot to learn

By DOUG WILLIS
AP Political Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — S.I. Hayakawa says that he has a lot to learn as a freshman U.S. senator and that his top priority will be to increase tax incentives for small businesses.

Hayakawa, who beat party-registration odds and incumbent Democratic Sen. John Tunney in his first venture into politics, said in an interview that running for office "is a combination of being an evangelist and a stand-up comedian."

The former San Francisco State College president said that he sees his new job as being a "fact-gatherer, scholar and judge" and that if sessions are dull he will take a nap in his office, not on the Senate floor.

HE SAID that he sometimes gave flippant answers to questions in the campaign because there was not time for serious, complex answers, but that even flippant answers gave an adequate idea of his attitudes.

In a question-and-answer session, California's 70-year-old senator-elect said he will be a Republican partisan when necessary, but he thinks most issues before Congress are nonpartisan.

Q. Did you always wear a lam-o'-shanter or did you adopt that as a symbol after that day you wore it pulling the wires out of the sound truck in 1968?

A. I wore one for many, many years. It came out of my Canadian background. I always wore it for fishing and sports-car riding and other slightly challenging occasions. I thought the moment I had to reopen San Francisco State was a challenging enough occasion, so I wore it then. And it became a symbol as a result of your profession (the news media). I've had my picture taken with it so many times that it's been a symbol ever since.

Q. You won by a very narrow margin. Your philosophy was criticized as "simplistic and obsolete" by the state's largest newspaper. What kind of a mandate do you have? Can you broaden your base?

A. I don't know that I really need to do anything more than push the same things I've been pushing.

I'm very, very much in favor of tax incentives for small business. That's one of the first things I want to look into. I would like to raise the limits for allowable earnings for people on Social Security... and to enable academically unmotivated teenagers to go to work, because the minimum wage of $2.50 is far too much for a 16-year-old with no previous work experience and no skills. These are things I promised in the campaign, and I'm going to stick to them.

Q. You will be a new-comer from the minority party. How do you plan to achieve these goals in Washington?

A. I certainly have a lot to learn about how to operate in Washington. What would you do? Certainly you make alliances with other senators and congressmen, find other people who agree with you, because it's never a one-man project.

Only some issues are partisan. A large number of issues are nonpartisan. I can be a partisan on partisan issues, but I can join with Democrats on issues that are nonpartisan or can be presented in a nonpartisan way.

Q. With all of your effort devoted to months to the campaign, when you found you had actually won, did you have the feeling of "What now?"

A. No. I felt, "That part of it is over; now on to the next step." I never really had much doubt about winning. It didn't come as a big surprise.

Q. As a semanticist, how did you view your campaign against Sen. Tunney? Did you and Tunney really talk about the issues, or were the important issues lost in the campaign?

A. I thought we had some quite serious differences of opinion. Those differences were made quite clear in the debates and also in his speeches and my speeches. I think it all served a very useful purpose.

Q. There have been accounts that during your days at San Francisco State you napped a fair amount during faculty meetings. Do you nap as a matter of course? Do you plan to nap during the working day back in the Senate to keep up your energy level?

A. I have no idea. I

don't nap as much as I used to. My whole energy level is higher now because I'm much more careful of my diet than I used to be.

And, as I've said before, so many professors took 25 minutes to present a two-minute idea. You may find that in Congress, but I didn't find it in the campaign. And if you find it in Congress you can go back to your office and sleep instead of sleeping publicly.

Q. As a candidate, you were a critic running against something. Now your job will be to perform. Have you thought about whether that will be a harder job than campaigning?

A. I've thought about it a lot. The job of running for office is a combination of being an evangelist and a stand-up comedian. The job of being a legislator is being to a considerable degree a fact-gatherer, scholar and judge. They are two different jobs. I've prepared for both.

I've been for 30 years or more on the lecture circuit, so I know how to hold and entertain an audience. I also am a scholar. So if it is necessary to research a subject, I know how to do it sufficiently and rapidly.

Ford campaign did 'truth test' on Carter in debates

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's campaign staff checked tapes of Jimmy Carter's voice during the first two presidential debates with a "voice-stress analyzer" to try to determine if he was lying, a Republican official said Saturday.

But the campaign never publicized the tests, although Carter exhibited more stress than Ford in their answers, said Eddie Mahe Jr., executive director of the Republican National Committee.

The Ford campaign did not pay for the tests, which were conducted by Rick Bennett of Issaquah, Wash., who made the machine, and an associate, Roger McLoughlin of Denver.

McLoughlin contacted Mahe and volunteered to analyze the tapes, according to Mahe, who said he told Stuart Spencer, Ford's deputy campaign director, about the offer.

McLoughlin had tested Carter's voice during the first televised debate.

"He said Carter was under tremendous stress during the debate, and it would be very helpful if we knew the areas where he was feeling stress," Mahe said.

On Oct. 20 McLoughlin and Bennett demonstrated the machine in Spencer's office, then went to the Republican National Committee office, where they spent all day reviewing tapes of the debates and underlining sections of transcript where Carter displayed the most stress, Mahe said.

But Mahe said both he and Spencer were reluctant to publicize the results because "this was the kind of thing that can whip around on you and blow up on you 14 ways from Sunday."

On Oct. 21, the day before the final debate,

Mahe sent the underlined transcript to Spencer, who never told him what he did with it.

Spencer was on vacation and unavailable for comment Saturday. But a President Ford Committee spokesman, Peter Teeley, said, "Obviously, whatever they found in those recordings was not used."

It's not end of the Rainbow for these girls

By JON VAN
Knight News Service

INDIANOLA, Iowa. — Must all Rainbow Girls be one color? A group of young Indianola girls who think not have initiated Michelle Palmer, a quiet, 12-year-old black, into their Rainbow chapter.

The initiation was somewhat anticlimactic for Michelle, whose acceptance last month by the chapter caused the national Rainbow organization to first suspend the Indianola group and, eventually, all 136 Iowa Rainbow chapters and their 5,000 members.

But the chapter decided, anyway, to give Michelle the usual initiation ceremony into the girls' fraternal order, conducted at the Indianola Mason Temple.

The ceremony couldn't help but impress Michelle and the three girls initiated with her.

IN THE DIMLY LIT chapter room, the initiates were left around and around the floor, stopping to hear older girls in white dresses lecture them on such topics as love, patriotism and community service.

"Jesus said: 'Thou shalt love the Lord Thy God with all thy heart . . . and thy neighbor as thyself.' Love is the fulfillment of every law," goes one speech to the new initiates.

The ceremony left Michelle "pretty bubbly all over — exhausted but happy," her adoptive father, Dwaine Palmer, said. He is white.

The national uproar caused by Michelle's acceptance into this small-town Rainbow chapter has left Michelle and her mother, Marita, emotionally drained. The Palmers have received phone calls from across the nation. All but about five supported Michelle.

"This is so mixed up," sighed Michelle. "I just wish everyone would forget about it."

THE FACT THAT Michelle has heard the secret Rainbow ritual and was warmly welcomed by the Indianola members and their adult advisers made some Rainbow officers livid.

Rainbow is a fraternal organization for girls 12 through 20. It is sponsored by the Order of Eastern Star, a Masonic auxiliary group.

"We don't take blacks to start with," explained Herbert Grout, supreme recorder of the International Rainbow Organization, headquartered in McAlester, Okla. "Her petition was not signed by a Mason or an Eastern Star member. It was illegally presented, so the Indianola Assembly got a note from us that it was closed."

All this, Grout said, "is based on an unwritten rule excluding blacks that's been in effect for 56 years."

It is not unusual for local Rainbow chapters to try to break the unwritten racial rule, Grout said. When that was tried in Iowa, he added, the state Masonic Lodge ruled that if Rainbow discriminates against blacks, the organization may no longer use buildings owned by Masonic lodges. That caused the suspension of all Iowa Rainbow groups, Grout said.

"IF SOMETHING isn't worked out, they'll all be closed on the first of the year," Grout said. He blamed the Iowa Masonic action on meddling by the federal government.

"The Iowa Masons have accepted federal funds for their homes for the aged. Why they do that, I can't imagine. They're under federal control now."

Whatever their motivation, the Iowa Masons have taken a strong stand against racial discrimination, and some adults predict that if the national group persists in following its "unwritten rule," the Iowa Rainbow girls will continue to operate as an organization severed from the national office.

On Friday, L. Ray Chamberlin, acting board chairman of the Rainbows' state executive board, said in Des Moines that the board will establish a separate state-wide organization, open to nonwhite members.

Chamberlin said officials are "interested in seeing Rainbow or a comparable organization continue in Iowa, which has a policy of nondiscrimination by reason of race, creed, color, or national origin."

ALTHOUGH GROUT contends the whole thing "is nothing more than blacks trying to break down the white organizations," Dwaine Palmer and his family hardly fit the image of radicals or even of civil rights activists.

Palmer, 37, has spent most of his life working for the phone company. He met Marita seven years ago in Fort Madison, an Iowa town on the Mississippi River, where he managed the phone company and she worked as a receptionist.

They have been married six years, the second marriage for each. Palmer adopted his wife's two children from a previous marriage, and the couple also have an 11-month-old daughter.

In their years together at Fort Madison, and the last three in Indianola, discrimination has not been a problem, said Palmer. He was the manager in Indianola until his promotion to the main office in Des Moines this month.

"THIS CONTROVERSY came as a surprise to us," Palmer says. "Maybe I'm kind of naive. I knew the group was selective about its membership and I guess I can buy that, but I didn't know it was restrictive by race."

When Michelle asked her dad if she could join Rainbow, he recalled, "she was mostly worried about the dues and buying a white dress for $40. She didn't have the money."

Now, Michelle's attention is on other problems.

"My concern is Iowa losing its charter," she said. "Pretty soon there'll be another state losing its charter, then another and another, and before long, the Rainbow will be all gone."

Young man slain in ROTC hazing

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A 20-year-old Queens College student hoping to join a St. John's University ROTC fraternity was stabbed to death with a bayonet Friday night during illegal hazing rites on a small island off Long Island's South Shore.

The victim, Thomas Fitzgerald, was said to have been playing a prisoner of war and learning "intimidation techniques" under interrogation when he was run through the chest by a bayonet wielded by a member of the Pershing Rifles, a national honorary military society.

Suffolk County police filed a charge of second-degree murder against James Savino, a senior at

Blacks grin over 'how we got a president'

By THOMAS JOHNSON
New York Times Service

COLUMBUS, Miss. — Several black laborers and domestic workers fortified themselves against the early-morning, 50-degree chill with country sausages, eggs and grits that Mary Johnson prepared at the tiny, humble Smith's Cafe that clings unobtrusively to this town's small shopping center.

They compared stories about "how we elected ourselves a president."

"The woman I work for told me to make sure I voted for President Ford," a heavy-set domestic worker said. "And I said 'Yes, ma'am, I certainly will.'"

The breakfast crowd laughed loudly, knowing what was coming.

"I went straight to the polls and voted for Carter," the domestic worker said. When the laughter died down, she added more quietly, "I've worked for that white woman for as long as I can remember, and she still thinks I'm a damn fool."

Blacks in the Deep South gave President-elect Jimmy Carter more than 95 per cent of their vote. More than 65 per cent of blacks registered to vote went to the polls, according to the Atlanta-based Voter Education Project.

The project's director, John Lewis, said Friday that the black vote nationally of more than 2.4 million, with more than 92 per cent of that going for Carter, was both "the largest black vote in history" and "the most decisive and influential single exercise of minority political power in this century."

In scores of interviews by the New York Times in the heavily black, rural communities along the Mississippi-Alabama borders, black voters saw Carter as "the only hope to change things," an end to the Nixon-Ford scoundrels and their foul-ishness" and, repeatedly, as "a chance for black folks to get some jobs."

William R. Harris, a recruiter of rural blacks for jobs in the construction industry national training program, put it this way: "Of course we don't know what Carter will do in the final analysis, but we had to kick those other fellows out because they didn't do what they should have done when they had the chance."

Black voters in this region likened the election promises of Carter to the social programs they remembered from the administrations of Democratic Presidents Roosevelt, Truman, Kennedy and, especially, Johnson.

"I was scared to death when Johnson, a southerner, became President," said A. L. Henderson, a small farmer living just south of Reform, Ala., "but he turned out to be just about the best president for the colored folks."

They expressed neither fear nor elation concerning Carter's being a southerner, but rather they often expressed the hope that, as a southerner, he "might turn out to be like LBJ."

Several also said that Carter had a better understanding of the need to rid the nation of racial prejudice. Especially, as C. T. Gilmore, a lumber worker near West Point, Miss., put it: "That deep down 'I hate a nigger and would rather die than change' kind of prejudice."

Black people make up about 40 per cent of the population in the Mississippi-Alabama border region, forming large pockets of predominantly black districts where their great-grandfathers had been slaves on vast cotton plantations.

As the white landowners mechanized their farming and went also into soybeans, cattle and pine trees, the poorer blacks became surplus labor and they now constitute the majority of the region's high unemployment rate. Many blacks have fled the region for the urban North.

A decade ago the civil rights movement concentrated here in "the black belt," named for both the color of some of its soil and for the large number of black people, and blacks have increasingly involved themselves in politics.

And since the region anticipates a major economic boom, the black political activism has been extended to the demands that blacks share equally in the region's economic development. This region is particularly concerned with the $2.6 billion in new industry that the 253-mile Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway is expected to bring into the region.

With his widely publicized vetoes of the employment bills, President Ford has been likened in this region to "the rich white folks who don't really care whether black folks improve themselves or not," said Albert Temple, a mechanic who lives just south of Columbus.

But since whites do control black incomes in this region, deceptions, like those of the domestic worker, have long been an accepted practice among blacks.

A young professional woman in Meridian, Miss., who comes from Mississippi's Clark County, said this was "the South's most valued tradition — hypocrisy." "You see, white folks can condemn what they call 'federal giveaways' like poverty programs, while they get rich on federal farm subsidies and government building programs. In this atmosphere black folks see nothing wrong with lying to white folks — it's almost our sacred ethnic duty," she said.

A black farmhand on a vast soybean field in Sumter County, Ala., told a visitor of a similar deception of his own employer. The farmhand said, "He asked me if I and my folks had voted for Ford, and I said 'Yes, sir.' And then he asked, if that was true, how did Carter beat Ford something like 3,500 to 2,000 votes in this county? I told him I didn't know and he said it was all peculiar and strange. I wanted to laugh, but I didn't crack a smile."

He added, with some anger, "If we had some real jobs in this county I could tell that cracker to his face that 'Yeah, I voted for Carter and if you don't like it, you can go straight to hell.'"

To the North, along Route 17, Esther Robinson and Fannie Davis were walking seven miles into Aliceville to visit a sick friend when they accepted a ride from a passing motorist.

Mrs. Robinson said during the ride she had heard that President Ford had been promised a job selling peanuts along the beach to tourists watching

Richard Nixon throw stones into the Pacific Ocean.

Mrs. Davis said this was "more work than other man had tried to get for the colored folks."

His candidates lost

Election shakes boss Daley

By WILLIAM WERTZ

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Richard J. Daley emerged from Tuesday's election with his near-legendary reputation as a political kingmaker in tatters.

Among his problems:

—His hand-picked candidate for governor was crushed by the largest vote margin in Illinois history, and the winner was James R. Thompson, a former prosecutor who had helped put several of the mayor's cronies in jail on corruption charges.

—Daley's carefully chosen candidate for Cook County prosecutor lost to Republican incumbent Bernard Carey despite an enormous effort by the mayor's organization to return the powerful investigative post to party control.

—Illinois and its valued bundle of 26 electoral votes went to President Ford. Although Jimmy Carter didn't need them, as it turned out, the loss can hardly have won influence or obligations for the 74-year-old Daley or Chicago in the eyes of the forthcoming Democratic administration in Washington.

On the day after the election, as Republicans celebrated and headlines proclaimed "Daley the Big Loser," the mayor ducked reporters and flew off to vacation in Florida, where the climate was warmer and brighter.

Daley still retains his control over the city and can still deliver Chicago votes. But his state and national power seems to be draining away.

How did it happen? Clearly, one factor was Daley's choice of candidates. His choice for governor, Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett, ran what one writer described as "the most dreary, inept, shallow and pigheaded" campaign in decades. Another writer said the mayor's pick for state's attorney, Edward Egan, had "all the drive and charisma of your average algebra teacher."

But perhaps of equal importance was the 1976 Illinois electorate. Because of recent population shifts, the vote from Chicago — no matter how completely it is captured by Daley's Democratic organization — no longer is the decisive factor it once was.

An analysis of voting figures shows that Daley produced for Carter a higher percentage of the Chicago vote than he did for John F. Kennedy in 1960. It was that election, widely regarded as a masterpiece of political manipulation by Daley, which established him as one of the nation's most influential politicians.

Carter got 67.5 per cent of the Chicago vote in 1976, compared with the 63.6 per cent that went to Kennedy in 1960.

But the Chicago vote represented 35 per cent of the Illinois votes cast for president in 1960; this year it represented only 25.7 per cent.

In 1960, votes from Chicago amounted to 44.5 per cent of all Democratic votes cast in Illinois for president. In 1976, the Chicago Democratic vote was only 35.7 per cent of that total.

HAZING

Sievers Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N.J., is a cadet first lieutenant in the Pershing Rifles.

Savino, 21, was arraigned in First District Court in Hauppauge, N.Y., and remanded without bail to the Suffolk County Jail pending a hearing Tuesday.

According to police, the incident occurred at 11:20 p.m. on Indian Island, an uninhabited 50-acre islet just off Lindenhurst. About 20 members and pledges of the St. John's unit of the Pershing Rifles had gone to the islet aboard a rubber raft and set up a camp, authorities said.

Hazing, the practice of subjecting fraternity or sorority initiates to tests of punishment, harassment or other abuse as a condition of membership, is a violation of both New York State law and the regulations of most colleges, including St. John's University.

THE commander of the ROTC unit at St. John's, Lt. Col. James Rafferty, expressed regret over Fitzgerald's death and what he called "the loss of two very fine men," and he noted that the activities on the island were "not sponsored" by the unit. Had they been sponsored, he said, officers would have been present to supervise.

But Rafferty declined to characterize the students' activities as "hazing" and contended that they were "unauthorized training."

The ROTC unit at St. John's has 225 members, 40 of them students at other colleges in the metropolitan area that do not have ROTC units of their own. The Pershing Rifles is made up of about 40 members of the St. John's ROTC unit.

The last hazing death in the metropolitan area occurred two years ago in Long Branch, N.J., when a 19-year-old Monmouth College student, William Flowers, suffocated in the collapse of a "grave" he had been made to dig and lie in as part of an initiation to Zeta Beta Tau fraternity.

BECAUSE of hazing, restrictive membership practices and other factors, fraternities and sororities on the nation's college campuses declined sharply during the student activism of the 1960s. In the past couple of years, however, there have been indications of a resurgence of interest in fraternities and sororities.

In the past week, the Board of Trustees of the State University of New York decided to permit national sororities and fraternities on the school's 64 campuses after a 23-year ban.

The Very Rev. Joseph T. Cahill, president of St. John's University, was out of the city Saturday and unavailable for comment. But a spokesman, Martin Healy, said: "Our entire community is shocked."

HE SAID the university would make a "thorough investigation" of the incident and noted that disciplinary action, including expulsion, would be undertaken if warranted.

Fitzgerald, who lived in Maspeth, N.Y., was the youngest of 10 children of a widow. A pre-law student and a junior at Queens College, he was said to have joined the St. John's ROTC unit last summer in the hope of obtaining scholarship assistance from the Army.

House to reshuffle committee chairmanships

By RICHARD MADDEN
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—While the size of the large Democratic majorities will be little changed in the 95th Congress that convenes Jan. 4, the chairmanships of a number of key congressional committees and subcommittees will undergo a major reshuffling, especially in the House of Representatives.

As a result, the new administration of President-elect Jimmy Carter will be dealing not only with new top leaders of the Senate and House, but with many new committee and subcommittee chairmen who will play major roles in shaping legislation.

Because of retirements and election defeats, at least eight of the 22 standing committees of the House will have new chairmen next January. In addition, the chairmanships of at least 22 House subcommittees, including two that set the level of appropriations for foreign aid and public works, will be vacant.

Only three chairmen of relatively small committees in the Senate were defeated last Tuesday, but there will be openings in the chairmanships of at least 21 subcommittees.

The chairmanship changes probably will not produce many noticeable ideological shifts in the work of the committees if events go as expected, but the reshuffling under scores the large turnover that will take place when the Senate and House begin to choose new leaders and chairmen at separate party caucuses starting next month.

In addition to committee chairmen, the Senate will select new majority and minority leaders and the House will choose a new speaker and majority leader as well as filling other leadership posts.

Seventeen new senators were elected last Tuesday, and there will be an 18th when a successor is appointed for Sen. Walter F. Mondale, the Minnesota Democrat who is the vice president-elect. That would be the largest number of new senators to take office since the election of 23 new senators in 1946.

Depending on the outcome of four undecided House races, there will be 67 to 71 new representatives, down slightly from the 91 new representatives elected two years ago.

This influx of new and younger members could lead to challenges against other incumbent Democratic chairmen in addition to fights over senior Democrats ascending to the vacant chairmanships. Two years ago freshmen Democrats led the fight to successfully oust three senior committee chairmen.

Among the major House committees that will have new chairmen are the Budget, Rules, International Relations, Interior and Public Works committees. Also open will be the chairmanships of the Post Office and Civil Service, Merchant Marine and Fisheries and the Small Business committees.

Under the House Democratic rules, Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., will be ineligible for another term as chairman of the Budget Committee, which sets federal spending and revenue goals as part of the new congressional budget-making process.

Among the possible successors are Reps. Robert N. Giallardo of Connecticut and Neal Smith of Iowa, both Democrats.

Rep. James J. Delaney, a 75-year-old New York Democrat, is in line to become chairman of the Rules Committee, succeeding Rep. Ray J. Madden, D-Ind., who was defeated for renomination earlier this year. The Rules Committee acts as an arm of the leadership in determining which bills get to the House floor and in setting the ground rules for debate and amendments.

With the retirement of Rep. Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., is in line to become chairman of the International Relations Committee, which has played a more assertive role in recent years in foreign-policy matters.

THE retirement of Rep. James A. Haley, D-Fla., would put Harold T. Johnson, D-Calif., in line to be chairman of the Interior Committee, and the retirement of Rep. Robert E. Jones, D-Ala., would put Rep. James C. Wright Jr., D-Tex., next in line to be chairman of the Public Works Committee.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., would be in line to succeed Rep. David N. Henderson, a North Carolina Democrat who retired, as chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, would be in line to head the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, succeeding Rep. Leonor K. Sullivan, a Missouri Democrat who retired.

Rep. Tom Steed, D-Okla., would be in line to succeed Rep. Joe L.

Evins, a Tennessee Democrat who retired, as chairman of the Small Business Committee.

In the Senate, the defeat of Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, could elevate Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., to chairman of the Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee. With the defeat of Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., Quentin N. Burdick, D-N.D., is in line to head the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. And Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., could succeed Vance Hartke, an Indiana Democrat who was defeated, as chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee.

The Senate, however, is considering a reorganization of its committee and these three committees could be merged with others.

MAYOR DALEY

fastest growth in the past 16 years has come in Republican areas, principally the suburban counties surrounding Chicago.

In 1960, Richard M. Nixon got 131,691 votes in the five counties around the city. In 1976, Ford got 425,295 in those counties.

Still there are those who insist that, if Daley were half the political wizard he is reputed to be, he would have taken these population shifts into account and chosen candidates with more widespread appeal in 1976.

"He insisted that Mike Howlett run for governor.

At a time when people were fed up with conventional politicians, Daley decided that an aging, fat, gravel-voiced West Sider could beat a young reformer type like Jim Thompson," wrote columnist Mike Royko, author of "Boss," a book about Daley.

"It's obvious now that Daley is quite good at getting himself elected mayor of Chicago. But beyond that he's not much of a political genius anymore," Royko wrote.

Tuesday's losses were not a new phenomenon. Among Daley's prior calamities:

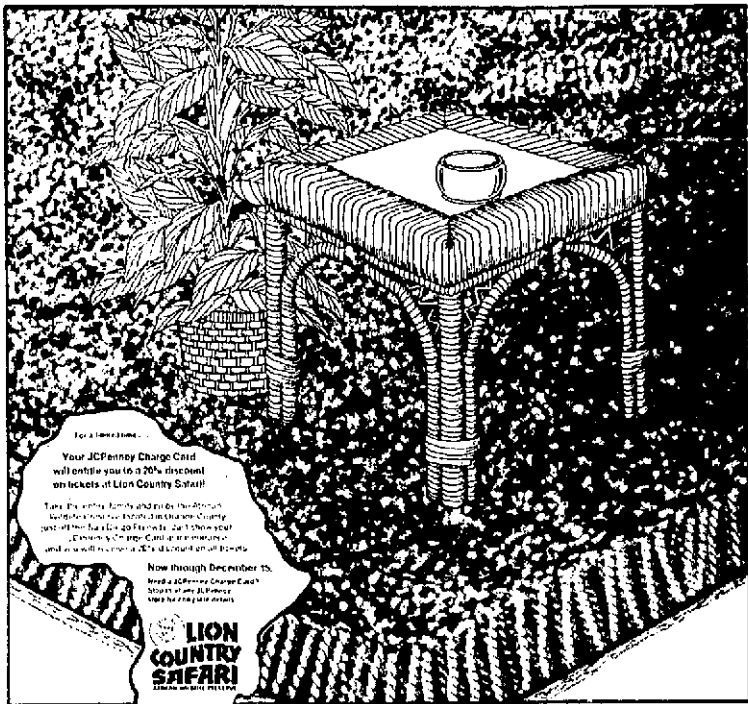

—In 1972, Daley's choice

for governor was upset in the Democratic primary by Daniel Walker, a relatively unknown lawyer who had never before held public office. Walker was defeated by Howlett in the 1976 primary in a loss most observers attributed to Walker's unpopularity rather than Daley's clout.

—Daley's choice for state's attorney in 1972 was defeated in the primary by incumbent Edward Hanrahan, under a cloud because of a police raid that took the life of Black Panther leader Fred Hampton. Then Hanrahan was defeated in the general election by Carey.

ERA groups hail ballot wins

WASHINGTON (AP)—Women's rights groups are applauding the support given the Equal Rights Amendment by Colorado and Massachusetts voters in state constitutional votes Tuesday.

They say it bodes well for the campaign to get four more states to ratify the federal ERA as the 27th Amendment to the Constitution.

Elly Peterson and Liz Carpenter, chairwomen of ERAmerica, said the votes were especially significant coming after the failure of anti-ERA forces to knock the amendment from the Republican platform last summer.

The anti-ERA forces said, however, that they were gratified at the victory by some ERA opponents in several legislative elections.

The Colorado vote against taking the ERA out of the state constitution where it was put in 1972 was "very encouraging endorsement of the concept of equality under the law by people who have been living under that law for four years," said Betsey Wright of the National Women's Education Fund.

Massachusetts voters put the ERA in their state constitution with Tuesday's referendum.

A year ago, New York and New Jersey voters turned down attempts to add the ERA to their state constitutions, causing consternation among supporters. Some analysts said the momentum for the ERA faltered because of fear and confusion among voters.

Mary Brooks of the League of Women Voters said the more than 120 national groups supporting the ERA changed tactics after last year's setback.

between the legs of the president-elect, his family, his staff, the reporters and the stewards.

Chip Carter, in blue jeans, explained that "J.B." stands for "Jet Black," or perhaps "Jerry Brown or John Birch or whatever you prefer."

His father was asked if he plans to change the picture mounted on a bulkhead showing Ford framed by the American and presidential flags.

Carter laughed and replied: "We haven't decided who to put there."

"Do you feel any different?" he was asked.

"We're sober about the job," he replied.

At several points he noted the plane's history, saying, "This is the plane on which President Johnson was sworn in as president. President Nixon's trip to China was made on this plane."

The Boeing 707 jet, now designated Air Force 28000, also brought Kennedy's body back to Washington from Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

It is one of several back-up planes for Air Force 1, the Spirit of '76, which Carter will use after he takes office.

The presidential plane has paneled walls, a massive global communications console and a presidential compartment with sofas and chairs that can be shut off for privacy.

Carter's staff was just as delighted with the plane as he was. At one point in the 45-minute flight from Albany Airport near his home in Plains, Ga., to Glynn Naval Air Station in Brunswick, Ga., Jody Powell, Carter's press secretary, came back to confess that the phone had rung and he hadn't known where to find it.

After the plane landed, Carter told reporters that he will meet later this month with Ford and that his wife, Rosalynn, will meet with Ford's wife, Betty.

First, he said, he plans to receive a national security and intelligence briefing from CIA Director George Bush.

As if to emphasize the working side of the vacation, Carter personally loaded a large cardboard carton labeled "Transition Documents" into the trunk of his car. They outline priorities for appointing 75 top officials and list the policy options Carter will have in the first few months of his presidency.

After the Carter caravan arrived at the secluded plantation owned by industrialist Smith Bagley, Carter told aides he planned to fish for sea bass and trout in Musgrove Creek, which borders the comfortable cabins in which the Carter party is staying.

"I've got a lot to read, but today I think I'm going to catch up on my sleep," Carter said. "We have been working pretty hard since we got back home."

U.S.-S. Korea relations threatened by scandals

By GIL BAILEY
Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON—A pattern of foreign intrigue, including beautiful and charming women, big money, campaign contributions and the intelligence agencies of two countries is threatening relations between the United States and South Korea.

Involved in this pattern are members of the House leadership and a group of present and former California congressmen.

The pattern involves a major effort of at least several years duration by South Korea, using embassy officials, its own CIA and Korean nationals to influence members of congress and top members of the executive branch. The Justice Department is now investigating up to 22 members or former members of Congress in its probe of the Korean connections.

ON THE other side of the coin, news stories, not denied, reported that the U.S. bugged key meetings in the Blue House, Korea's White House, between South Korean President Park Chung Hee and top aides.

At one of those meetings Park discussed the operations with Tong-sun Park, a Washington-based Korean businessman involved in the rice trade. Discussions also involved the disbursement of $500,000 to $1 million in gifts and contributions to U.S. officials, according to the Washington Post.

Park is one of the keys to the Korean operation. He left the U.S. shortly before the investigation became public, although he has said he will return.

Another apparent key figure in the operation was Suzie Thompson, a Korean, who is an aide to retiring House Speaker Carl Albert. She has been called before a federal grand jury.

A third key is former Korean Ambassador Dong Jo Kim.

KOREANS MADE contributions to House Democratic Whip John McFall, D-Calif.; Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., House Democratic Deputy Whip, and former Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif. In addition, Koreans sponsored parties for Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., current House Democratic majority leader, who is scheduled to become House speaker.

However, one of the key American figures in the pattern appears to be former California Rep. Richard Hanna, D-Orange County, now a businessman. Hanna has made numerous trips to Korea and has had business dealings with Korea and Park.

A former aide to Hanna, Jim Cousins, reported that Hanna believes he is currently under federal investigation.

Another Californian, Rep. Robert Leggett, D-Vallejo, has admitted he is under investigation.

California Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Fullerton, came under attack during the recent congressional election because of his contacts with the Koreans, although Wiggins said he has been told "affirmatively" by Justice Department that he is not under investigation.

The stories of Waldie and Wiggins may illustrate at least a part of the operations.

The two became involved in Korean affairs as members of the House Judiciary Committee when they traveled to Korea in 1969. The purpose of their trip, paid for by Congress, was to study the case of a constituent of Waldie, who as an American soldier had been convicted of murder and sentenced to death by a Korean court. "We didn't know that he was going to Korea, but Dick Hanna joined us in California and was on the plane," Wiggins reported. "He said he was on private business."

When the plane landed in Korea the party was greeted by Tong-sun Park and Suzie Thompson. Thompson was in Korea on vacation, according to Wiggins.

He said he had seen Thompson on Capitol Hill but had never before met her. Park drove Wiggins to his hotel, leading later to a complaint from a Korean official who said the official greeting party had been bypassed.

On their return from Korea, Wiggins became socially acquainted with Thompson, and he and his late wife attended dinner parties and receptions that she gave.

"She is a magnificent cook, and it was a very pleasant evening," said Wiggins.

Later, Wiggins said, "When my wife became critically ill and died, she was extraordinarily kind."

When Wiggins remarried, he and his second wife attended more parties given by Thompson.

"I just heard from her indirectly 20 minutes ago. My wife sent her flowers for her birthday, and I just opened her thank-you card," he said Friday.

"Nothing improper took place," he added.

However, Wiggins did report that a member of the Korean National Assembly visited him in his office during the 1974 election.

"He said something about 'people in Korea would like to be helpful' and I stopped him, pointing out that any contributions from foreign nationals would be illegal," Wiggins said.

He noted that no "illegal" or "indecent offer" was made.

Wiggins made a number of other trips to Korea.

In particular, he went on one trip marking the 25th anniversary of the start of the Korean war, a trip paid for by Congress. Wiggins was a company commander and then a staff officer in that war.

In addition, he flew to Korea to deliver a commencement address at a private Korean university. His flight and that of his wife were paid for by the university.

In the U.S., he saw Park twice, once in the company of Hanna at the Georgetown Club, owned by Park and used by him in his entertainment efforts.

Wiggins noted that he served on the Judiciary Committee and the House Administration Committee with little power over foreign affairs. He said he had not been improperly pressured by the Koreans.

Waldie agreed. He served on the Judiciary Committee and Civil Service and Post Office Committee.

He and his wife also were entertained by Thompson.

Other guests of Thompson included Reps. Leggett and Charles Wilson, D-Inglewood.

The Waldies and the Wiggins, although political opposites, are close personal friends.

Both men, particularly because of their opposite points of view expressed during the House Judiciary impeachment inquiry concerning former President Nixon, are highly respected on Capitol Hill.

WALDIE DID receive a political contribution from Ambassador Kim. It was in the nature of the purchase of two tables at a California fund-raiser for Waldie's losing campaign for governor of California.

Waldie duly reported the contribution at the time.

His wife also received a Korean silk dress from Kim.

Cooper can cite limitations statute—but IRS wants loot

land," he said. Instead, Cooper picked some of the roughest country in the Pacific Northwest.

HE TOOK two of the four parachutes with him when he jumped. One was a small emergency chute of the type used by stunt flyers. Under ideal conditions, even someone who knew what he was doing might break an ankle or leg with it.

The other was a training chute used for demonstrations. The panels had been sewn shut. It wouldn't have opened.

The next night the FBI reenacted the skyjacking using the same plane, crew, fuel load, speed and altitude. The test helped flight engineers and meteorologists to compute the probable drop zone to be an area covering about 25 square miles.

It has been searched and re-searched in vain. In April, 1972, 200 Army troops from Ft. Lewis, Wash., spent 18 days in the area. All they found was the victim of a homicide, a case unrelated to Cooper's.

WHAT would it take to find Cooper's remains, assuming they are there?

"I'd say it might take 5,000 men five years. I mean, how do you search a blackberry thicket higher than your head?"

The area contains part of a reservoir, steep hills and dense forest, much of it far from roads or trails. Experienced hunters get lost up there every year.

Loggers who work in the area agree that coyotes, mountain lions or wild dogs would make quick work of a body. After five years, they say, you might find a scrap of bone or two, if that.

Nevertheless, for a while Cooper was a folk hero of sorts.

He was macho. He was daring. He didn't hurt anybody, but he ripped off a big corporation. And he beat the fuzz.

THERE were Cooper T-shirts and Cooper bumper stickers. There were songs about Cooper. Two men were arrested for trying to bilk Newsweek magazine of $30,000 for an interview with "Cooper."

And there were imitators. Around the world, there were more than a dozen skyjacking attempts patterned after Cooper's. Cooper is the only one not known to have failed.

With increased airport security and modification of the Boeing 727

so the rear door wouldn't open in flight, the fad stopped.

The flow of clues, hints, and tips from the public about Cooper has slowed to a trickle now. After checking out more than 1,000 suspects, the FBI says it knows little more about Cooper than it did on that stormy night when he leapt into history.

WHAT kind of a man would do what Cooper did?

An ex-convict with no ties to people outside prison? A drifter who wouldn't be missed if he dropped from sight? A man with ties to family or friends who says, "I'm going to Libya to drill for oil. I won't write but you'll hear from me eventually?" An expatriate? A nut?

All possible, says Himmelsbach.

"Our society is so open, with its rights to come and go. It's so uncontrolled that it is possible for somebody to leave or drop out and nobody would think anything about it."

For a time it appeared a light plane may have been waiting for Cooper and whisked him from the drop zone that night. This assumes Cooper knew where he was jumping, an idea the FBI rules out.

A small plane did leave the area that night, but the pilot has been cleared.

Hit-and-run ship hunt narrowed to '2 or 3'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Coast Guard, searching the West Coast for a hit-and-run ship, is concentrating on two or three "suspect vessels," the Pacific commander says.

Vice Adm. A.C. Wagner would not identify the ships being sought, but said the Coast Guard is checking merchant vessels from San Diego to Juneau, Alaska, in hopes of locating the ship that allegedly sank and abandoned the Pacific Pearl off Northern California Thursday.

One man who had been aboard the ship is presumed dead, and three others were rescued.

A vessel is expected to stand by, regardless of nationality, when involved in an accident with another ship on the high seas, the Coast Guard said.

"If it turns out to be an Ameri-

A THEORY that the crew was part of the plot also has been scrapped.

Himmelsbach said that the whole thing probably was put together with minimal planning and that the bomb was a bundle of relatively harmless highway flares. The bomb was red. Dynamite isn't. If the crew members had realized that, they might have called his bluff at the time, Himmelsbach said. "He's lucky he got as far as he did with a plan like that."

Cooper's face, drawn by artists, is not a memorable one. It could be your neighbor, or a fellow bus rider.

"I'm sure a few dingalings will come along after the five years are up and say, 'Hey! I did it,'" Himmelsbach chuckled.

But even if the statute holds up, Cooper will have problems.

The Internal Revenue Service computes his tax debt, including penalties and interest, at about $198,000. And the Globe Indemnity Co., which had to pay $180,000 to the airline, may want to talk to him.

So now what?

"We have to accept the possibility that we may never know," Himmelsbach said. "I guess we can live with that if we have to."

The Coast Guard rescued the three survivors Thursday. They were clinging to the debris of the 75-foot wooden boat 23 miles off Ft. Bragg. The survivors said a large boat sheared off the stern of the Pearl.

The incident occurred in heavy fog with poor visibility.

Wagner said the sea hunt originally centered around "about twelve suspect vessels," but is now "down to two or three."

He said the cargo-carrying ship was described as having a light gray hull and a green deck.

FCC member elected NAACP chief

NEW YORK (AP)—Benjamin L. Hooks, a member of the Federal Communications Commission, was unanimously elected Saturday to succeed Roy Wilkins as executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A spokesman for the civil rights organization said the national board of the NAACP met Saturday morning and agreed on the selection of Hooks, 51, to replace Wilkins, who retires next July 31.

Hooks, of Memphis, Tenn., was the first black appointed to the FCC. He is a lawyer, a banker, a licensed minister and a longtime human-rights activist.

"This is one of the most important jobs in the country... the very top in terms of the black community," he said in Memphis after hearing of his selection.

Hooks said he would have to resign his FCC position to accept the new job. He said he would meet with NAACP officials in Washington to discuss details of the appointment.

As far as immediate goals, Hooks said, "There are no great novel changes I'm going to propose. I just want to really see it bigger and better."

He was the first black to become a criminal court judge in Tennessee since the Reconstruction.

"Benjamin Hooks has made an outstanding record in every field of endeavor he has attempted. . . . He is extraordinarily gifted, multi-talented and effective," said Margaret Bush Wilson, chairwoman of the board.

Wilkins, 75, has held the top NAACP post since 1955, but his career with the organization began in 1931. The spokesman said Hooks would assume office Jan. 1.

At its September meeting, the board relieved Wilkins of all responsibilities for internal operations so he could concentrate on important policy issues.

Hooks has been described as a hard-working, driving man, rarely satisfied with things as they are but with a reputation for fairness in his dealings.

"The NAACP has been a part of my life for as long as I can remember," reflected Hooks, noting that he has worked with local offices of the agency both in Memphis and Detroit.

Hooks became Tennessee's first black criminal court judge in 1965 when he was appointed to the bench by Gov. Frank Clement. A year later he won election to a full six-year term.

But in addition to the law practice, which he launched in 1949, he is also a Baptist minister serving congregations in Memphis and Detroit. He resigned his judgeship in 1968 to "devote more of my time to the increasing demands of my ministry."

HOOKS became the first black to serve on the FCC in 1972 when he was selected by former President Nixon.

There had been speculation that with the election of Jimmy Carter as president Hooks might have been in line for chairman of the FCC.

Long active in black community affairs, Hooks also had a go at black capitalism in Memphis, serving for two years as head of the Mahalia Jackson Fried Chicken franchises.

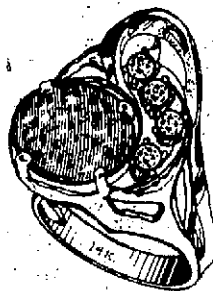

This business failed, however, and Hooks commented at the time that it suffered from lack of support from the black community.

"I've seen my long-haired brothers with their hands up in a black power salute, shuffling right on by to Colonel Sanders," he reflected.

Hooks' father ran a photography business in Memphis, later taken over by Hooks' brother, Charles.

HOOKS ATTENDED LeMoyne College in Memphis and then joined the Army in World War

Flu-shot program falling far short of goal

By HAROLD SCHMECK Jr.
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — One-third of the way through its planned time period, the national swine-flu program has vaccinated fewer than one-tenth of the people it was intended to reach.

The early performance has raised serious doubts among some experts that the much-delayed effort can achieve its goal of protecting most adult Americans before the onset of the 1976-77 flu season.

In New York City, for example, the head of the program said the turnout has been poor.

"As it's going now," Dr. Pascal James Imperato, the first deputy health commissioner, said Saturday, "it will probably reach somewhere between 15 and 20 per cent of the target population."

As of Friday, he said, clinics in the city have vaccinated roughly 110,000 out of a total eligible population of about 5 million.

Henry Woodard, the coordinator of the program for the rest of the state, said he couldn't guess what the total achievement would be, partly because some of the upstate population centers are just getting started. He said the number of persons vaccinated upstate during the last week in October equaled the total for the first three weeks.

An estimated 224,000 were vaccinated against flu last month in New York State outside the city, 113,000 of them during the final week of the month.

In California, which has the largest population of any state, Dr. James Chin said he had hoped the program would reach about half the adult population. As things are going now, he said, "if we get 30 to 40 per cent we'll be lucky."

Chin, who is chief of the State Health Department's Infectious Disease Section, said most counties were not able to start their efforts until Oct. 15 or 20, because they could not be assured supplies of the vaccine.

This kind of delay appears to have been common nationally. Several major regions have reported vaccinating about as many during the last week in October as they did during all the previous weeks of the month.

After delays that put the program behind schedule by at least six weeks, the nationwide immunization program began Oct. 1 in Indianapolis, Ind., and Waltham, Mass., with many states and localities getting started during the first two weeks of the month.

The federal government's Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga.,

which is coordinating the national program, has reported that 9.6 million persons were vaccinated during October. The CDC estimates that this is slightly more than 7 per cent of the "target population," which consists of almost all American adults and "high-risk" persons under 18.

The national figures show that almost half the total vaccinations during October were done during the last week of the month, an indication that the program is gathering momentum.

Nevertheless, with more than 120 million adults still unvaccinated, the effort would have to speed up to more than 2 million inoculations a day, and keep that pace, to get the job done by the end of the year. This seems unlikely.

California, New York State and New York City, for example, all plan to close down their clinic programs by about mid-December.

In California, Chin said there was little logic in continuing the public clinic program much beyond mid-December. By that time, he said, the flu season will probably have begun. This situation would greatly complicate an immunization program and weaken its effectiveness.

Once flu hits a population it moves fast, often spreading through a whole region in a few weeks. For vaccination to be useful, a person must receive it far enough in advance of exposure so that he or she has time to develop immunity. This commonly takes two weeks or so.

Throughout the nation, the program consists of two parts. The first priority is usually placed on vaccinating the elderly and others considered to be at "high risk." This group includes persons over 65 or with chronic disease of the heart, lungs or kidneys or other conditions that would tend to leave them prey to serious effects from flu.

For the high-risk persons, the national program recommends vaccination with bivalent vaccine to protect against both swine flu and the type of influenza called A-Victoria that was prevalent in the United States last winter.

Swine flu, the target of the program for the population in general, has not been detected anywhere in the world since an outbreak early this year at Ft. Dix, N.J. Influenza experts considered its appearance there a serious portent because it is a type against which few Americans have immunity. If it does reappear, therefore, it could be expected to spread widely and with potentially dangerous effect.

Since it has not been detected since February, however, many public health officers are becoming increasingly doubtful that it will reappear this winter. A-Victoria, however, is considered likely to reappear in at least sporadic outbreaks because isolated cases have been found from time to time all year here and abroad.

Nurse, crippled husband told to divorce to get state aid

FLINT, Mich. (AP)—State welfare officials have told a young nurse and her crippled husband to get a divorce so they can qualify for state disability payments.

And newlyweds Dale and Louise Schnebelt, who decided against divorce, have been told their federal disability payments will be cut.

The Schnebelts are appealing a decision by Michigan's Department of Social Services ending their $270 disability payment and requiring 23-year-old Schnebelt to return to a rest home.

They also have been told that their $192 federal

Supplemental Security income payment will go down to $101. Mrs. Schnebelt must stay home to take care of her husband, so the two payments are the couple's only source of income.

Mrs. Schnebelt said Friday that the latest cut in disability payments will bring their monthly income down to $371. She said their expenses—rent, a special diet for Dale, repayment of a college loan, laundry and car payments—are about $500 a month.

"They tell us they understand. But they say that they have their rules," Mrs. Schnebelt said.

The couple was advised to get a divorce so Louise could be paid as a nurse for her husband—as she was before their marriage—and the $270 a month from the state wouldn't be counted by federal officials as family income when they totaled up the federal benefits.

"But neither of us want that—we're in love," said Mrs. Schnebelt. "And I can't go to work and leave him here alone. I'd have to put him back in the nursing home."

Schnebelt's arms and legs were paralyzed after a canoeing accident several years ago. He and his wife met at a nursing home where he was a patient and she was a nurse. They were married in August.

Before their marriage, Dale lived in an apartment and Louise quit her nursing-home job to take care of him. He received $270 a month from the state to pay Louise for her work.

BUT after they were married, state officials told them about a welfare department rule that states the $270 cannot be paid to a spouse. The payments are continuing temporarily only because the Schnebelts have appealed the cutoff order.

The monthly $270 used to be counted as a disability payment to Schnebelt for his injuries. But it is now counted by federal officials as family income, earned by Mrs. Schnebelt from her employment as a nurse. That means the federal disability payments can be cut.

State welfare officials said they are sympathetic to the Schnebelts' case, but can't continue the payments. Federal officials had no comment on the case.

Dixy defends N-power

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dixy Lee Ray, Washington State governor-elect, defended nuclear technology Saturday as the most effective way of producing energy.

Miss Ray's state was one of six in which referenda on restricting the use of nuclear power were rejected by voters Tuesday. She is a former chairwoman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Miss Ray told the National Council for the Social Studies that she opposed such initiatives, since coal and nuclear power are likely to be the foremost energy sources during the next decade.

"If they really knew more about how the plants operate and if they had more knowledge... about the safeguards that are already in operation, they would not be so worried."

She acknowledged that nuclear power has a great ecological impact, but asserted that the benefits outweigh the negative points.

At the same time, she refused to endorse the idea of expanding nuclear technology alone to meet America's ever-growing energy needs.

Loch Ness offers new mystery

BOSTON (AP)—Scientists report that a sonar search for the legendary Loch Ness monster has turned up a fuzzy outline of an object on the bottom of the deep Scottish lake that resembles a prehistoric dinosaur.

But Martin Klein, head sonar expert of this past summer's expedition to the loch sponsored by the New York Times and the Academy of Applied Science in Boston, is cautious about his discovery.

Klein said in a telephone interview from Salem, N.H., where his sonar manufacturing firm, Klein Associates, is located, "It certainly bears further investigation."

A picture of what might be a monster carcass—or a shipwreck or something else—appeared in the electronics trade journal EDN, published here Friday.

A carcass would establish Nessie's existence almost as well as a live specimen, but no one has ever found one.

The picture is a side-scan sonar trace of the bottom of Loch Ness. One object is almost certain to be a barge sunk years ago.

Nearby is what EDN said Klein described as "an unusual shape with a long neck-like projection and what could possibly be flippers" about 30 feet long.

EDN said the object was at 330 feet, too deep for a dive, but in his telephone interview Klein said the magazine was mistaken and it was 150 feet.

Klein provided another picture of a scan of what the sonar crew dubbed "The Average Plesiosaur," after the prehistoric animal that has been one candidate for the identity of the legendary monster. It also was about 30 feet long.

In the draft of an article for Technology Review, the alumni publication of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Klein wrote of that scan, "As is often the situation in our type of work, we made one of our most intriguing finds just as we were about to wind up our survey."

The target has a carcass-like shape with a long neck-like projection, and ... does not look like any of the other targets which we picked up in the loch. Of course it would be wild speculation to make any assumptions about this target without further investigation."

Phony plans bear Northrop address

Phantom Mailer sends arms 'secrets'

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Received any top-secret military documents in your mailbox lately? Don't bother trying to sell them — you may be the latest victim of the Phantom Mailer.

About six months ago, according to government officials, someone began mailing what appear to be highly classified military documents to about two dozen company presidents, university professors specializing in weaponry and others. The documents are phony.

Last week, the Mailer struck the newsroom of the Norfolk Ledger-Star.

"You're the first newspaper to receive one," said Dick Williams, an assistant to the director of security at the Defense Supply Agency in Alexandria, Va. "If he's going to the newspapers now, that's going to create an additional problem for us."

The letter sent to the Ledger-Star bore a postmark from Garden Grove, Calif., and the return address: "D. Marshall, Staffing, Personnel Administration and Development, Northrop, 500 E. Orangehorpe Ave., Anaheim, Calif."

That's Northrop's real address. But Northrop, a defense contractor specializing in aircraft and weapon systems, said it does not employ a "D. Marshall." The firm's chief of security says, "We are familiar" with the Phantom Mailer.

The document, stamped "SECRET," included what appeared to be a series of photostatically reproduced reports on various aircraft and weapons systems, along with drawings of curiously designed aircraft.

Each report had been heavily censored.

And there were two pieces of film with microdots — pages of text and drawings photographically reduced to microscopic size.

On each page was a drawing of an aircraft and a detailed report.

"Tests were conducted with a MIG21 (basic Soviet fighter aircraft)," one page said, "fitted with the following equipment: The radar dish was hooked up to a high-energy variable-frequency generator controlled by the (deleted) harmonic energy application computer and a test

'cattle prod' pod (deleted) mounted on the center pylon."

The Mailer uses various names and mails most of the packages from California, although some have been postmarked New York and Phoenix.

"He could be a disgruntled employee of some company having defense contracts, but it's hard to say," Williams declared.

"It's worthless stuff. The drawing of that aircraft ... is taken from a model aircraft put out by a model-aircraft company."

The Mailer apparently is familiar with military hardware, Williams added. But he occasionally throws a curve.

"At times he'll be de-

AMMUNITION RECALL

Frontier Cartridge Co. Inc. is recalling certain lots of 30-30 ammunition which have a structural weakness. This weakness may cause the case head to separate upon firing, which may result in injury from escaping gas. Frontier purchases empty primed cases from Federal Cartridge Corporation and Federal has advised Frontier to recall this ammunition. # Summary of 10 Secret Witness cases and rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 68 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $46,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday. Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn. Rewards will also be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense. To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information directly through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness first — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.T. Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness. Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 59-year-old David E. Smith of Downey, shot to death during a holdup at Lucy's Restaurant, 5096 Long Beach Blvd., shortly before 2 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Euland King of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

'We cannot live with terror' Death their escape from a life of fear

By BETH GILLIN
POMBEIRO
Knight News Service

NEW YORK — They were such a nice, quiet old couple Thw's what everyone said after the police found their bodies, the suicide note and their best clothes in which they wished to be cremated laid out neatly on their twin beds.

"We cannot live with terror anymore, and we do not wish to live in fear," said the note, their last communication to the world. The note was written in German, although Hans Kabel, 78, and his wife, Emma, 76, spoke fluent English.

IN THE month before they killed themselves to escape the fear of crime that haunts many elderly people in the South Bronx, the Kabels had twice been brutally attacked, beaten and robbed.

Worse, it happened inside their home of 40 years, a neatly furnished, spotlessly clean apartment in a solid, dark-brick building.

Their home had been their sanctuary, an oasis of order in a decaying, crime-ridden neighborhood. But even home was no longer safe.

Paralyzed by their fear, unwilling to leave familiar surroundings but too frightened to stay, they chose what was, for them, the only possible escape. They hanged themselves.

"I HAVE never seen a case before that showed this degree of frustration and despair," said Detective John Moore. "I have never heard of a double suicide for this reason before."

The Kabels were assaulted for the second time on Oct. 2, four days before they died. The attack was almost an exact replay of the one that took place on Sept. 8.

On both occasions, Kabel, an easy target for robbers because he walked with difficulty and was hard of hearing, was followed home after he cashed his pension check and pushed from behind after he unlocked his door.

Mrs. Kabel, who walked with the aid of a cane, almost never left the apartment after the first assault. She was severely beaten on the face, and was "ashamed to go out on the street with her black-and-blue eye," said corner grocer Jack Tencer.

Every morning, Kabel, wearing a gray jacket and a small cap, would walk slowly down the three flights of steps to the street to deposit the garbage and stop by Tencer's store for a newspaper and sometimes milk and bread. Kabel also did the weekly shopping at a nearby supermarket.

"THEY never bothered nobody," murmured Bennie Hernandez, a young, unemployed exterminator who lives on the sixth floor of the apartment building.

Hernandez sometimes passed Kabel on the stairs, and whenever this happened, Hernandez recalls, "He would see me and look shocked, and I would say, 'Take it easy. I live here.'" The deaths have shaken Hernandez, who says bitterly, "As soon as I get some money, I'm getting the hell out of here myself."

The odd thing is that the Kabels did have money — a $23,000 nest egg stashed away in a savings account. After the robberies, police in the Senior Citizens Robbery Unit urged the couple to find another apartment. The Kabels said they would never move.

"It is a situation that is not unusual among old people," said Detective Moore.

"ELDERLY people often become very frugal," he said. "They feel, 'I'm going to keep that money safe in the bank, and I'm going to stay here and endure.'"

To the Kabels, already stricken by fear, the second attack must have seemed a nightmare from which they could never awake. This time, the flesh of gentle Emma Kabel's frail arm and her already battered face were punctured repeatedly with a meat fork that her assailant grabbed from her own kitchen.

It is a gruesome story, but not much more gruesome than many.

Every year, according to the police, about 10 percent of the 285,000 Bronx residents who are 65 or older become victims of crime, and about 1 percent are injured as a result.

There are no statistics to measure the fear of crime that plagues the Kabels' neighborhood in the Morrisania section of the South Bronx, but among the elderly the fear is pervasive and tangible, and they see no way out.

"With the rents today, and people on Social Security, what are you supposed to do?" asked a sad-eyed, gray-haired man who lived next door to the Kabels for 35 years. "Pitch a tent in Central Park? There is no safe place. There is crime all over."

Many of the local old people gather in the La Rio coffee building, and they share their accounts of travail with the owners, Greek-owner Nicholas Kourtakis and his English wife, Valerie.

"THE old people complain a lot, but they won't leave," Mrs. Kourtakis said. "They want to stay where they are. Many of them pay very small rents and can't afford to move, and their children, you know, don't wish to be burdened by them."

Mrs. Kourtakis said that among frequent visitors to the coffee shop is an old woman she knows only as Margaret.

"Margaret is diabetic and going blind in one eye," Mrs. Kourtakis said. "Sometimes she comes here and sits at the counter from 9 in the morning until 6 at night. She's afraid to stay in her apartment, and she has no place else to go. My husband, Nick, keeps her rent money for her here in the shop, and the postman pays it to her landlord. It's really weird."

The elderly in the neighborhood are so frightened by the prospect of retaliation that they frequently refuse to reveal their names. At the counter in Nick's shop, a woman in a blue crocheted tam who appears to be in her 60s, explained, "I can't give my name because I get checks in the mail. The dope dealers around her watch people coming and going and steal from your mailbox."

"People around here say, 'Don't ever buy nothing new, because they'll come and take it.'"

Nearby at the counter was a black woman in her 80s named Mabel. "I've been mugged and beaten and robbed," she said. "They hit me with my cane. Last night, they

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose, a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret. You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column.

Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Do not give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

came and tried to break down my door, but I told them I had lye waiting for them and that scared them off." Mabel, who has lived in the neighborhood since 1917, spun a litany of tragedy and spoke of once "lying in the street with my wounds bleeding like faucets."

Said Detective Moore, "Old people exaggerate, to a certain degree. Their imaginations run away with them. But in doing that, they illustrate the fear that's out there."

That is the fear the Kabels must have felt on Oct. 6, when they took the beds from their beds and laid them on the floor. On the beds they placed the wardrobes they had chosen for their funeral service — a green wool skirt and white silk blouse for Emma Kabel, a blue suit, white shirt and red tie for Hans Kabel.

A deeply attached couple, the Kabels had spent most of their time together since Hans retired more than a decade ago from his job in a Connecticut factory that made meatslicing machines. Sometimes they invited friends to dinner, but mostly they stayed to themselves. Officials said they had no children.

Their home was a haven, and the outside world rarely intruded — until last month. They had no television set. Until last year, they had no telephone.

They lay down on the beds, slashed their wrists and waited to die. The wounds were not deep enough. Carefully, they gathered the beds, stained with their blood, and placed them neatly in the bathtub.

The Kabels then took two lengths of rope. Mrs. Kabel tied her rope to the kitchen door knob. Her husband tied his to the doorknob of a spare bedroom. They looped the ropes around their necks, stood as far away from the doors as the ropes allowed and fell backward to the floor, strangling themselves.

So prevalent is the fear of crime in the South Bronx that many elderly residents are convinced that the Kabels did not kill themselves, but were forced to write a suicide note before they were murdered.

Police, however, say that there is no doubt that the deaths were self-inflicted. "They fell with some force," explained Moore, "and it only takes a few seconds to lose consciousness."

"There is a natural instinct to struggle against dying, but apparently they were just too weak and too tired to push themselves off the floor."

Beaten baby boy fighting for life

STOCKTON (AP) — A 22-month-old baby underwent two hours of brain surgery and was fighting for his life Saturday night while his foster mother was in jail, charged with child beating.

Doctors at a Stockton hospital said Christopher Mehrer was in "very critical" condition and they were not optimistic about his chance of survival.

The foster mother, Linda Stewart, 28, told police the baby had been cutting teeth recently and wouldn't stop crying. She told officers that the baby would not do anything she told him and she thought he needed disciplining. Officers say Mrs. Stewart said she struck the child with her hand.

Reform of grand jury system pressed

EDITOR'S NOTE — Do grand juries further justice or hinder it? Many people believe the latter and now Congress is being urged to reform the system.

By MARGARET GENTRY

WASHINGTON — Take 23 ordinary citizens, give them extraordinary powers and call them a grand jury. Put them under the direction of a prosecutor determined to convict criminals, and shroud the whole operation in secrecy.

To Jill Raymond and others like her, that's the formula for an outrageous abuse of the innocent, and equation that allows the government to trample on the rights of its citizens.

But to Richard Thornburgh, a federal prosecutor, and others who see as he does, the grand jury system is a fair and effective way of breaking down the criminal conspiracies that conceal fraud, corruption, murder and all manner of Mafia evils.

Ms. Raymond is among 50 people who have gone to jail since 1970 for refusing to answer a federal grand jury's question.

DOZENS of others have been threatened with jail for their unwillingness to answer. Their experiences have fueled a debate over reform of the grand jury system, and now Congress is giving serious consideration to the issue.

The reform movement involves only the 94 federal grand juries. There are state juries, too, but they operate under different regulations, some of them less stringent than the federal system.

A few states, however, are experimenting with various ways to diminish the duties of local grand juries. Some, for example, allow certain criminal charges to be filed before magistrates, rather than being brought before grand juries.

Critics of the federal system point to the case of Ms. Raymond, in her early 20s, who never committed a crime, but was imprisoned in March 1975 and stayed in jail for nearly 14 months. She had refused to testify before a grand jury investigating the whereabouts of two anti-Vietnam war activists, Katherine Ann Power and Susan Saxe. Both fugitives wanted on bank robbery charges. Ms. Saxe later was arrested.

AND there's the case of Joanna Le Deaux, who was jailed in October 1975 for eight months of her pregnancy after refusing to testify before a grand jury investigating the murder of two FBI agents on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota. She was released only after giving birth to a son in prison.

There was no trial for these two women, no chance to tell their side of the story, no opportunity to allow an impartial jury to decide whether they should be jailed or should go free. They were simply brought before a judge who declared them in contempt of court and ordered them to prison.

Is this fair. "Absolutely," replies Thornburgh, who is assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division.

"There has to be some sanction for flouting a court order," he said. "If a judge makes an order, there has to be some sanction for violating it, or the whole system falls apart. The courts have long held that they have a right to every man's evidence. That is firmly established in the law."

Thornburgh argues that various reform proposals, pending before House and Senate Judiciary subcommittees would strip grand juries of their effectiveness. Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi attacked all of the major proposals in testimony before a House subcommittee last June.

But the Coalition to End Grand Jury Abuse has marshaled the support of a score of civil rights and civil liberties organizations to push for procedural changes in the federal grand jury system. In general, the reform bills introduced in both houses of Congress would give grand jury witnesses many of the rights already provided for defendants in criminal trials and would limit the government's power to compel grand jury testimony. The grand jury system goes back to 1166, when England's King Henry II ordered periodic gatherings of a group of citizens from each village who swore to tell what they knew of crimes in the vicinity.

The institution survived through the centuries and crossed the Atlantic with the early settlers. When the Founding Fathers wrote the Bill of Rights, they required in the Fifth Amendment that "no person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous, crime

JILL RAYMOND, leader in fight to reform grand jury system, is pictured as she left jail in Richmond, Ky., in May after serving 14 months for refusing to testify in grand jury investigation.

GRAND JURIES

The same amendment provided that "no person... shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

As the federal system presently works, prosecutors must take all felony cases before a grand jury that reviews the evidence, questions witnesses and decides whether or not to return an indictment. If the grand jury indicts, the case proceeds to trial. If there is no indictment, the case ends.

Witnesses called before the grand jury may refuse to testify on the ground that their answers might tend to incriminate them — the Fifth Amendment. But Congress, with the approval of the Supreme Court, developed a way to circumvent the Fifth Amendment.

Upon request from a prosecutor, a federal judge may grant a witness immunity from criminal charges for any testimony he might give the grand jury. The witness then is compelled to testify, whether he wants the immunity or not. If he continues to refuse, the court may find him in contempt and order him imprisoned for the life of the grand jury. That's a maximum of 18 months.

Grand jury critics argue that the system could force recalcitrant witnesses behind bars for their entire lives. When they're released after the 18-month term of one grand jury, they could be summoned before a new grand jury and again jailed for 18 months for refusing to testify. The cycle could be repeated again and again.

In fact, that hasn't happened. Sam Pizzigati, spokesman for the Coalition to End Grand Jury Abuse, says Ms. Raymond's 14-month imprisonment is the record.

The immunity provision is a prime target of the reformers, who argue that it can be used to force innocent people to disclose details of their personal lives and political activities. This violates a citizen's right to privacy and freedom of political association, they contend.

Among the reform proposals before Congress is one that would prohibit immunity unless a witness agrees to it.

"That would be disastrous," Thornburgh insisted. "We have to have immunity to break through the stone wall, the code of silence, that we ordinarily encounter in investigating organized crime or other types of conspiracies."

In a recent article for Northwestern University's Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology, Thornburgh wrote that prosecutors have used the immunity procedure "to compel testimony for 'little fish' to convict the 'big fish' in scores of cases involving members of organized crime and racketeering syndicates, as well as corrupt politicians and masterminds of white-collar fraud."

The Coalition and a New York reform group called the Grand Jury Project argue that grand juries and the immunity procedure are being used not to gather evidence against criminals, but to gather intelligence about political movements.

The current reform drive began in protest of the Justice Department's use of grand juries in the early 1970s to question hundreds of persons connected with the anti-war movement. This was during the period when the FBI and Justice were under pressure from the White House to stop bombings and other protest activities attributed to the radical left.

Condemning the practice, Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., told the House, "Scores of witnesses were forced to choose between testifying about their friends, relatives and political associates, or going to jail for contempt of court if they refused to answer."

Several of those recently imprisoned for refusing to testify have been associated with political movements, and the reformers see those cases as evidence of continued government harassment of legal political activity.

Ms. Raymond's case may be the best illustration. She and five other Lexington, Ky., residents associated with the women's rights movement were taken before a grand jury in 1975 after the FBI learned that Susan Saxe and Katherine Power may have lived in Lexington for a while under assumed names.

The reformers saw the imprisonment of Ms. Raymond and others in Lexington, and the related imprisonment of women's rights supporters who refused to testify, before a Connecticut grand jury in the same investigation, as a government effort to spy on the women's movement.

SBA probe leads to organized crime

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A tip from a Richmond lawyer sparked the investigation of a Small Business Administration fraud scheme that could lead federal prosecutors to the highest echelons of organized crime, the Richmond News Leader reported Saturday.

In the course of an investigation that lasted several weeks, the News Leader interviewed past and present Justice Department officials who publicly discussed for the first time the origin and implications of a three-year probe of alleged SBA irregularities in the agency's Richmond office.

The News Leader reported: Milton Maddox, who at the time was serving as district legal counsel for the SBA office here, provided the information that got the investigation started.

Maddox ignored the usual SBA channels and showed four "loan packages" that he thought were suspicious to David G. Lowe, then serving as senior assistant U.S. attorney here.

The four loan presentations later proved to be a basic element in a fraud scheme that cost the SBA and various Virginia banks more than $800,000 in 1973 before it was discovered.

Eight persons, including ousted Richmond SBA head Thomas F. Regan, were convicted on charges stemming from their participation in the scheme.

John Dowd of the Justice Department's Strike Force on Organized Crime said investigations here and elsewhere of one man convicted in the fraud scheme, Samuel Ray Calabrese of Los Angeles and Las Vegas, ultimately could reach the "very top" of organized crime's financial empire.

Calabrese, who has known Mafia ties, received a five-year prison sentence in connection with the fraud scheme and is to be tried in federal court here on a related perjury charge Dec. 13.

Dowd said at this point that he didn't expect Calabrese to follow the lead of other fraud scheme participants and cooperate with federal prosecutors.

He described Calabrese as the "architect" of the fraud scheme and said the continuing investigations relating to him could provide a better chance at the rare opportunity of prosecuting people higher up in the organized crime hierarchy.

Hawaiian arts at Ala Moana

Today's visitors to the Sandwich Isles are fascinated by the familial Hawaiian arts of the past two centuries. Their interests range from the fragrance and beauty of the traditional flower lei to the exquisite and increasingly valuable hand-stitchery of the Hawaiian quilt. The Ala Moana Hotel in Honolulu has led guests into a renaissance of arts and crafts so well known to Hawaii's kupunas (ancestors) and visitors of every age group, mostly female, find a joyous time (manawa hoo haouli) in trying their own hands or hips in "the old Hawaiian way." A full spectrum of Hawaiiana is offered at the Ala Moana under the guidance of Napua Stevens, director of guest activities. In the main lobby of the hotel, Hawaiian quilting is taught on Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 1 p.m.; hula lessons at 2 p.m.; lei making on Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p.m., and lauhala weaving at 2 p.m.

THE REGAL lady behind this beehive of artistic activity is in fact a queen — Napua Stevens, the Queen of Pa'u Riders (in which stately Hawaiian beauties in gorgeous, flowing, Hawaiian divided-skirt gowns of velvet or satin, ride spirited Hawaiian horses) for the 1973 Kamehameha Parade. Born in Hawaii, Kohala, on the Big Island of Hawaii, Napua believes that visitors should feel they are part of Hawaii and learn by doing. At the Ala Moana Hotel guest activities are really active and really Hawaiian. Her book on Hawaii's heirloom quilts "The Hawaiian Quilt" was published in 1971 and is in its second printing. She teaches Hawaiian, lectures in classes and appears on educational television. It's probable she will continue to do all of these things as well as handle guest activities at the hotel. The Ala Moana is one of the Americana Hotels operated in the Pacific by American Airlines. Others include the Chosun, in Seoul, Korea, and the Pago Pago Americana in American Samoa.

TOMORROW'S CITY TODAY Weekend in Toronto

By HERB SHANNON
L.P.T. Travel Editor

TORONTO, Canada — Twice earlier this year and at least half a dozen times in the five years since last visiting this dynamic city, I have flown into its international airport to change planes to eastern Canada or continue a flight home from Europe. Each time I failed to recognize any kind of familiar landmark from the air.

Highrise hotels and office buildings proliferated around those I knew; the urban area seemed to spread farther to the horizon, and a phenomenon out of science fiction rose like a spear from the Lake Ontario waterfront to threaten impalement of the aircraft I was riding in.

In 1971, Toronto was assimilating a flood post-war immigration from Europe and optimistically looking forward to a population of two million by the end of the century. Even then it was beginning to offer the excitement and cultural advantages of big city life without the unpleasant side effects of urbanization. Its former Dullsville reputation was extinguished, reversing the Torontonians' tourist tide escaping to Detroit, Chicago and New York.

Jubilee calendar

With our Bicentennial celebration of independence from Britain drawing to a close, the British want us to know about their upcoming Queen Elizabeth II Silver Jubilee year.

To mark the 25th anniversary of the current monarch's reign, they have issued a special 1977 edition of the annual Royal Britain Calendar.

The theme of the 12-page, 13 1/2 inch calendar is the Royal Family, with full-color photos of the Queen and the pageantry of her career since the coronation in Westminster Abbey in 1952.

Other monthly illustrations include scenic city and countryside views in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and England.

The Silver Jubilee calendar is available by mail order from British Gifts, P.O. Box 26558, Los Angeles, Calif. 90026. Suitable for Anglophile Christmas giving, the 1977 calendar is priced at $4.50, including handling and postage.

TODAY, the metropolis is edging toward three billion; its clutch of modest skyscrapers around Dominion Square is surrounded by taller structures; the plaza fronting the twin clamshell towers of the new City Hall has become a recreational center, the imagination-staggering CN (Canadian National) Tower has become a landmark reality, and the suburbs are studded with residential highrise developments blending into forested parks.

All this has been accomplished without visible evidence of growing pains. Giant construction cranes still stalk the city, but civic planners three years ago balked the builders of concrete canyons with a 45-foot height limit rule in the remaining downtown area. Public transportation works and there is no spray paint graffiti on subway trains or the walls of the sparking stations.

THE TIME seemed ripe this month for a revisitation to see Toronto from the ground again. The easiest part was getting from here to there. American Airlines flies to Toronto five times daily from Los Angeles, including one nonstop and a Long Beach-built DC10 jumbo jet in the four connecting flights through Chicago.

The only question was whether my wife and I could savor the full flavor of the city in a weekend. No way, obviously. But it is possible to sample an amazing variety of its attractions between Friday evening and noon Sunday. We managed to squeeze almost all of the following into Saturday, without breathing hard at any point.

Friday night, after dinner in the continental-style dining room in a corner of the enormous lobby of Western International's new Hotel Toronto, we strolled the shopping avenues of the central city neighborhood until nearly midnight. As in 1971, we were not alone.

Throngs filled every block of the inner city, with no diminishment in numbers as the hours grew later. It would be foolish to say Toronto has no crime, but the popular American sport of mugging has yet to catch on here.

A LEISURELY start Saturday put us in viewing range of the skaters in the City Hall plaza rink, which in summer is a public pool. We walked two blocks back to the hotel to the subway and caught a train north to the Royal Ontario Museum, where a special exhibition of pre-Columbian gold artifacts from Peru will continue to attract visitors through November 21.

Sunny islands with no income tax

San Francisco

Dirk Brink keeps an eye on the Far East for me: "The coming tourist islands are the Maldives, two hours by air from south India. Twelve hundred tropical islands.

"Two hundred have people on them. There's no income tax. No death duties. No visas required. There's no crime. No air pollution and the water is good.

"The main island has only 30 automobiles. Less than 100 motorcycles. Hotel room is $15 with three meals. Warm sunny beaches. The people are friendly Indian types.

"They must be Mohammedans. The entry form at the airport wanted to know how my health was and 'Are you bringing in any dead or live pigs?'

BRINK is Far East man for Deak & Co. Except for Zurich, the world's biggest money changers. (Deak offices will move a million dollars through foreign exchanges or sell a tourist $20 worth of travel checks.)

About the Maldives: Write him at Compass Travel, 406 Shell House, Hong Kong.

"The British kept the Republic of Maldives going by renting an island for an air base. Now they've moved out. They left an airport with the most sophisticated equipment.

"Looked like a good place for charter groups. Really new and untouched."

PITY THE poor peso: I phoned a friend in Mexico City who said: "Figure you'll get 25 pesos to the dollar in hotels. So it looks better than when the pesos sold for 12.50 to the dollar.

"But wages are going up — by Government decree. Average will be 20 per cent. Hotels are asking 25 per cent more. Tourist restaurants want 15 to 20 per cent increase.

"About the only thing that hasn't changed is the price of tacos on the street stands. They never saw a dollar bill. The peso looks just like it always did. It's the bankers, not taco dealers, who lose confidence in money."

A COUPLE of bon voyage books for winter cruisers: "Jody" by Jerry Hulse. Warm, loving, dramatic — and non-fiction. Already in Reader's Digest. Definitely headed for best-seller list.

Also for the best-sellers: "The Woman Warrior" by Maxine Ting Ting Hong, Kingston. American-born girl growing up with her family who brought beliefs, cultures, opinions with them from a small peasant village in China.

"Do you think we should get the new swine flu shots for Europe?"

I don't know whether to get them just to live in the U.S. Since I had regular flu twice overseas — (man, Galway is NO place to be sick!) — I get flu shots every fall.

I don't do much advance medication for travel. I carry aspirin and some Lomotil. If that doesn't do it, I'm a goner anyway.

"Any particularly healthy places you know for vacations?"

I always come back from Hawaii feeling extra good. I do well, too, at 5000 feet elevation — around Guadalajara and Cuernavaca, Mexico. But Mexico City at 7400 feet knocks me out after a week or so.

Erle Stanley Gardner was a desert man. He felt at his best in dry, hot countries. Baja was his favorite. Robinson Jeffers had to live by the sea. A friend of mine with emphysema says he feels best living in the Canary Islands — really more North African than Spanish.

Ten days on a cruise ship should cure you of anything from depression to flat feet. Which is probably why it's the most popular thing in travel now. Estimate is a million or more people will ship out this year.

Cruise ship hazards are sunburn, falling in love, the late, late bar and those enormous midnight buffets. So watch it.

PENNY-WISE TRAVELER

How to read foreign menu and avoid rice

Just like pretty people in postcard pictures, we were basking in the bright white Spanish sunshine in the flower-filled patio of a Majorcan restaurant. Since one of our number was an "old hand" who'd been there before, we agreed to leave the ordering to him.

The wine was flowing freely by the time the first course arrived, a steaming casserole of fish and rice. Naturally, being good, clean-plate gluttons, we wiped it out in minutes.

Then the second course arrived, a steaming casserole of meat and rice. Obviously it wasn't our leader's day. On the other hand, this kind of "Oh

jane morse

dear!" development is likely to happen at least once to every traveler who has to deal with a foreign menu.

So, how do you safeguard your stomach and budget and work your way around this particular tourist trap?

IF YOU'RE smart, you do a crash course in "menu hurdling," boning up on how to order without fear of anything or anyone. Hotels and restaurants on credit-card lists generally use bills of fare printed in the local language plus English or have someone around who can translate for you.

However, there are two other things you should know. One is that there's good and usually cheaper eating in restaurants off the tourist circuit, where translations are not available. The other is that translations are often inaccurate or inadequate.

Fortunately, there is a system you can use to counter the worst possible problems. The first step consists of learning all the bad words, the ones for all the foods you wouldn't touch with a 10-foot fork.

THERE ARE other steps necessary, however, since sometimes the things you dislike most are attractively disguised to break through such a limited defense. Liver, for instance, can easily be slipped to you hidden behind a good-sounding something like "mixed-grill."

This is the kind of challenge you prepare for by running down to the library and asking for a cookbook with recipes from the country of your choice. Cookbook reading serves two purposes. You learn to spot dangerous dishes and, as a bonus, discover "sleepers," specialties you could learn to love.

There is, for instance, a Greek "caviar" made of eggplant mashed up with lemon juice and garlic that spicy-food fans go bananas over.

While you're at the library, look up the Los Angeles address of your destination country's national tourist office, and write asking for any brochures they have on food and restaurant customs. The French, for one, will send you plenty.

THEN, EVEN if you're not going to France, acquaint yourself with some key French restaurant phrases. Certain of them are borrowed from time to time by the restaurants of other nations and, if you understand the French, you'll be alert and ready for other countries' equivalents.

"Couvert," for instance, is "cover charge," the amount you will have added to your bill merely for giving the restaurant the pleasure of serving you. In some places, the "couvert" includes the bread that is automatically placed on your table, but often that's extra as well. (If you don't eat it, point it out at check time and it will generally be removed from the bill. Butter is often not served unless you ask for it — in which case, prepare to pay more.)

To order the "menu" in French means you want the restaurant's set meal. If what you really want is the list of what's available, you need to ask for "carte." If you see the words "prix fixe" on the "carte," they usually indicate the presence of a "menu" meal. It may even be offered with a number of choices, and it will probably be cheaper than ordering individual dishes a la carte.

"EN SUS" means there's an extra charge for whatever it is that's listed in front of these words, and "S.G." means the price depends on the weight and current market price — so to be sure of what you're getting into, ask.

"Non compris" is another way of saying that whatever it is is also extra, but it's most often used to get across the point that taxes, tips or both are not, not, not included in the bill.

"Tout compris" means tips, taxes or both are included, and if you don't see those words anywhere, be sure to inquire.

"Plat du jour" translates to "specialty of the day" and is often your best choice. Before ordering any main dish, though, it's wise to determine if it's "garni," accompanied by salad or vegetables. If it's not, chances are the waiter will say something in question form like "Rice?" or "Potatoes?" and if you indicate you'd like it, you'll get it — as an extra.

COFFEE OR tea will be brought after the meal unless, when you order, you specify that you want them at the same time. Outside of North America it's generally expected that you'll drink wine, beer or mineral water with your meal. If you want cola or milk, you'll shock the average Continental waiter, but elsewhere they're more understanding.

"Pour Partager" is the French way of asking to have one dish split and served to two people. Its equivalent appears in other languages the world over and is one of the most saving phrases to know.

It not only magically reduces the size of your tab, but is the only reasonable way to handle dining in countries like Brazil, where one order of anything could easily satisfy five starving people.

Someday maybe there'll be an equally easy way for single travelers to order half portions, but don't hold your breath waiting for it.

Now Western flies you to Miami-gateway to the fun spots of the Bahamas and the Caribbean.

The Bahamas. Just 30 minutes off Florida, but it's like entering a whole new world. A spot of old England, yet exciting casinos, lavish entertainment, pristine beaches, magnificent hotels.

The Caribbean. A taste of France, a touch of Dutch, a smidgen of Calypso. Dine in fabulous restaurants, snap up bargains, or just soak up the cultures of exotic islands where just about everyone speaks English.

And you'll start your Bahamas or Caribbean vacation with Western's non-stop DC-10 Spaceship Service from Los Angeles to Miami. You'll enjoy complimentary Champagne for every adult, choice of entrees, and more.

Here's one example of just how economical Western's Bahamas-Caribbean vacations can be!

The Bahamas, only $402. Per person, double occupancy, including midweek airfare for 8 days/7 nights. (TTWA/CHBA)

Mix and match your own vacation.

We've got packages to virtually every Bahamas and Caribbean island. And to Florida areas like Miami, Miami Beach, Ft. Lauderdale, and Disney World, too.

The cost can be as low as $100 for 7 days/6 nights in San Juan, Puerto Rico (TTWA/CHU), from $102 for 8 days/7 nights in Miami (TTWA-CHOFAS). Prices per person, double occupancy, plus airfare. Sample roundtrip tour basing airfare to Miami, $260 including tax, subject to certain restrictions.

It's so chic, this must be the Place

PARIS, France — If you ever have coveted a custom made no-bra, Charms at 7 Place de la Madeleine in Paris is the place to get it. During our interview, Madame Belin, the manageress who herself generously supports the natural look, assured me that a custom made no-bra is as good as no bra at all.

Its spidery lace is handspun by sisters in a French nunnery and looks like no lace at all. Its spaghetti straps are all but invisible. The only tangible evidence that it exists is a beguiling little tassel that flutters at the bra's plunging cleavage.

Ah, the French! I could hardly wait to place an order until I learned that it would cost $60.

Somehow, the institutional haute couture designer's boutiques failed to arouse my hedonistic madness like they used to. I window shopped from Cardins to Lanvins without a single temptation.

THEN I lunched with an Air France public relations gal of smashing style who does all of her buying around Place de la Madeleine. With a single taxi stop in that one vast area, she can find anything from a chocolate turtle with almond legs to an Anny Blat knit.

I hastened there immediately and used up the remainder of the day. My Air France friend was right. This is the most complete shopper's arena of Paris. Prices are within reason — not low, but not too high — quality is superb, styling is more fun than it is on the Champs Elysees, and the compactness of the area makes it easy on your feet.

Along with all this, you do not feel like a complete cop-out in the sight-seeing department. The Church of St. Mary-Magdelin, referred to as The Madeleine, is among Paris' most stormy landmarks.

It began in 1764, intended as a church. The architect died, however, and his visionary successor considered the site more appropriate for, variously, a stock exchange, a library, a legislative assembly, a court of arbitration and the Bank of France. He tore down what was constructed and made a new start.

THEN ALONG came Napoleon. In 1805, he razed the unfinished edifice for a second time to set up the Greek Temple we have now, dedicated to his conquering armies. Before its completion, however, Louis XVIII had ascended to the throne and proclaimed the new building a church. The final threat occurred in 1842 when the Madeleine very nearly was turned into Paris' first railway station. With that fate averted, it today provides a setting for Paris' most fashionable church weddings.

The Madeleine's dignified, windowless pavilion stands on a platform 28 steps above ground, surrounded by a series of Corinthian columns. Ladies corseted by Madam Belin across the street and aristocratic white-haired gentlemen find its steps as pleasant a place to rest on a sunny day as do e students in flared jeans who study there and the saffron-robed Hare Krishna cultists lunching on cold rice from wooden bowls.

What draws the array of citizenry is the view down Rue Royale. The obelisk of the Place de la Concorde, the Palais-Bourbon and the dome of the Invalides a half-mile distant cascade into misty shapes framed by ornate stone walls of 18th century buildings curving around opposite corners. Once private residences, these buildings now house the headquarters for Thomas Cook and the leathery finery of a Cerruti 1881 men's clothing store.

IN SPITE of its historic attraction, merchants around Place de la Madeleine cater more to local Frenchmen than to tourists. Clerks do not speak English, but they understand money, so you can make yourself understood.

Robert Thibier's window is a place to pick up original interior design ideas. While I was there he featured an antique sleigh chair with curly legs, upholstered in poison green velvet and placed as a conversation piece in the shop's entrance hall. Nearby at No. 11 is Au Vase Etrusque. Gifts of classic porcelain, crystal and Sevres ware from this house are among those most prized by the socially prominent brides wed in The Madeleine.

POLICEMAN keeps traffic moving in busy Place de la Madeleine.

N.Y. Mafia family 'shoots for lasting peace'

By NICHOLAS GAGE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK—The Brooklyn crime "family" of Joseph A. Colombo Sr., torn by factional strife for the past 17 years, is trying to achieve a lasting peace in classic Mafia style—with a few more killings, according to law-enforcement officials and underworld informants.

John Cutrone, a family member and a seasoned veteran of Brooklyn's gangland wars, was killed Oct. 5 in Danny's Luncheonette in Brooklyn by two men who tried to make the murder look like robbery.

The police have found evidence linking the killing of Cutrone with the murder of a close friend, Gennaro Basciano, who was shot twice in the neck last June 16 in Frank's Diner in Brooklyn.

According to informants, the killers have a third victim in mind, an ally of the two murdered men named Sam Zahralbam, who recently has taken to eating his meals in private.

As the killers of Cutrone fled in a 1967 Buick, witnesses made note of its license plate number, 183-CUC. Last June, witnesses had also remembered the license plate number, 506-2KZ, of the 1971 Ford van in which the killers of Basciano escaped.

Both vehicles are registered to the same name, John Valone, with a different address for each vehicle. No one named John Valone lives at either address.

The police also determined that three more vehicles are registered to the same name, which, informants say, does not bode well for Zahralbam.

Cutrone, Basciano and Zahralbam, who is known as Sammy the Syrian, were all members of the Gallo gang led, until two years ago, by Albert Gallo Jr.

Other Mafia families in the city, long tired of the fighting between the Gallos and the Colombos, were upset by this latest outbreak of violence, informants said.

Crime leaders reportedly felt that the shooting was interfering with business and bringing attention to all Mafia activities.

As a result, several respected leaders got together about a year ago and negotiated a broad peace to bring the shooting to an end, the informants said.

Under the terms of the peace, the three defectors from the Gallo gang—Cutrone, Basciano and Zahralbam—were taken in by the Colombo family, the informants said, while Albert Gallo joined Vincent Gigante, one of the leaders of the Vito Genovese family.

Last February, the peace was shattered by two shots fired into a social club on President Street maintained by the remnants of the Gallo group.

In the club at the time were Gallo's father, Albert Gallo Sr., his nephew Stephen, the son of Larry Gallo; Rosario Musico, who runs the club; and Steve Boriello, a young Gallo stalwart who was wounded in the cheek.

Then, on June 16, Basciano was killed at Frank's Diner.

After that, Cutrone received word that the death of Basciano had ended the problem and that he had nothing to fear.

But a few days later Cutrone made the mistake of visiting his favorite luncheonette unarmed. A man walked in and ordered coffee and doughnuts to go. Then a second man entered wearing a ski mask and carrying a machine gun.

Cutrone bolted for the back room, but was followed by the man who had ordered the doughnuts. He shot Cutrone once in the head, then came back into the luncheonette, carrying money he had taken from Cutrone in an apparent attempt to make the assassination look like a robbery.

But after discovering that the killers fled in cars belonging to the same group that murdered Basciano, the police have called Cutrone's death a gangland assassination.

Refurbishing of QM going full steam ahead

By RALPH HINMAN
Staff Writer

A damage control crew of city employees is working almost around the clock to salvage whatever is left of the Queen Mary's already sinking image.

If the low-keyed plans work, the Queen Mary yet right herself as the profitable tourist attraction she was meant to be.

City employees have been pulled from all but the most critical maintenance jobs aboard the Queen to work two and three shifts daily.

By Christmas they should have completed the first of many plans to refurbish the venerable Cunard liner.

Actually, said Marvin M. Wolff,

acting director of the city's ship-keeping Queen Mary Department (QMD), "We would prefer to say nothing at all until our planned changes are complete.

"But, of course, we're delighted to confirm what Mrs. (Councilwoman Eunice) Sato said during the Tuesday council meeting."

Mrs. Sato revealed that Wolff and QMD employees already were making significant changes in the city-owned former luxury liner.

Her remarks came during a discussion about hiring a Los Angeles marketing and creative development agency, the Liljenwall Group, to promote the ship.

"They (QMD) are making the ship come alive," she said.

As an example, Mrs. Sato cited work in progress on the former first-class swimming pool, closed to public view since the early 1970s.

Wolff said that, although the pool-rehabilitation project is of great importance, it is part of a larger overall program.

"Our objective is to make the project interesting to a qualified private investor," he acknowledged.

Water flowed briefly into the pool Thursday as part of the cleanup program, but it was removed a few minutes later.

By Christmas, however, Wolff expects the tank to be filled and on public display as part of an expanded tour of the ship.

Long-range plans call for its use by visitors, perhaps by next summer.

Wolff emphasized that the refurbishing, as now proposed, could be changed or modified by Robert Liljenwall, head of the newly hired development firm.

"It is his responsibility to develop themes and other programs for us, and obviously what the QMD is doing must mesh with his efforts," Wolff said.

Wolff is a U.S. Maritime Academy graduate, former merchant marine officer and once worked as a television newsmen in New York.

He was QMD operations chief up to Oct. 1, when former QMD Director James Lynch, a retired U.S. Navy captain, left the ship to become acting director of Long Beach Airport.

In addition to the pool rehabilitation, other immediate developments to be readied for the Christmas tourist season include:

—Sharks swimming in a tank to be built within the "Living Sea" museum. The museum has often been criticized as being too unchanging and dull.

—Major additions to the tour, including several displays of attractions not yet seen by the public. They include the sickbay, brig, telephone switchboard and gold bullion storage room, among others. As part of this segment, tour routes are being rearranged.

—A Christmas Nativity scene, with live figures and animals, for paying museum visitors during the holiday season.

—Buckingham Palace-style "changing of the guard" hourly on the wharf.

THE INFAMOUS "Bridge on the River Kwai" still stands. And so does one of its builders, Donald C. Brain of Long Beach, who for three years and seven months stayed off death and despair in Japanese prison camps.

An estimated 60,000 British, Dutch, Australian and American prisoners of war contributed their blood, sweat and tears to the building of that bridge. Half of that number didn't survive captivity. They fell to malaria, sunstroke, malnutrition, cholera, dysentery, construction accidents—and brutality of their jailers.

The long agony of Seaman 2nd Class Don Brain began at 33 minutes past midnight, March 1, 1942, when the executive officer of the heavy cruiser Houston gave the order to abandon ship. Holed by Japanese torpedoes and 8-inch gunfire, the gallant Houston was mortally wounded. Her skipper, Capt. A. H. Rooks, had been killed by a shrapnel burst, the magazines were flooded, a salvo had smashed the engine room.

MOMENTS BEFORE he died, Capt. Rooks had issued an Abandon Ship order; but the Houston was making too much way for the order to be executed. Now, his ship dead in the water, the executive officer, Cmdr. David Roberts, repeated the order. In a matter of seconds, Don Brain and his shipmates were in the boiling, oil-choked, wreckage-strewn waters of the Sunda Strait off Java.

For 36 hours, Don Brain swam, dodging Japanese searchlights, husbanding his strength while trying to zero in on a landfall. Finally, he was ashore, bone-tired, lost but at last free of the cruel sea.

His freedom was shortlived. The Japanese militia, puppets of the Japanese, found him and turned him over to their masters. Next thing Don Brain knew he was making five-gallon cans as a prisoner of war in a factory and helping to dismantle an oil refinery.

"The Japanese transferred the technicians among us to their home islands. I was shipped off to Burma. It could have been worse. My father had worked in the oil fields of Burma on contract, and I knew the land, spoke and wrote the Burmese language. I'd make it."

AT THE TIME he was taken prisoner, Don Brain weighed 185 pounds, stood just under six feet and looked every inch of the football player he had been at Jordan High School, before dropping out to enlist in the Navy in December 1940. He was tough, streetwise, and he figured he could fend and forage for himself.

In the camps along the River Kwai, he had to be tough and smart. The real prospect of the sweat box: a smash to the forehead with a rifle butt, kicks in the ribs and other sadisms kept a prisoner loose, alert and thinking.

"I learned to hold eye contact with the guards. Eyeball to eyeball they wouldn't hit you. They'd cuss and scream at you, but that was all."

Christians are not free to be themselves because their churches subscribe to outdated notions concerning human behavior, including the stereotyping of male-female roles, a leader of the American Lutheran Church (ALC) said Saturday in Long Beach.

"We are bonded by traditions, the expectations of others, guilt, inhibition and habit," said Beulah Laursen, regional representative of the national ALC governing board.

Her comments were made in a daylong series of workshops entitled "The Shalom Person: Christian Perspectives on Men's said. "Everybody knows each of us has some of these characteristics."

Jesus Christ was known for his compassionate, gentle and loving disposition—traits that are often considered feminine, she said.

"God created male and female persons with qualities in each," she added. "Thank God we are moving away from accepting the 'boys don't cry' syndrome."

The Rev. David Ellingson, campus minister at Long Beach State University, said most men are "emotionally constipated" because "they are taught to keep feelings inside."

Addressing about 75 persons in the church's main sanctuary, he said that men, to be themselves, need to be free. He encouraged men seeking their own identity to join consciousness-raising groups, a kind of group therapy especially for males.

He said society should give additional emphasis to noncompetitive sports, encourage paternity leaves for fathers, promote "2-to-1 jobs," where two people earn one salary in the same occupation, and support vasectomies for men.

But changes in attitude will be easiest with children, Ellingson said, and he said inroads are already being made.

To illustrate, he read examples of new "non-sexist" literature, the titles including: "Grownups Cry, Too," "Some Things You Can't Do Alone" and "Peter Learns to Crochet."

"The most difficult thing for Christian persons is the ability to say 'no,'" said Marge Wold of Garden Grove, author of "The Shalom Woman."

"We're so used to saying 'yes,'" she elaborated during a workshop on "Couples in Transition," which focused on ways married couples can divide household responsibilities. "But you can't be good to others unless you're good to yourself."

Mrs. Wold said she has five children. Her husband of 34 years is Erling Wold, the pastor of St. Olaf Lutheran Church in Garden Grove. In the past 1½ years they have had a "contract relationship."

"It's a working marriage—a series of negotiated and renegotiated contracts," she explained.

They found that writing down what is expected made for a healthier marriage. "Most people enter into marriage with a set of expectations. There is a tendency not to articulate our feelings to the person we're marrying."

She added: "The great American myth is that marriage is an ego fulfillment. There's no way one individual can totally fulfill another's entire needs."

Lakewood council will consider legalizing bingo

Legalization of bingo games by nonprofit, charitable organizations — an issue that has sparked controversy in several Southland cities since last June — is scheduled for public hearing before the Lakewood City Council Tuesday night.

The proposed city ordinance allowing the games under certain conditions was prepared along the lines of a model law drafted by the Los Angeles County counsel.

Council members also are scheduled at the 7:30 meeting to consider an ordinance detailing the placement, number and size of newsracks to be allowed on city sidewalks, a report on the Dutch Village Redevelopment Study and a report from the Recreation and Community Services Committee urging the adoption of free recreational swimming one day a week during the summer at the city's three pools.

Cities were given the option of legalizing bingo games by certain nonprofit groups when California voters approved Proposition 9 in the June primary election.

Since then, Anaheim, La Palma, Long Beach and Westminster have approved bingo, in some cases only after protracted discussions and heated arguments.

The Norwalk City Council approved a bingo-legalization ordinance, then repealed it after protests from citizens.

Several other cities have legalizing ordinances under consideration.

The proposed Lakewood ordinance is similar to those already adopted by neighboring cities and spells out the definition of nonprofit, charitable organizations, the requirements for obtaining a bingo license and rules governing the games.

In accordance with state law, all persons involved in staging and playing the games must be at least 18, there can be no admission charge and all games must be open to the public.

In a memo to the council, City Atty. John Todd explained that the Lakewood ordinance was requested by William J. Crawford, president of the Men's Holy Name Society.

Todd said the city received the county's model ordinance from Sheriff's Capt. Rick Merriek.

Sheriff's officials earlier had asked that cities within their enforcement area adopt the ordinance prepared by the county counsel so deputies would not be confused by varying bingo laws in several cities.

Land transfer from L.B. to Gardens set

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

The Long Beach City Council will be asked Tuesday to authorize the formal transfer of a 4.8-acre parcel of surplus land to Hawaiian Gardens.

The land, which lies southeast of the 605 Freeway and Carson Street, formerly was owned by the Long Beach Water Department but has since been purchased by Hawaiian Gardens for $336,000.

The two cities are expected to formalize the purchase with concurrent de-annexation and annexation proceedings.

Long Beach, however, is expected to lay down one condition at Tuesday's council session.

It will seek assurances from Hawaiian Gardens that the property will be used only for a community-services center—a condition Hawaiian Gardens is quite ready to accept, according to a spokesman for that city.

He said Hawaiian Gardens, in fact, plans to take construction bids on the proposed facility next month.

Thus, unless the Long Beach council finds some reason to block the long-planned transfer, the property will soon become part of Hawaiian Gardens.

In the meantime, the fate of a second plot of Water Department property—located near the first parcel—remained uncertain.

The second parcel, comprising 20,000 square feet, lies at the southwest corner of Carson Street and Pioneer Boulevard.

Paraplegic to speak of 'comeback'

Joni Eareckson, artist and author from Sykesville, Md., who dived into shallow water nine years ago and became a paraplegic, will introduce her autobiography and speak Tuesday in Costa Mesa.

On a nationwide tour, she will make a luncheon stop at the Holiday Inn, 3131 Bristol St. Tickets are available from Maranatha Village, 2400 Sunflower St., Santa Ana.

She had been an "All-American girl" active in many sports until July 30, 1967, when she made the dive that changed her life at the age of 17.

The dive — into Chesapeake Bay in Maryland — paralyzed her from the neck down.

Her book, "Joni," is about her fight to regain a sense of usefulness and her discovery of spiritual faith.

She became an artist, drawing meticulous works with a pen held in her teeth.

She signs her work "P.T.L." — which means "Praise the Lord."

Third bidder in race for Irvine Co.

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

A third bidder Saturday entered the sweepstakes to buy the Irvine Co. ranch and development empire in Orange County, topping two other firms.

A consortium of New York and Detroit investors offered $284 million for the firm, posting cash, notes and stocks to bolster their bid, an informed source said.

The combine is headed by Charles Allen of New York, director of a Wall Street investment firm, and Alfred Taubman, a Detroit investor.

Last week Mobil Oil Corp., which had made an original bid of $201 million in oil stock, increased its bid to $265 million cash to meet an offer of Cadillac Fairview Corp. of Toronto, which had offered $145 million cash and $120 million in notes and securities in its $265-million bid.

The Toronto firm countered with a $269-million offer Friday, and Mobil responded with a $273-million package, it was learned.

The new bid of $284 million was not unexpected, since rumors had become prevalent that at least one and possibly two more bids would be filed for the Irvine prize before a Santa Ana Superior Court decides who should be the buyer.

The marketing of the Irvine Co. was laid before Judge James F. Judge when Joan Irvine Smith, granddaughter of the ranch founder and owner of 21.1 per cent of its stock, challenged the first Mobil bid as inadequate.

"WELL, IT LOOKS LIKE THE TRANSITION HAS BEGUN..."

Editorials

To know, or to die

"Consumer Health Education — to Know or to Die" is the title of one of several articles from the Journal of the American Hospital Association, sent to us by Long Beach Community Hospital.

The author of this particular article, Anne R. Somers of the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, said the title "may seem melodramatic, but it is accurate."

An editorial which introduces the special series of articles on consumer health education says "scientific evidence increasingly points to life style and behavior as being directly related to the principal causes of death in this country — heart disease, cancer, stroke and accidents."

"Still, we Americans continue to refuse to follow medical advice, to give up smoking, to eat and drink in moderation and to get enough exercise," the AHA Journal notes.

"THUS, WE stubbornly continue on our headlong rush toward preventable illness and premature death," it continues.

That last paragraph really is the heart of the series. We cannot conquer death. We are all mortal. But we can prevent many diseases and give ourselves a normal, reasonably healthy life-span.

The AHA Journal excerpts were sent to the Independent, Press-Telegram by Janice F. Atzen of Long Beach Community Hospital, who pointed out programs being conducted by the hospital in the field of consumer health education. Similar programs, of course, are offered at other Long Beach hospitals.

In the last few years, for example, Community Hospital has added a diabetic teaching program, a preoperative teaching program with heart surgery patients getting special instruction, a stoma rehabilitation clinic in conjunction with the American Cancer Society, outpatient diabetic classes and a series of rehabilitation forums for stroke patients and their families.

SUCCESS IN consumer health education, however, depends on the individual. Or, as Ms. Atzen puts it, "there is a vital need to arouse the public to their responsibility in health care."

Unfortunately, too many of us "preach it, but don't practice it." Or else we pick up one aspect — jogging, for example — and believe that will assure us of health. To be successful, an individual health program must be well-rounded. It must include exercise, a proper diet, adequate rest, and, especially as one gets older, checkups with a doctor.

"There is an increasing awareness in the health field that the patient must accept responsibility for his or her health to a much greater degree than is currently practiced," Ms. Atzen said.

Much of the benefit of quality medical care provided by physicians and hospitals is lost if the individual ignores medical advice, or refuses to stop habits which are known to cause disease.

Oil and biology

"Environmentalists," like most other people with a cause, often jump to the unwarranted conclusion that no one else has any concern for the ecology — particularly anyone involved in industry.

The four offshore islands which provide sites for several hundred oil wells of Long Beach's tideland field are proof this conclusion is unfounded.

From the start, the design and construction of the Long Beach oil islands were aimed at the smoothest possible interrelationship of the ecology and the economy. Their camouflage — trees and other greenery, waterfalls, geometric shapes and enclosed dericks — has won national awards for environmental treatment.

Now, four surveys by biology students at Long Beach State University reveal that enhancement of the environment by the islands has not been confined to cosmetics.

As part of an LBSU biology

course in invertebrate systematics, students sampled and identified marine invertebrates on the four oil islands. At the conclusion of the surveys, they had identified 237 different species.

Black abalone originally was planted on Island Chaffee, the easternmost of the four, and the survey showed a good population on all four islands. Pink abalone was present on Island Freeman, the outermost island, and each island had an "extensive" population of three to four-inch giant keyhole limpets, the survey report said.

Over all, said Dr. Donald Reish, the class instructor, the Long Beach oil islands are one-third richer biologically than a comparable rocky intertidal area on the mainland.

The point is, protection of the ecology doesn't mean elimination of the economy, and the extremists on both sides should acknowledge this fact.

78 critical days for Carter

WASHINGTON — Much is made by the calendar-worshippers of "The First Hundred Days" or "The First Thousand Days" of a new administration in Washington, but probably more important are the 78 Days between the election of a President and his inauguration.

For it is in these 11 weeks that the President-elect must pick the team, set the tone of the new government, establish at least tentative relationships with the White House staff, the Cabinet, and the leaders of the Congress. And these threshold decisions — which must be made even before he takes the oath of office — are likely to determine what happens in his "First Thousand Days" more than anything else.

Maybe this is shoving it too fast, for after a long, hard, close political struggle, the first priority for the survivors is a couple of weeks of rest, and if possible, even of silence. They are visibly bone-tired but there is a problem, several problems coming up between the election and the inauguration that require serious and urgent consultation between the outgoing and the incoming administrations.

BETWEEN NOW and Christmas, we are clearly going to have to face the likelihood of another steep rise in the world price of oil. How to avoid it, if possible, or react to it if it comes, and how to consult between Ford and Carter in the meanwhile?

The strategic arms talks with the Soviets and the fragile peace negotiations in the Middle East can probably be postponed until the new administration is in place at the end of January, but the British financial crisis cannot be finessed much longer, and the Rhodesian peace talks in Geneva are falling apart.

Governor Carter and his aides are well aware of these policy questions, but they have a dilemma. They don't want to be responsible for decisions they can't control and yet they can't be indifferent to decisions about oil prices, Britain, and Rhodesia, which they will have to deal with after they take over the White House.

Also, they don't want to be hurried into choosing Secretaries of State, Treasury,

James Reston

and Defense who can consult with Kissinger, Simon and Rumsfeld. Jack Watson and his staff in Atlanta have made a serious analysis for Governor Carter of the talent available for the main jobs, but the governor has been too preoccupied with the campaign to put his whole mind to selecting his team.

Carter has another problem. He captured his party against the will of many of its political, union, and intellectual leaders, and owes his narrow victory to their exertions in the North. But he doesn't want to be captured by them in the end, or even unduly influenced or controlled by the Democratic Old Boy network in the selection of his principal aides and advisers.

I have the impression that the Carter people are absolutely right in their determination to come to Washington with a fresh team and not with a collection of distinguished has-beens from the past. But also that they may be misjudging and maybe overestimating the problem.

THE DEMOCRATS have been out of power now for eight years, and the main point about the Old Boy Democratic network is that most of them are over the hill. They would be willing to help, and have a lot to give in the short-range period between now and the inauguration, but are not really looking for, and most of them would not accept, long-term jobs which they know to be beyond their energies.

Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, now teaching at the University of Georgia Law School, is a case in point. He is available for consultation. He knows the cards in the old if not the new deck, and he's being consulted. There are many more like him, who can be useful in this critical transition period, but don't want anything for themselves.

It is very awkward now for Governor Carter to consult comfortably with Henry Kissinger, since he made Kissinger a main target of the campaign, but there are many trusted Carter supporters who are trusted by Kissinger, whose main concern now is to avoid unnecessary problems abroad during the transition.

IN THE SHORT run, to assure continuity without confusing responsibility, to get objective help in mastering the facts without committing himself to a Cabinet, Governor Carter has many experienced men at his disposal, including senior civil servants like Gen. Brent Scowcroft, director of the National Security Council staff, who is on the point of retirement.

Actually, the mood in Washington for the transition is not only calm but hopeful. The fevers of the campaign have passed. Even nature, exhausted after the long-hot summer, is resting but radiant.

The capital is still ablaze with autumn flowers, Lady Bird Johnson's abiding present to her old neighbors; and from the tidewater between the Potomac and the Rappahannock to the Blue Ridge, the trees are golden red much later than usual.

Everything has been threatened in these turbulent years but nothing has been lost, and Washington is now waiting to hear where the new President is going, and particularly, who's going with him.

Reagan, GOP leader for '80

SACRAMENTO — Now that the 1980 presidential campaigns have begun, some speculation.

If Nancy Reagan had any hopes she and husband Ronnie could start taking it easy on their Santa Barbara ranch, they disappeared with Gerald Ford's defeat by Jimmy Carter.

Republicans across the nation are going to spend the next four years thinking they could have won had Reagan been their candidate and, given the closeness of last Tuesday's outcome, they might be right.

Right or not, it is Ronald Reagan they will turn to for leadership.

In 1980, he will be 69. If his health remains at all close to what it is today, he will be a vigorous 69, fully capable of mounting a full-time campaign and of serving in office for four years after that. There will, after all, be S. I. Hayakawa to remind him that a six-year term can be started at age 70.

EARLY ON IN the 1980 campaign, only one challenger to Reagan appears. That would be John Connally, the born-again Republican from Texas. But Reagan's regulars don't take kindly to anyone not 110 per cent in support of their man, and Connally, laboring under the burden of having once been a Kennedy-Johnson Democrat and therefore already suspect to the Reagan wing of the Republican Party, committed the unpardonable sin of expressing a public preference for Ford just before the GOP convention in Kansas City.

After Reagan and Connolly, who? There are some senators whose names crop up from time to time: Howard Baker, Lowell Weicker, Charles Percy, Edward Brooke, Mark Hatfield, Charles Mathias, even, still, Barry Goldwater.

Governors? Carter's success might give present or past governors some hope. Mis-

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

souri's Christopher Bond was considered a strong possibility for a national role, but the state's voters put an end to that speculation, temporarily at least, last week. Illinois will have a new Republican governor, James Thompson, and he will be examined if only because he had to knock over Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley's choice to get the job.

Michigan's William Milliken, Washington's retiring Dan Evans, Oregon's already retired Tom McCall? They've been open downfield for years, waving their arms and hoping the quarterback will throw them the ball. He, whoever he is, never has.

So, except for Reagan, and perhaps Connally, no tiger jumps out of a list of prominent Republicans. And the Republicans need a tiger.

Of course, four years ago, or two years ago, or even one year ago, Jimmy Carter would not have been identified as the tiger the Democrats needed.

executed; aided by Carter's mistakes, they succeeded in making him the issue rather than Ford's record in office.

They did so, it appears at first glance, through diligent use of two issues. The first was the familiar Republican battle cry. Carter, they said, was a big-spending liberal who would tax and tax and spend and spend and inflate and inflate. In a middle class country whose values have been shaped largely in the Horatio Alger tradition, that is an issue of extraordinary potency, and one which lends itself to the most blatant exaggeration.

The spending issue also helped the Republicans exploit a point first raised by Jimmy Carter himself: trust. Because he had not been previously on the national scene or in Washington, because he was of a suspect breed, a Southern Baptist, and because Carter in the primaries had been more adept than other Democratic possibilities in avoiding the "big-spending Whoever emerges to assume leadership of the Republican Party will have an easily definable task.

That is to persuade more people that they should be Republicans.

Long Beach's George Deukmejian paused in the enjoyment of his own election victory to wonder about that.

"The results of the voting on the propositions indicate that many of our positions are endorsed by the voters," the State Senate Republican leader said. "The points raised in the campaign debates on the controversial propositions were points Republicans had raised earlier."

"It's puzzling and it's frustrating. The results of the voting on issues indicate that Republicans reflect the views of a majority of voters. But for some reason, Republican candidates don't seem to get the kind of support their positions on issues indicate they should get."

Reagan has been saying for years that the majority of Americans espouse Republican Party principles, even if they don't register and vote that way.

THAT SUGGESTS he is saying voters don't really know what they're doing when they vote for Democrats, and obviously few Democrats are going to appreciate being told that. Reagan's task will be to get them to switch parties and think it's their own idea.

But rather than concentrating on the puzzling psyche of the American voter, it might be well for Reagan and other Republican leaders to look inward, to examine their party's image and structure and objectives, and to inquire why two of every three American voters feel more comfortable as Democrats.

liberal" label, the Republicans skillfully pictured him as an unknown quantity, and managed to equate that with being untrustworthy. Every presidential candidate; however, is to a great extent an "unknown" before he takes office.

None of this could have brought Ford so close to victory as it did had he not been an incumbent — albeit unelected — President. Manifestly, he was not a spender. Whatever his shortcomings he was not an unknown quantity, hence in the strange logic of this campaign he was not untrustworthy.

So Jimmy Carter, despite his mistakes, didn't "blow it" so much as the Ford campaign nearly won it. Had Carter not been a Southerner able to unite the South in his support, he probably could not have been elected, and his slender victory suggests how closely the country is balanced between the desire for change and reform and the fear that they will take something away from the comfortable.

Effect of election abroad

ANKARA, Turkey — Although the dull American electoral campaign featured many and often confusing appeals to the so-called ethnic vote, most foreign counties were genuinely indifferent about the results save for a few with very special interests, such as Greece, which figured it might get more support against Turkey from a Democratic than a Republican President.

But this bored attitude abroad is due for an abrupt change before the fresh administration's first year in office ends. For it is perfectly clear that no matter who is chosen to start things off at the State and Defense Departments next January, major shifts in actual policy goals will gradually become identifiable. One may also at least hope that some reform and restructuring of policy methods will be achieved.

Growing interest in third-world relationships that became increasingly marked in Washington from 1973 on will unquestionably have to take a major leap forward. It would be sound for the administration to contemplate the wisdom of Peking's long-term policy of cementing

Chinese relationships with developing nations everywhere.

For much too long a time we have been tardy in that respect. The only things that really woke us up were the energy crisis following the OPEC embargo in 1973 and

C. L. Sulzberger

New York Times News Service

southern Africa's crisis following the Portuguese empire's dismantling.

Likewise, there is bound to be an increasingly visible moral tone in policy developments — bound to be, because the American people increasingly manifest a desire for it. This must ultimately imply more pressures against excessively dictatorial regimes in Latin America — although the United States is certainly not going to intervene forcibly for or against any ideological credo — and also gradual encouragement to American concerns to reduce their activities in South Africa, unless its pace of racial reform perceptibly mounts.

Benjamin Franklin urged that honesty was the best policy. Morality, it can be argued, or at least an identifiable moral content, is the best foreign policy. Only when this becomes apparent to other nations will our position in the U.N. and our access to reasonably priced raw materials improve.

DEMOCRACY, as we know it, is a dwindling form of government on this crowded earth. If we wish to invigorate the system we so fervently prefer, we must take the lead in facing international problems such as population, food, distribution, cheap financing of poor lands, etc. To date we have talked more than we have acted in these domains.

Finally, it is high time the architects of our defense strategy should reconsider our appalling lag behind the Soviet Union and People's China with respect to passive nuclear defense programs such as mass evacuation plans and anti-fallout shelters.

Ignoring this facet of implicit danger in our contemporary world is stupid — as both Moscow and Peking openly acknowledge by their actions.

One may hope, also, that serious consideration will be given to naming two Cabinet ministers of equal rank to handle our overseas relations: a secretary of state who stays home and tends shop, including congressional relations; and a secretary for foreign affairs who handles the ceaseless negotiations in which we are involved abroad.

IN THAT WAY both our organization and application of policy will be effectively improved. Even Kissinger has expressed himself in favor of this idea.

Of course, the emphasis outlined above may not initially be greeted with enthusiasm by our European allies who have felt for years, primarily because of oil and the Vietnam war, that we tended to ignore them — despite banal speeches and adages.

This area — the sphere of NATO's military planning — is in wobbly condition with a new recession creeping over the horizon and a tendency to doubt American intentions. Moreover, a combination of previous U. S. unilateralism and massive corruption by some of our leading firms has encouraged the Eurocommunism we both fear and condemn — the latter in a provocative, possibly counterproductive way.

One means of helping our friends is by insuring that the next crop of envoys we send — everywhere, but above all to our allies — is experienced, intelligent and professionally competent. All too often in the past we have made the mistake of half-emulating Caligula. That Roman emperor made his horse a consul. We have made too many horses' rear-ends ambassadors.

$1 million for culture

Whether the Bellflower taxpayer likes it or not, he is going to get culture, $1 million worth. The Bellflower City Council has decided to ask the federal government for that much money to renovate the rundown movie house they purchased for $150,000. It was supposed to cost $650,000 to renovate, but suddenly it has been boosted to $1 million. This cultural center will benefit about 3 per cent of the total population of Bellflower, while the rest of the people will be holding the bag.

The City Council likes to brag about no city tax, but a few more boondoggles like this and we will get it in the neck. My property taxes went up 50 per cent, which is no fault of the City Council, but they certainly don't show much fiscal responsibility by their actions. They could have built a building for that amount of money, but since they were stuck with the movie house that failed, they had to find a way to make up for their mistakes.

I have no doubt we will be stuck with the upkeep of the cultural center, plus how much of the matching funds is anybody's guess.

I hope the taxpayers of Bellflower remember this at the next City Council election. But I don't think there is much hope.

A matter of destiny

The day before the election I instructed my broker to sell $25,000 worth of stocks if Carter won. He did so and I was surprised to see some of the stocks come back the very next day. So we rock-ribbed Republicans sold and the darn Democrats bought in the next day.

My good wife worked at Republican Headquarters, phoning all day. On one call, two old ladies, 85 and 87, answered, "last year you picked us up and took us to vote. When you didn't call, we decided to walk over, even though it was hot. We just decided since President Ford was sending us our monthly checks, he deserved our vote."

My heritage is Republican. My grandfather's family joined the Mormon Church in London in 1851 and spent seven weeks on the Atlantic. While coming up the Mississippi River the black plague (cholera) killed father, mother and five children and their bodies were thrown overboard. My grandfather, 13, and his younger sister survived and a Mormon family adopted them. They hooked up with a handcart company and walked and helped to push the handcart 1,300 miles to Salt Lake City. Grandfather became a successful farmer and as a Republican, was county treasurer.

I firmly believe the destiny of our beloved country is in God's protective hands and perhaps the best and right man won the presidency.

The Civil War was bitterly fought but the citizens of this grand United States soon united under the Stars and Stripes.

The election has now divided the East against the West. Too bad Ford can't be the vice president and give Carter supervision and tutelage. However, there is a destiny that makes us citizens brothers and no one goes alone, for all we give to others comes back into our own.

President Ford is helping and aiding in every way to enlighten and tutor Gov. Carter for assuming the biggest and toughest job in the world.

Appalling litter

I have just finished reading James Leavy's article in the I, P-T Oct. 30 on litter and vandalism. That article and what I see around absolutely appalls me.

Long Beach was my birthplace some 48 years ago. I lived here until 1958 and I was always proud of my town; beautiful streets, lovely parks, stately buildings, proud citizens.

I am now living in Oregon and have recently returned due to the passing of my father.

While driving down Interstate 5, driving around town and reading Mr. Leavy's article, I have been shocked at the litter on California highways, streets and beaches. Something should and can be done.

Oregon highways and beaches, while not litter-free, are certainly in far better condition than those here. What is the reason? Principally this:

Several years ago, the Oregon State Legislature enacted a "Bottle Bill." This bill prohibited pop tab cans (a major injury factor on California beaches) and "no deposit" pop and beer bottles. The bill also set a deposit on pop and beer cans and bottles. With the economy what it is, it just doesn't make good sense to throw away cans and bottles worth 5 cents, 10 cents or 20 cents. The cans are recycled and the bottles are refilled. Oregonians are very ecologically minded people.

Why don't our California neighbors get after their state legislators and join us on the federal level to do something about the litter problem through enactment of a "Bottle Bill" like Oregon's?

While some people might not be too enthusiastic about a "Bottle Bill," it works! Ask any Oregonian.

Support Carter

No one can say that Jimmy Carter didn't make it on his own. He went from "Jimmy who?" to being elected president of the United States through his own hard work, determination, and his belief in himself and those around him.

Now that the fight is over and he has won fair and square, he deserves everyone's full support, not just Democrats, but Republicans, independents and everyone else who, at the time, preferred another candidate.

His election is the beginning of a new era in government in this country. Stand behind him and at least give him a chance to prove himself. We may all be surprised to find out just how great he is.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Nov. 7, the 312nd day of 1976. There are 54 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1917, the Bolsheviks overthrew the shortlived Kerensky government in Russia, and Nikolai Lenin became the new head of government.

On this date —

In 1659, the Pyrenees were fixed as the boundary between France and Spain, ending a 24-year war.

In 1811, the Shawnee Indians were defeated in the Battle of Tippecanoe in Indiana.

In 1885, the Canadian Pacific Railroad was completed.

In 1942, the Allied invasion of North Africa began in World War II.

In 1944, Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected to an unprecedented fourth term.

In 1956, the British and French proclaimed a cease-fire in the Suez War in Egypt.

Ten years ago: Communist Chinese diplomats walked out of the Bolshevik anniversary celebration in Moscow after hearing Soviet criticism of the Peking government.

Five years ago: Filipinos voted in an off-year election after a campaign in which 130 people had been killed in political violence.

One year ago: India's supreme court reversed Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's conviction on two electoral offenses.

Thought for today: If we all did the things we are capable of doing, we would literally astound ourselves. — Thomas A. Edison, American inventor, 1847-1931.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia named Benjamin Franklin's son-in-law Richard Bache as Postmaster General after Franklin had sailed for France on a diplomatic mission.

No names, George

In deploring the "magnificent mediocrity" of our two presidential candidates, George Robeson sounded as if he had been stricken with jaundice.

Both President Ford and President-elect Carter are well educated men of high principles who have served this country well. Geniuses they may not be, but political geniuses have sometimes brought their nations to ruin.

I wouldn't want anyone to call George Robeson or Frank Anderson "dumbbells." Therefore, I resent Ford and Carter being christened as such.

We appreciate you, Robeson and Anderson, as good columnists. But, you'd better not office-room together on politics.

Saving porpoises

The problem of the porpoises' drowning occurs because the mammals have no way to escape once the tuna nets are released from the ships.

It is suggested that a compressor and air hose be secured to the hollow floats secured on the top of the tuna nets.

When the nets are first released, they can be weighted to leave the top floats from 10 to 40 feet below the surface, as desired.

Then as the net is tightened, the compressed air is forced into the hollow top floats, evenly spaced along the nets, and thus bring the top floats to the surface just as the tuna are being trapped.

The porpoises can easily swim over the nets, as they are being raised, and thus escape into the open sea and safety.

On the ships, a mini-computer might be helpful to coordinate the ocean currents, the prevailing wind, the speed, size and depth of the schools of tuna and also the porpoise, to determine the flotation factor needed to let the mammals escape, and still net the school of tuna.

Compressed air is a formidable weapon, as a big compressor, one new jackhammer and some willing workers can level the Empire State Building.

Tolstoy wants 'the big rubles'

Leo Tolstoy is tired of writing for kopecks. He wants the big rubles.

"So you think you're ready for the big rubles, Leo," says his agent.

"Leo Tolstoy says he wants it all. The 250,000-ruble advance. The 1,275,000-ruble

Russell Baker

paperback sale. The big movie deal. The television sale.

"Such talk is music to my heart," says his agent. "Go home and write me a few hundred words describing your novel."

Leo Tolstoy goes home and writes 250,000 words. His agent cannot wade through it. "Leo, Leo," he groans. "All this talk about Napoleon in somebody's parlor and I can't even keep the names straight. Go home and write letters to John Kenneth Galbraith and Norman Mailer and Philip Roth and ask them to give you some punchy sales lines for the jacket, and maybe I can find a sucker."

Leo Tolstoy writes letters of 100,000 words each to Galbraith, Mailer and Roth. They do not answer. Turgenev and Henry James, however, agree to send jacket blurbs on condition that Leo Tolstoy stop writing them 100,000-word letters.

LEO TOLSTOY shows James's blurb to his agent. It says, "Leo Tolstoy has done it again!" Turgenev's says, "Couldn't put it down!"

Senator Soaper

THE PROBLEM in many towns is that they build pedestrian malls about the week after the last pedestrian moved to Florida.

THE LITTLE BOY down the street resents being silenced at the family dinner table when his life ambition is to grow up to be a consultant.

SAD VOICE in the Bit o' Erin Bar & Grill: "Every time they play those old tunes on the juke box, I realize I'm not nostalgic about anything."

"Leo," says the agent, "I will give it to you from the shoulder. James Turgenev does not sell books."

He tells Leo Tolstoy to forget the book for the time being and write the condensation for The Reader's Digest. The condensation runs to 575,000 words.

"Let's skip the condensation, Leo, and go right to the movie," says his agent. "Once you have written the movie, you can do the condensation of the film and then work backward to the full novel."

At home, Leo Tolstoy writes a great movie. If filmed, it will run for 37 hours, not including intermissions for meals. "Leo," says his agent, "nobody is going to buy a 37-hour movie, a 575,000-word condensation, or a full-length novel that takes a 100,000-word letter to describe."

Leo Tolstoy is depressed. He sees the big rubles eluding him.

"However," says the agent, "if you write the soundtrack music for the movie, it will create a terrific audience, which will then demand that the rest of the movie be made, which will create a huge demand for the condensation of the original novel, which will make everybody want more and have the publishers begging you to write the full-length best-selling novel."

Leo Tolstoy goes home and sits down at the piano. After having a lot of fun learning to play "Chopsticks," he realizes he cannot write music.

"In that case, Leo," says his agent, "do the comic book first. Then we will hire a composer to write the music for the smash-hit film soon to be made on which the comic book is based, and point out that when the movie is finished it will be based on the full-length best seller soon to be written."

Leo Tolstoy goes home and does the comic book. It is thicker than the Manhattan telephone directory and is very poorly drawn.

"Not to worry," says his agent. "We'll go all the way to the end to start and work backward. Go home and make me a 'War and Peace T-Shirt.'"

Leo Tolstoy sits at home sewing. He sews for days. The T-shirt already covers 14 acres. "Sometimes," thinks Leo Tolstoy, "literature doesn't seem to be my glass of tea." He toys with the idea of chucking it all and looking for the big rubles in the garment trade.

He wants 'something special' for RV Carport 'nice,' but no permit

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

Building a carport for his recreational vehicle to shield it from the view of his neighbors has caused a Garden Grove man a lot of trouble and, apparently, it isn't over.

Frank Mackey decided he should build "something special" for his large recreational vehicle at his home at 11801 Bartlett St. "so it wouldn't be sitting in the street or in the driveway."

So he designed a special shelter for it in front of his garage.

He had it about halfway completed when someone told him he needed a building permit.

To get the permit, he later found out, he needed a variance because it violated the city's sidewalk setback regulations.

"That was eight months ago," he said ruefully.

Last week, following the chain of command, he appeared before the City Council to appeal a ruling of the planning commission.

So far, it hasn't done Mackey any good, although both Mayor J. Tilma Williams and Mayor pro-tem Milton Krieger have agreed to go out to Mackey's house and personally inspect the project before taking final action.

"The mayor came out Thursday," Mackey said Friday, "and he seemed impressed with what I have done."

Swine-flu shots will be given in Downey

Free swine-flu shots will be administered from 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. next Saturday and Sunday at the Stonewood Shopping Center near Firestone and Lakewood boulevards in Downey.

Those 60 and over will receive bivalent A-Victoria and swine-flu shots, and those under 60 will receive monovalent A swine-flu shots.

Two sought in shooting death

Inglewood police said Saturday that they were seeking two men in the shooting death of a Los Angeles woman found in her parked car behind an Inglewood cocktail lounge.

Detectives said the victim, Hermadine Andrews, 48, was found at 11:05 p.m. Friday by patrolmen investigating a report of shots fired behind the Diamond Head Lounge, 3100 W. Century Blvd.

Detectives said the victim, pronounced dead at the scene, had been shot in the back. Robbery may have been a motive, police said.

Precautions to be kept in mind, health officials say, are:

- Children under 3 should not receive flu vaccine.
- People with a known allergy to eggs should receive the vaccine only under special medical supervision.
- Anyone with a fever should not be given the vaccine.
- Anyone who has received another type of vaccine in the past 14 days should consult a physician before taking the swine-flu vaccine.

Larger bid on Irvine

After weeks spent in examining the Mobil and Cadillac bids, the judge was about to decide — apparently for the Toronto firm, since both Mrs. Smith and the Irvine Foundation, which owns 54 per cent of company stock, approved that offer.

But the court was unexpectedly given notice of Mobil's new bid of $285 million cash, and foundation directors asked time to study the offer.

Court was recessed until Monday at 9:30 a.m.,

when the Allen-Taubman bid will be given the court — probably with recommendations from the foundation trustees and Mrs. Smith.

However, Mrs. Smith said she believes that still higher offers will be filed.

Solar-energy system will be used in O.C. school

A relatively new school in the Irvine Unified School District will be fitted with a prototype solar heating, lighting and air-conditioning system costing $300,000.

It will be the first in Orange County.

Admittedly it will not be profitable, school officials say, because its anticipated savings in electricity and gas won't amortize the cost for 42 years — if then.

BUT, school officials said, they hope the system will cut in half the annual fuel cost for El Camino Real Elementary School, built three years ago at 4782 Karen Ana Lane, Mission Viejo.

To finance the experiment, the district pledged $38,000 and received the remainder from the federal and state governments. The system will be installed by next March, officials said.

Kenneth Smith of McCaughey and Smith

Energy Associates, Tustin, said his firm designed the system to both heat and cool the school.

Solar panels fitted with rows of specially treated glass tubing are expected to heat water — also specially treated — to 210 degrees on sunshine-blessed days.

THIS super-heated water will be pumped into differing coils for hot and cold days.

On days when there is little sunshine, the school will use its regular electric and gas services.

It is likely that such standby power will be needed when the school is used at night, because storage panels may not be able to retain sufficient heated water for conversion into energy, Smith explained.

The installation will be open for inspection, school officials said.

O.C.'s planners 'often confused'

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

There is so much confusion at meetings of the Orange County Planning Commission that members sometimes have difficulty following what is going on, according to a report by County Administrative Officer Robert E. Thomas.

In addition, according to the report, what the Board of Supervisors thinks the planning commission means isn't always what the commission intends.

But, he said, on some occasions such letters "do not seem to convey the exact specific which they recalled."

MOST commissioners now serving, and some who preceded them, "believe that there is no overt or covert attempt by staff to distort the commission's position on issues."

His investigation turned up a response not allied directly with the issue of proper reporting.

THE FULL report will be submitted Tuesday to the Board of Supervisors.

The board ordered Thomas to look into complaints by some planning commissioners that their reports to supervisors are not true expressions of their opinions or of the commission's actions.

Thomas is expected to tell supervisors that much of the problem is caused by the "chaotic atmosphere of commission meetings" and inadequate support from the Environmental Management Agency.

He said many commissioners "expressed dismay" that they were given no formal introduction to their jobs after appointment as commissioners, were not told how the commission operates, had no background briefings and were not even told where they could park their cars while attending meetings.

In the report, he notes there is "a casual atmosphere" at the commission sessions with "staff milling around behind the commission."

COMMISSIONERS complained, he said, that meetings "are seemingly confused and with little direction."

Some commissioners conceded that discussions are "complex" and sometimes befuddled, he found.

Yet, he said, most commissioners generally agree that the EMA staff makes a serious effort to relay the commissioners' positions to the supervisors on controversial matters.

YANK RETELLS RIVER KWAI TERROR HERE

The guards' behavior varied. The ordinary Japanese soldier wasn't bad, but the Koreans they brought in as guards were mean and ugly and vicious. So were the Japanese military police.

FUNNY THINGS happened, like the Aussies who'd pelt their guards with four-letter words, smiling politely, all the while. They thought the language barrier made them safe, and it did until the day they took on a young Japanese lieutenant, a graduate of Oregon State. His English was impeccable.

"Why pick on me?" he asked the Aussies. "I can't get back to the states, either."

In a sense, the lieutenant was a prisoner of war, enduring as was Don Brain.

The prisoners suffered, and their captors suffered along with them. There was never enough food or medicine for either conqueror or conquered. Malaria, dysentery, beriberi and jungle rot were nonpartisan in the war. Loneliness and despair were neutral, too.

Don Brain kept free of despair. "I psyched myself up. I vowed to stand and survive whatever the prison camp threw at me."

Don worked the Burma side of the bridge, key to the narrow-gauge line which ran from the Bay of Bengal to Bangkok and Singapore. Japan's sea lanes were choked off; she was being elbowed out of the skies by growing Allied air power. The bridge was life or death to Japan and to the prisoners who built the span.

pounds. There were few calories in riceballs, dried fish, yams and melons. "A wedge of pork fat? Man, that was worth a life."

He didn't elaborate.

"We used to cuss hell at Allied bombers. After a raid, the Japanese were more severe with us."

Again, he didn't elaborate.

Some guards amused themselves pulling the wings off bugs. Others found fun in beating prisoners for real or imagined infractions. An American Marine, who had somehow "liberated" five bottles of Johnny Walker Scotch, was forced to sit in front of the guardhouse and drink his loot down to the last drop. It was a new high in atrocities; even the prisoners laughed at that one.

The film, "The Bridge on the River Kwai," caught the life of the camps accurately, but there was no commando raid by William Holden. There was a "Colonel Bogey March," however: "B... S... is all the band can play. B... S... they play it every day," sang the prisoners.

DELIVERANCE DIDN'T come from William Holden; it came from a U.S. Army technical sergeant parachuted into the camp to take the surrender. The sergeant carried general's insignia with him, primed to pull rank on the colonel commanding if necessary.

It wasn't necessary. Don Brain's war was over. He was going home.

Today, 54-year-old Don Brain operates a trucking company in Wilmington and is commander of Alamitos Bay Post 445,

American Legion. He is not given to telling war stories; he prefers to let the past rest with the dead. This is the first time he has told his story in public, and only because he was asked to.

He doesn't hate. He is at peace with himself and his onetime enemies. Even so, Don Brain did not accept the invitation to attend the recent POW-Japanese reunion on the River Kwai. It was extended by the Japanese civilian engineer who built the bridge.

Don Brain's memory went in his place. It was a very private pilgrimage.

School Board agenda

Here is the agenda for Monday's meeting of the Board of Education of the Long Beach Unified School District. The meeting will be held at the board building, 701 Locust Ave.

Politics

GOP women's group to elect new officers

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

The Long Beach Council of Republican Women Federated will elect and install its 1977 officers at a Wednesday noon luncheon meeting in the Lafayette Hotel French Room.

Poet Bruce Sievers will be featured in the 1 p.m. program, speaking on "The Beat of a Different Drummer: from Green Beret to Published Poet." The meeting is open to the public.

GOP CONFERENCE

The Southern Division, California Federation of Republican Women, will have a legislative advocacy conference at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the Elks Club, Long Beach.

Featured speakers will be Jackie Harker of Encino, president of the state federation, and Nancy Ehlers, the federation's lobbyist in Sacramento.

Luncheon reservations may be made with Melina Morgan, 3612 Country Club Drive, Lakewood.

34TH GOP

Dr. Barbara Shell Stone will speak on "California Politics for the Future" at the 1 p.m., Wednesday meeting of 34th Congressional District Republican Women Federated in the Women's City Club, 1309 E. Third St., Long Beach. Dr. Stone, a professor at Cal State, Fullerton, has A.B., M.A. and Ph. D. degrees from USC.

The public is invited.

TRANSPORT HEARINGS

New policies for the state's long-range transportation plans will be discussed at hearings over the next several weeks, Assemblyman Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach, announced.

One hearing is scheduled for 7 p.m., Nov. 15, in the Waite Intermediate School Auditorium, 12110 E. Walnut St., Norwalk, and one for 7 p.m., Nov. 17 in Room 39, Carnegie Junior High School, 2182 Bonita St., Carson.

Cullen said members of the Business and Transportation Agency task force, which developed the proposed plan, would explain the policies and answer questions. He said these meetings were being held to acquaint people with the new policies before formal public hearings are held.

SEAL BEACH LWV

State and county assessment practices will be discussed at a series of unit meetings of the League of Women Voters of the Huntington Beach-Seal Beach Area, President Sherry Baum announced.

Times and locations of the meetings, open to the public, are available by calling (714) 846-8868.

The league also announced a rummage sale for 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Saturday, in the United Methodist Church hall, 6662 Heil Ave., Huntington Beach.

ATTENTION

Recall of 30-30 Rifle Cartridges and Cases Codes Ending -5289 through -6285

We are recalling certain lots of 30-30 rifle cartridges and empty unprimed 30-30 cases due to a structural weakness that can cause a case head separation. This can result in a jammed rifle and possible injury from escaping gas.

30-30 cartridges and unprimed 30-30 cases being recalled are identified by lot codes with the final four numbers -5289 through -6285. The code appears on the back of each box. Example: 3A-6032.

Boxes have these brand names: Federal, Remington-Union, Wards or Hiawatha.

If you have boxes with these codes call this toll-free number, 800-328-7525 or write:

Customer Service
Federal Cartridge Corporation
Anoka, Minnesota 55303

This notice is limited to 30-30 cartridges and cases with the lot numbers described.

Bandit shut out of motel

A Long Beach motel manager slammed the door in the face of a would-be bandit who fired two shots Saturday before running away, Long Beach police said.

Stereo stolen

Stereo equipment valued at $1,180 was taken from the home of Shirley Zamora, 1525 Alamitos Ave., by a burglar who broke a bedroom window to enter, Long Beach police said Saturday.

Police said Virgil Thompson, manager of Ho-Hum Motel, 1814 Pine Ave., answered the front door at 4:30 a.m. to find a man brandishing a two-inch revolver.

Thompson said that when he slammed the door, the gunman fired two shots that penetrated the door. Thompson was uninjured.

The bandit was described as a white man in his 30s, 6 feet tall, 200 pounds wearing a blue knit watch cap and a false moustache.

Financial seminar slated

"You and Your Financial Plan" is the subject of a talk at 8 a.m. Monday by Karen Eisenberg, who will set the theme for a half-day seminar at Cerritos College on Women and Financial Management.

At 9 a.m., participants will select one of six sessions: "How to Design Your Financial Plan"; "Investing Your Future —

Securities, Corporate and Municipal Bonds"; "How to Start Your Own Business and Succeed"; "Credit — How to Use It to Your Advantage"; "Real Estate — What You as a Buyer or Seller Should Know," and "What Every Woman Should Know About Insurance."

Each of the topics will be repeated at 10 a.m. to let woman attend two of the sessions. The closing session at 11 a.m. will feature attorney Joanne Rocks, speaking on "Trusts, Wills and Estate Planning."

Reservations may be made through the Cerritos College Community Service Office. A $3 fee covers costs of the seminar, plus coffee and doughnuts.

Retirement quarters reported renting fast

Rooms reportedly are renting quickly at Chateau Active Retirement Living, a North Long Beach retirement hotel at 3100 E. Artesia Blvd.

Ronald Weisel, administrator of the chateau, noted that the rate of room rentals is substantially ahead of schedule. "We are very satisfied and somewhat amazed at the large number of rooms we have rented," Weisel said. At this present pace, we plan to reach our capacity in just another few months.

For one monthly amount, from $290 for a semi-private room and from $495 for a private room, residents are provided an accommodating room, three meals a day and snacks, daily maid service, a full recreational program and residence in a fully secure building. The chateau is associated with the Regency Inns of America Corp., a network of retirement residences.

There are three full-size recreation rooms, a king-size living area, two outdoor terraces and a dining area.

Each room is color coordinated, and the lobby, living area and recreation rooms are complemented with quality furnishings and plants.

Further information may be obtained by calling 428-5371 or 979-9874.

8 developments starting this year in Anaheim Hills

Eight new residential neighborhoods, all offering single family homes, will be under way in Anaheim Hills before the end of 1976, according to builder representatives.

Four have opened sales within the past three months while the remaining four are to open soon.

Window Hill, a 145-home development by PCB-Sundial Development Co., has models and sales office on Serrano Avenue east of Nohl Ranch Road.

Sunset Ridge by Oaktree Development Co. is a 57-unit neighborhood at the east end of Serrano Avenue.

Woodcrest Estates, a 71-unit project by Westfield Development Co., is beginning sales in the second and final phase of its neighborhood on Canyon Rim Road, west of Woodcrest II.

The Country, 85 homes by Warmington Development Co., and the 34-unit Shadow Run neighborhood, by the same builder, are continuing sales.

The Country is at Imperial Highway and Nohl Ranch Road; Shadow Run is east of Sunset Ridge on Serrano Avenue.

'Freedom time' cited at Parkview Terrace

Freedom from worry — about lawn care, home maintenance, security from vandals or thieves — and freedom to travel appeals to a broad cross-section of buyers, at C. Robert Langslet & Son's new Parkview Terrace in Long Beach, the developers report.

Michael Engle, vice president for the building firm, said, "Many of our buyers are professional people and people who enjoy travel, and they appreciate being able to just walk out, lock the door, and know their property is being looked after."

The security-oriented condominium community is in prestigious East Long Beach, directly across the street from Recreation Park's 18-hole golf course. The community's mid-rise building stresses security. The underground parking areas are entered through electronically

Tarbell gets top awards

Tarbell Realtors received two first-place and three second-place awards for advertising excellence at the recent international Realtor RELO (family relocations) convention in Toronto.

Tarbell also received top commendation for family service, having helped 2,000 families relocate in the nation.

The President's Trophy for overall Tarbell sales performance has been awarded to Phyllis Colaninno of the La Palma office.

operated garage doors, and a glass-enclosed elevator takes residents to the landscaped inner courtyard and on up to the second and third floors.

"One of the most appealing aspects of our community is the lush landscaping which is totally maintained by professionals through the Homeowners Association," Engle noted.

Priced from $57,900, the homes are available in two bedroom two-bath floor plans. Third-story units include skylights and loft areas.

Take the San Diego Freeway to Lakewood Boulevard exit, proceed south to the traffic Circle and continue south on Pacific Coast Highway to Anaheim Street. Turn right on Anaheim to the sales information center.

The inside story on Parkview Terrace.

You've probably read a lot about Parkview Terrace. Maybe you've seen the beautiful 3½ story mid-rise right across the street from Recreation Park Golf Course. But it's what's inside that counts, and what's inside Parkview Terrace is sensational.

These magnificent two bedroom homes offer a variety of features. Dramatic high ceilings and raised entries. A fireplace and wet bar. A large balcony for sitting or sunning. On the 3rd floor, skylights enhance the beauty of each home. And there's an added loft that makes a delightful den or cozy sitting room.

Kitchen accessories include a double oven and range, a trash compactor and a dishwasher. Bathrooms all have large Roman tubs surrounded by handsome ceramic tile.

Visit Parkview Terrace today and get the inside story yourself. Before the news get out and the homes are sold out.

Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., has been spilling over with exuberant art this week, creations by students in the 15 junior high schools in Long Beach Unified School District.

Art teachers selected 293 pieces, then spent days narrowing entries to those the museum's galleries will accommodate. That kind of choosing isn't easy; often, it has to be just plain arbitrary, selection dictated by available space, appropriate size and esthetic arrangement. Sherry E. Swan, consultant for fine arts education for the Long Beach schools, has titled the exhibit "Expression of a Special Time — Junior High."

The public is invited to join students and their families today at a reception in the museum from 2 until 4 p.m. Hosts will be Friends of the Museum.

THE COLORFUL show not only reflects expressions of junior high school students' interests, feelings and dreams in any media they can contrive, it also continues the tradition of the museum to foster talents of Long Beach school students, says Jan E. Adlmann, museum director.

Examples of pieces on display are papier mache animals, sandpaper collages, pen and ink drawings, pencil sketches, paintings and a Bicentennial quilt.

Admission is free to this exhibit which will continue through Dec. 5. The museum is open Wednesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m.

Informal parties more fun

By LETITIA BALDRIGE

I recently found a copy of an invitation to one of my parties that I had written as a New York career girl at the age of 26 (a long time ago!). I compared my invitation with one sent by my friend, Lexie, now 26, to her friends earlier this year. The differences between the invitations are marked, to say the least. Mine was written rather self-consciously by hand on a piece of my good, ecru-colored, formal notepaper with matching envelopes. It read:

8 to 11 o'clock

R.S.V.P.

I remember that party, because in spite of the stuffy invitations, I managed to squeeze 30 people into my tiny apartment. I served only Scotch and bourbon, plus an enormous platter of crackers and cheese that was empty 40 minutes after the first guests arrived. We ran out of liquor by 10:30, but an all-night liquor store came to the rescue.

I had a guitarist who played the classical guitar Segovia-style, but who could also accompany us while we sang the hit songs of the day. My having a not-too-clean, hungry, bearded musician from Greenwich Village as the star of our intimate gathering was considered rather daring. I suppose one could say he was a prelude to the hippie folk musicians who were to come into our culture later.

Each guest made his own drink, so my duties as a hostess consisted of emptying ashtrays and answering the doorbell. Everyone went home at midnight (a schoolnight for everyone — work, that is) pleasantly happy, but not inebriated. It was the kind of party everyone quickly forgets, because, except for my would-be Segovia friend from the Village, there was absolutely nothing out of the ordinary.

LEXIE'S INVITATIONS were written by hand, too, but she spoofed the printed fill-ins. She took some regular, 8x11, white bond, executed the master copy and ran off the needed 50 copies on the office copier. Her invitation read:

IT'S A PARTY
WHEN: Saturday, January 10th
WHY: Anti-Depression and Anti-January Blues Gathering
TIME: 8:00 p.m. until???
PLACE: Lexie's, 301 East 78th Street
ATTIRE: Think Thirties
RSVP: 833-5760 (before 5 p.m.) 249-3543 (after 5:30 p.m.)
NOTE: Bathtub gin or its equivalent will be served ... if you are inclined toward other, please BYO.

No Smoke Please

Like mine, her party time meant "eat your own dinners first; don't expect me to feed you." It makes life a lot simpler. But Lexie gave her party a theme, and it intrigued her friends. Some dressed up like gangsters and molls. The group played records from the 30s, and there was a touch of Astaire and Rogers in the air, too, as the gathering danced by the light of subtle, pink light bulbs. The inexpensive "bathtub gin" punch concoction was well-received, and it was also easy on the budget. Very few guests followed the "BYO" routine.

The "No Smoke Please" on the invitation had really perplexed me until Lexie said it meant her party was to be "straight." She was serious in not wanting any kind of drugs to be brought, and no one was to light up a "joint." No one did.

When I think back on my party in another era, this problem of pot had never entered our lives, but I must confess, Lexie's "Think Thirties" party must have been more fun than mine. At 26 she has a lot more imagination than we had. And her friends contributed in many ways, too, including preparing a feast of hors d'oeuvres and goodies they had made at home and brought to the party. The part I like best of all was the "No Smoke" on the invitations. That was telling it like it was going to be. Brava!

Glad you asked that!

Q: I once heard that Clark Gable regretted making "Gone With the Wind." Was this true? — Mrs. Helga Cardo, Richmond, Va.

A: On the contrary. "The only thing that's kept me a big star," Gable once confided to producer David O. Selznick, "has been revivals of 'Gone With the Wind.' Every time the picture is re-released, a whole new group of young moviegoers gets interested in me." (Footnote: The NBC network's two-part TV presentation was expected to play to potentially more people than those who paid to see it in theaters since it was released in 1940. A little-known fact: the original choice to play Rhett Butler was Ronald Colman.)

Q: We just caught up with "Deep Throat," and we're curious. How much did Linda Lovelace's "leading man" get paid for his work in the film? We hear it ran close to $50,000. Is this the truth? — Donald Francis, Detroit.

A: Nothing could be further from the truth. What actor Harry Reems got was $100 for one day's work. The picture made him, but ensuing legal battles have taken it all away again.

TV TALK show host Merv Griffin — perfect posture produces his stiffness.

Q: Does Louise ("Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman") Lasser really smoke cigars? — Ms. Mildred Lurie, Milwaukee.

A: Yes, she once told us. The conversation went something like this: "Would you like a cigar?" "Sure ... This is a good cigar ... I really prefer the cheap ones — and this has that cheap flavor I love! When I am working hard I smoke them a lot out of nervousness and anxiety — they don't irritate my throat as much as cigarettes!" Since Louise was still Mrs. Woody Allen at the time, we

hy

wondered if her husband got upset when he came home and found cigar butts in the ashtray. "No," was Ms. Lasser's instantaneous retort, "he knows they're mine!"

Q: Now it comes out that the Mona Lisa had a high cholesterol count. Who figured that one out? — P. Borno, Seattle.

A: Japanese cardiologist Haruo Nakamura, after closely studying Leonardo da Vinci's famous painting. The condition can be clearly seen, claims the doctor, from the yellow in the corner of the left eye of the subject. Louvre experts confirmed that the yellowing was not a discoloration — but part of the original painting.

Q: I've noticed that Merv Griffin always sits, stands and even bows so stiffly it makes you wonder — is it a reaction to nerves, a brace or a corset? — Kate R.R., Raleigh, N.C.

A: Neither. Nor are Merv's nerves responsible. He simply suffers from perfect posture.

Q: I am very active in athletics in school and would like to become a stuntperson when I graduate. My grandfather says it's too dangerous. Is it? How could I get into the business, and would my sex be against me? — Vicki Chapman, Drumore, Pa.

A: If you are athletic and level-headed, your sex is irrelevant.

THE LATE actor Clark Gable as Rhett Butler and Vivian Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara in scene from "Gone With the Wind" — credits movie with fans' loyalty.

Women have been in stunt work as long as men, though there are fewer of them. Stunt people are very serious about their craft and agree that with proper preparation major accidents are rare. While working in "Black Sunday," top stuntman Howard Curtis (you'll see him hanging from a helicopter) told us that "the type of injuries received are similar to those incurred in professional sports."

"Most of the people who break into stunt work have been associated with motion pictures by being an extra and have gotten the opportunity to work out with the cowboys, the ear men, etc., until they have learned all aspects of the craft." Tell your grandpa there are stuntmen still active in their late 60s.

ACTRESS Louise Lasser of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" — knows about cigars.

PRINCESS Grace of Monaco — Broadway debut as actress long in coming, short lived.

Q: I heard that Grace Kelly was once a Broadway actress. What did she play in? — Mrs. G. Truesdale, Philadelphia.

A: Before she became a movie star, Princess Grace was a famous magazine cover girl in New York. But her burning ambition was the Broadway stage. She read for 40 plays — and was turned down 40 times. She finally landed a role in Strindberg's "The Father" — partly because of her father's longtime friendship with its star, Raymond Massey. This was her only Broadway appearance.

Q: Which do athletes find more difficult — playing baseball or football? — R. L., Omaha.

A: "The most difficult feat in sports," claims authority Leonard Koppett, "is for a batter to take a narrow piece of wood and with it, endeavor to hit a small baseball thrown at around 100 miles an hour."

Las Vegas—new audience for Broadway star

She leaps. She jumps. She slices breakfast melon, knocking over a personally engraved cigarette lighter from Neil Diamond with his autograph in gold. She pours coffee and dances at the same time.

Chita Rivera's movements, even at a ridiculously early morning hour, are big and sassy. I don't know how old she is, but as she prepares for her big nightclub solo at the chic Waldorf's Empire Room, it is obvious that she has swallowed the Fountain of Youth.

On Broadway, she's pow-socko-boom! Now she's spreading out, reaching new audiences, raising her name to its proper place in lights. Theatergoers have applauded Chita Rivera for years in shows like "West Side Story," "Sweet Charity," "Bye Bye Birdie" and "Chicago." Now the rest of the world is getting a look, and the view is sublime.

She just returned from Las Vegas, where she was an opening act for Engelbert Humperdinck (the sophisticated Sardi's set is still holding its nose over that one!) and now she's headlining the bill on a cross-country tour that will keep her in Caesars for the next year.

"Listen," she says, directing part of her fabulous Bob Mackie wardrobe toward the ironing board between ringing phones and noisy doorbells that announce more congratulatory telegrams from the legends of show business, "this club act all started when rehearsals for 'Chicago' were halted because of Bob Fosse's heart attack. We were out of work, so I gathered some of the kids together and started working on an act to keep busy. Now it's changed the entire course of my life."

"We got rave reviews in New York, then took the show to Los Angeles and they came out of the woodwork! One night I had Lina Wertmüller, Ginepro Gianini, Lana Turner and Paul Lynde all in the same room! The act is bringing me new audiences."

"If you're a hard-core theater person from Broadway musicals, there's a large area of the country that never knows who you are unless you're on TV. Those pregnant ladies who stuff nickels in slot machines never get to Broadway. I don't want to just dance for my best friends. I've got enough best friends already."

SHE DIDN'T even mind opening the show for a mediocrity like Humperdinck. "The screaming fans who came to watch his pants rip didn't know what a Chita Rivera was, honey. But they found out. It was a great chance. He was a doll and a gentleman, but his pants were so tight he couldn't move."

"I used to tease him by saying, 'You know, your huns are supposed to move separately!' But it's all show business. I got standing ovations from people from Kansas and Oklahoma who never heard of me in their lives. I was scared to death, too. It's a crazy town. Las Vegas still sounds funny to me."

"After three weeks there, we were putting our faces in chocolate cake. You get desert fever. You get crazy because there's nothing to do, no streets to walk on."

"I got back to New York, and even the doggie-doo smelled good. I did feel like an elephant act, but somebody said to me, 'You're gonna be back in Vegas, honey, and you'll be rolling in money!' I think it was Raquel Welch. That girl is so gorgeous you could crack her face!"

With everything she does, there's the humor that shines through like new sunshine on a foggy moor. She's had to summon it on occasion just to survive the narrow-mindedness of type-casting.

For years, everyone called her a taco or a tamale. Every role for a spitfire or a peasant girl dancing around a campfire would go to the girl with the Latin name.

"After a while you get used to being called a bombshell. Hello. That's not bad. Words like fire-works and explosive aren't bad. That's better than having the critics say 'Here comes Miss Vanilla Pudding again.' I just always figured it was better to keep working. As a creative person, I've got to be creative, or I rot."

CHITA RIVERA, who brought people to their feet in her first Las Vegas appearance, now is preparing for solo performance at New York's Waldorf Astoria.

"Even between shows, when I wasn't working, I'd go back to ballet class or teach dancing in high schools. I can't be idle. I have too much energy. Even if I choose the wrong thing to do, I've gotta do it."

AND SHE'S CHOSEN some clinkers. Does anybody remember "Zenda" with Alfred Drake? "That one," she roars, "was better than a show called '1491.'"

"John Cullum was Christopher Columbus, and at the end of the show he discovered America with something that looked like the steering wheel from a toy scooter. It had costumes for days, we opened in Pasadena and I played a Spanish Jewess — naturally — a barefoot wench who came in the back door and hissed at the queen."

"My friends said 'Oh Chita, we don't know how to tell you this,' and I said, 'You already have.' It was so terrible I have to laugh when I think of it. It was just one of many Latin hussies I've played."

Half the world thinks she's Cuban; the other half thinks she's from Tijuana. To clear up the mystery, she's a mixture of Puerto Rican and Scottish from Washington, D. C.

Her father was a saxophone player in the Harry James orchestra, and her real name is Dolores Conchita Figueroa del Rivero. "With a name like that on the marquee, you'd have to wear a mantilla and carry a rose in your teeth."

"Ben Bagley made me change my name when I was in the 'Shoestring Revue.' I was mad about Maureen O'Hara, so for three weeks I was Chita O'Hara. Friends would call up, say 'Chita W-h-a-t?' and hang up. It found its way to Chita Rivera. Now I have absolutely no feeling about seeing my name up in lights. It scares the hell outta me."

She lets out a banshee hoot when anyone calls her a star. The word does not exist in her vocabulary. "Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck are stars. They cannot be replaced. I don't even know what a live human star is. I've always been a gypsy, one of the kids in the chorus."

"That's the difference between the Broadway mentality of people like Gwen Verdon and me — dedication, hard work and the development of a craft — and the Hollywood mentality, which is really a job and out of it sometimes comes fame. I couldn't care less about being a movie star."

"I NEVER THOUGHT much about my career. It just sort of happened. I didn't have time to plan it because I was always too busy working. All I ever wanted to do was dance."

"I was trained from the age of 11 to be a ballet dancer, and one day I went to an audition with a friend and ended up in 'Call Me Madam' and Jerome Robbins was the choreographer. That led to other shows, and all the kids cutting their teeth at the same time were people like Sheldon Harnick, Shirley MacLaine, Carolyn Leigh, Dody Goodman, Jerry Herman, Bea Arthur, Artie Johnson, Carol Burnett. I feel so sorry for kids today. They can't possibly have that kind of training. There's no place for dancers to work."

Chita's own daughter, Lisa Mordente, is now a budding musical star herself. Chita and child recently did a flaming version of "America" on the Merv Griffin Show together, and Chita was so excited she could hardly remember her own dance steps.

rex
reed

There's not much show-biz talk at Chita's house. She won't let Lisa play her records. She likes to do it, not talk about it. She does needlepoint, she makes a terrific lasagna, and she eats no meat.

She has been remarkably lucky as a dancer, with relatively few injuries, although she did throw her calf out of joint in "Can-Can" and fell on her knee in "Sweet Charity" and still suffers pain from those old injuries.

"AGE IS THE ENEMY of all dancers. They don't talk about it, but it's there. You cannot dance forever. There comes a time beyond which the muscles don't work."

"My knee injury sometimes swells up like a lump, and it could turn into arthritis, who knows? I can't do 32 fouettes or four pirouettes in a row like I used to. My technique is slipping. But I'm strong and I love what I'm doing. That keeps my muscles in better shape than most people. But I know I can't dance forever, so I'm gradually moving into other areas of acting."

"That old saw about how you don't sing, you dance — or you don't say lines, you dance — well, that's changing. Now you have to be able to do everything. It's sad that when Gwen and I go, there's nobody to take over."

"But I keep my mind clear, young and progressive. That, combined with the right exercise, makes my body move easier. And —" she winks, and you know the and is a big one — "if age does catch up with me, you find me planting zinnias. I'm going to be one Latin bombshell who's gonna be a swinging old lady!"

At that moment...

Against the rest of the week's tribulations — a gangster killing in Los Angeles, floods in Omaha, strikes against the Taft-Hartley law — the stickup at a Howard Johnson's restaurant in Boston rated little attention.

But then, on June 23, 1947, police stop to question a 15-year-old about the holdup, and the youngster, Edward Bancroft, pulls a revolver and starts shooting. He dashes past a school and jabs the gun into the ribs of unsuspecting William Ronan, who happens to be 15, too, and forces him to come along.

Using the Ronan boy as a shield, young Bancroft darts into an alley and stands off 27 policemen with shotguns and tear gas. He shoots one policeman in the shoulder and peppers squad cars with bullets.

Police seal off both ends of the alley. They try to close in.

"Don't come any nearer or I'll shoot him!" screams young Bancroft, aiming at the Ronan boy's back.

Silently, on his stomach, Officer George Toland crawls behind a fence along the alley. As the Bancroft boy eyes the platoon of policemen blocking his ways of escape, Toland stands up, reaches over the fence and stuns him with the butt of a riot gun.

Later, it turned out the boy had nothing to do with the holdup. But he drew two and a half years in the House of Correction for kidnaping and assault.

Frank Cushing of the Boston Traveler flattened himself on a sunporch, overlooking the two boys, and carefully, very carefully, made his picture. "I was wondering if the kid would shoot me. But I wanted that picture."

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Got lot in lieu of cash

DEAR MR. SMITH: Four years ago I made a loan to a friend of $1,000. It was not covered by a written agreement. Later, I accepted a vacant lot in payment of the loan. How can I establish my $1,000 cost? — L.I.H.

It is not required that you enclose proof of cost when you report the long-term capital gain from the sale of the property. You should look for anything that might support the facts. Your friend may have given you a receipt for the loan, or you may have copies of correspondence about the loan or property. See if you have a bank statement or other record showing where you withdrew the amount of $1,000 to make the loan. Have all such records available if your tax return is audited.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Upon retiring in 1969, I received approximately a thousand shares of stock from the Profit Sharing Fund. I own this at a very small cost. Recently I sold it to purchase a life annuity. Do I have to declare the entire long-term capital gain on this year's tax return, or is there some way I can average it out over several years? — R. S. M.

The gain on the sale of the stock is taxable to you in the year sold, notwithstanding that you invested the proceeds in a life annuity. The gain should be reported on Schedule D of Form 1040. You may be able to reduce your tax by income averaging. Obtain Schedule G of Federal Form 1040 right now to make your calculations. If the tax is huge, consider making all possible payments of deductible items, including state income tax, before the end of 1976.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Suppose I buy some acreage for $10, and then pay up all the back taxes of $2,200. Can I deduct this $2,200 for income tax purposes? — W. B. G.

No, you can deduct only the property taxes that accrue after you have acquired the property. The back taxes can be added to your tax basis (cost).

DEAR MR. SMITH: My mother purchased common stock for $2,400. The company was liquidated and she received liquidating dividends, worth $4,900. What is the way to handle this tax-wise? — G. C. S.

Assuming your mother held the stock for more than six months, she reports a long-term capital gain on Schedule D, Form 1040. $4,900 is entered as the sales price, $2,400 as the cost.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I am 69 and my living expenses exceed the $400 per month I receive mostly from Social Security. My only asset is a $60,000 capital loss carryforward. How can I benefit from this prior year loss? — F. B. P.

Selling a low-cost asset for a substantial capital gain is the most obvious way to make use of your capital loss. If you have no such asset, you may be able to think of a relative or close friend who would be willing to make a gift to you of such an asset which you could then sell and offset your loss. If you are, or become, married, filing a joint return would permit you to offset your spouse's capital gains, or to a limited extent, ordinary income, against your loss.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I redeemed growth shares for $6,219 that cost me $6,003 plus 110 shares which had been distributed to my account. Had the funds been deposited in a bank or savings and loan account at prevailing rates, I would have realized approximately $13,338 upon withdrawal — $6,003 principal and $7,335 interest.

Would it be possible to claim a loss of approximately $7,119 on the transaction due to the loss of 15 year's interest? I also cashed in a Keogh Plan paid for me by my employer, a local doctor. I expected to receive at least $5,000 which he had paid into the fund. Instead, I received a check for $2,500 in full settlement from the company. Since I am, in a sense, the injured party, could I properly claim a loss of $2,500? — P. S. S.

Sorry, but no! There is a basic principle involved: no loss is deductible for amounts which have not been expended from tax-paid dollars. Although you don't get a separate, special deduction for the two amounts you lost, you are indirectly getting a deduction. In each case you are reporting a much smaller amount than you expected. That's like getting a deduction. Now, if the receipt of any of those 110 dividend shares were taxable, you can add the taxable amounts to the $6,003 you invested.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice to the Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49801, Tucson, Ariz., 85717, with a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Your identity will not be disclosed.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Guests had to sing for their supper

carolyn mcdowell

POST MORTEM on Halloween. Invitations to a party at the Lakewood Country Club Estates home of Richard and Ruth Hiron requested that party goers come dressed as their favorite song.

Esther and George Albert had everyone guessing the name of the song they represented. With some padding in the stomach, Esther was a slightly pregnant lady and George was her groom. Finally they confessed their song was "It Happened In Monterey".

Bob and Hananah Levine came as clowns in made-by-Hananah costumes. Dr. Dave Egli won first prize as an Indian chief, complete with war paint. His song was "Indian Love Call."

Maury Symonds was "Cool Hand Luke," Evie Singer was "Second Hand Rose," and Doris Caplan depicted "From Rags To Riches" which is not on my list of rememberd tunes. Jack Slomann was the "Candy Man." Now that's one I know.

Bob Levine came as "Happy Birthday" because it really was his birthday.

IF I HAD a calculator I still wouldn't be able to compute one million hours.

This year Memorial Medical Center Auxiliary Volunteers are sporting million hour pins. The pins were awarded to members who have collectively given a million hours of service to patients at the hospital during the past 15 years.

A small group within the larger group holds a record of its own.

They have been lunching together at the hospital every Friday for 15 years. Their combined hours total more than 15,000 (not counting lunch).

This past week they met at the home of Jane Olson to surprise fellow luncher, Ethel Schafer, on her birthday. Ethel must hold some kind of personal record. She has served more than 8,000 hours at the hospital.

Jane also included director of volunteers, Ellen Baker, for the luncheon which featured chicken delight (that's a casserole not a delivery service) cranberry wine salad, homemade rolls and copper pennies. No, not the restaurant, these are sweet and sour carrots.

Surprisers were Ra Lynch, Hazel Burney, Marie Monroe, Anne Hoffman and Mary Mimmi.

MORE BIRTHDAYS...

This birthday bunch traditionally celebrates one another's birthday by dining out. They must dine out a lot as there are five couples in the group.

They chose the Riviera restaurant to honor Esther Alban's natal date. Diners were Esther's husband, Dr. Art, Dr. Harry and Syd Alban, Jack Slomann, Doris Caplan, Joe and Ruth Hartstein and Milt and Grace Winnick.

FRANCOIS' Manhattan will be the scene of a champagne reception today honoring long-time Long Beach furrier Bob Hill and his wife, Betty.

They are celebrating a 40th wedding anniversary.

The party will be hosted by Bob's mother, Dora Hill, and the Hill children, son Bob and his wife, Susie, daughter Sandy Shroot and her husband, Delco, and another son Gary Hill and his wife, Gloria.

Also among the 80 well wishers will be the Hill's grandchildren, Bob and Susie's children, Cary, Curt, Cassie and Celeste; Mike and Jeff Shroot and Gary and Gloria's son, Marty.

SURPRISE! Surprise! Surprise!

Larry Sessions made secret arrangements to honor his wife, Connie, on their 40th wedding anniversary.

He invited family and friends to Hugo's Restaurant in the Wilshire Hyatt House in Los Angeles for a festive dinner. The couple had celebrated their 38th wedding anniversary there.

Connie surprised Larry by announcing that she didn't want to go out to dinner this year. He finally had to tell her that the plans were made.

So, off they went with son, John Sessions, daughters, Tina and Connie, Bill Forester and Lucy Lowe (husband Hal busy with a meeting).

The management of Hugo's then surprised Larry by presenting an anniversary cake.

ANOTHER anniversary...

This time an open house celebrating the 35th year of Century 21 Muntz Realty in Naples.

Invitations stated that three generations of Muntzes had been involved in the company and added "...since 1931 when Grampa Muntz was selling Bayfront lots for $700."

Note to Bayfront dwellers: Don't you wish you had bought then?

Women are asking

'What's wrong with a back-to-nature approach to beauty?'

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

A more natural approach to grooming keynotes today's lifestyle. Judging from our reader mail people are seeking out the real thing — not synthetics. In fact, some of the letters mention using egg whites for facial masques, lemons for tines and hair lighteners, almond oil for scalp conditioners, cocoa butter and honey for skin smoothers, and milk and yogurt for skin softeners.

The growing trend is to a more unstructured way of doing things. It's wise, however, to check with your doctor or dermatologist when adapting a make-your-own grooming aid.

Chatting with a group of cheerleaders, we discovered they were gung-ho on the back to nature approach. Some were making their own cosmetics from fresh vegetables or fruit. Others were using organic products and lightweight moisturizers. Also, replacing heavy eye cosmetics, was a thorough brushing of brows and lashes — with some pomade on eyebrows to keep them controlled.

Interestingly, when it came to hair styles, they were forsaking stiff sprays, in favor of cutting their hair, so it would be manageable even if a vigorous cheer and yell were called for. As one explained, "If I get my hair cut by a professional, it will be layered to stay in place — and look good — with or without curl. I feel it's healthy for my hair, and leaves me worry-free to be my most enthusiastic while cheering for the team!"

P.S. If you'd like a leaflet spotlighting the basic approach to natural grooming, it is yours free. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba and Bonnie Churchill, "Natural Grooming," Independent Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

AT WIT'S END

A chuckle or two is worth the price

Remember those wonderful people who brought you the "Pet Rock" in time for Christmas giving last year? Well, they're back again and this time it's the Sand Breeding kit. This one contains two glass test tubes filled with "male" and "female" sand, along with a fully-illustrated, easy-to-read training manual.

The manual gives you "how to" hints on how to get your sand to breed

"How would a Stud rock work?" she said disgustedly. "It mates and has pebbles. Then, there are the Horny stones, complete with booklet."

"I don't want to see it. What's this kit all about?"

She showed me a glass bowl, complete with sand and rocks. "This is our invisible goldfish bowl. Hey, I wouldn't put my finger in that bowl. It contains the invisible piranha." Instinctively, I pulled my hand out of the bowl and felt like a fool.

and grow a beach, a desert, hard-to-fill landfill, kitty litter, or filler for hotel ashtrays.

Have you ever wondered what it would be like day after day to sell these faddies? It could make a real yo-yo out of you.

I interviewed a salesperson at one of the local gift shops that carries a complete line of these mind blowers.

"How are the pet rocks moving?" I asked her.

"They slowed up a bit after Christmas," she said, "but the Stud rocks are going well."

"How do the Stud rocks work?" I asked.

"THIS IS NEW this year. It's called the Dinosaur Eggs."

"Where?"

"Here in the nest. You have to sit on 'em for 118 hours before they hatch. Oh, and these are good this year — the Miracle Rocks. They change color with your mood like the rings did last year."

As I walked toward the door, I discovered something. I was smiling and had been all during the conversation. For a few minutes, I had forgotten about U.S. foreign policy, busing, abortion, my son's report card, natural disasters, and the way my car shook when I got it up to 35 mph. Would I pay $3, $4, or even $5 for this ridiculous instant joke? Absolutely not. It was silly. I'm a full-grown, mature woman with more regard for money than that.

Besides, when my pet rock ran away from home last year I got stuck with a jumpsuit and a water bed for it!

IF YOU WANT TO SEW SOMETHING ROUND, YOU SHOULD HAVE SOMETHING ROUND TO SEW IT ON.

Model 533

Flat bed machines are fine for sewing flat things. But clothes aren't flat. Because people aren't flat. So, if you want to sew a round sleeve to go on a round arm, you need a round arm to sew it on.

Singer has it. On our Stylist* free-arm machine.

Our free-arm lets you get into cuffs, pants, necks, waistbands, armholes and other tight spots. Which means you don't have to sew them by hand any more. Or open the seams. And then sew everything back up again.

And the free-arm isn't the only great feature on our Stylist machine. It makes buttonholes any length in four easy steps. It has a front drop-in bobbin so you don't have to fumble around to put it in. And, for knit and stretch fabrics, there's an adjustable, flexible stretch stitch. And of course, for flat sewing there's our push-button, snap-in cloth plate.

So come to Singer and see the Stylist machine. It's made to solve a lot of problems. Including the fact that you're round. Not flat.

A title for every taste

By NAT HONIG

Among the pick of the recent crop are books about revolt in Russia and Poland, a novel about a six-year-old girl, a scholarly work about speech play, a psychological thriller and a work of science fiction.

The Hatter's Phantoms by Simenon and Maigret and the Apparition, by Simenon, both Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, $6.95 each.

Two more by the Belgian-born French master of the psychological thriller. The Hatter's Phantom deals with mass murder of old women; in Maigret and the Apparition that greatest of modern-day detectives Maigret is helped by his wife as he pits wits against a suave leader in the international art underworld.

The Star Diaries, ($9.95); The Futurological Congress, ($6.95); The Investigation, ($7.95); The Invincible, ($6.95) by Stanislaw Lem, Seabury Press.

Four newly translated gems by the Polish writer who is handdown the best and most plausibly imaginative science-fiction writer anywhere.

The Silver Crest: My Russian Boyhood by Kornei Chukovsky. Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $6.95.

Russia's most beloved children's storyteller (he died in 1969, aged 87) sets down the endearing account of his rebellious and mischievous boyhood.

The Eastern Front 1914-1917 by Norman Stone, Scribner.

A definitive and fascinating account, the fullest yet, of the First World War on the Russian front which Churchill dubbed "the unknown war."

The Road to Bloody Sunday by Walter Sablinsky, Princeton University Press, $18.50.

An expert on Russian history reassesses the events that led to the Russian revolution of 1905, the organization of the St. Petersburg workers by the young, still mysterious priest Father Gapon, the growing unrest that culminated in the massacre of unarmed workers on "Bloody Sunday."

The Bravest Battle: The Twenty-Eight Days of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising, by Dan Kurzman, Putnam, $10.

A gripping, thorough account of the revolt of the 60,000 Jews penned up in the Warsaw Ghetto after 300,000 had already died in the gas chambers; an uprising doomed, but among the most courageous in history. The revolt began on the first day of Passover 1943, and lasted nearly a month. A pact bound the Jews to take their own lives rather than surrender.

Terra Nostra by Carlos Fuentes, Translated by Margaret Sayers Peden; Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $15.

A masterly sweeping book by Mexico's finest novelist, a gigantic historical novel of the pageant of Spain through the centuries and of Spain in the New World.

Catacract by Mykhaylo Osadchy, translated from the Ukrainian by Marco Carynnyk, Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, $3.95 paperbound.

A young Ukrainian poet, at first a devoted Communist, then an outspoken dissenter, gives an account of his trial and imprisonment in a hard labor camp in the Soviet Union. The manuscript was smuggled out of the USSR.

Love Poems from the Hebrew, edited by David C. Gross, illustrated by Shraga Weil, Doubleday, $5.95.

Beautifully illustrated collection of 75 Hebrew love poems. Delicately translated from Song of Songs to today's Israeli poets.

Kassandra and the Wolf, by Margarita Karpanou, translated by N. C. Germanacos Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, $6.95.

The remarkable first novel of a Greek writer, dealing with the frightening experiences of a six-year-old girl, a unique exploration of female juvenile sexuality.

Beyond the Codices: The Nahuatl View of Colonial Mexico, Edited by Arthur J. O. Anderson, Frances Berdan and James Lockhart, University of California Press, $12.

The codices of the Aztecs, written in the Nahuatl language, dealt mainly with pre-Columbian legends and chronicles. This book goes beyond the codices, and gives us a vivid picture of Aztec life under Spanish rule, with translations from the Nahuatl of such records as wills, local council minutes, tax records, petitions and correspondence.

The Decapitated Chicken and Other Stories by Horacio Quiroga, selected and translated by Margaret Sayers Peden, illustrated by Ed Lindlof, University of Texas Press, $8.95.

Quiroga, Argentine writer, many of whose works have become Latin American classics, was a sort of combination of Poe, Kipling and Jack London. Here is a collection of some of his finest tales of fantasy, horror, death and adventure.

Kahitahah by Frances Lackey Paul, illustrated by Ric Munoz, ($5.95 paperbound). Facts About Alaska: The Alaska Almanac, ($2.95 paperbound), both from Alaska Northwest Publishing Co., 130 Second Ave. So., Edmonds, Wash. 98020.

Two fine books from the far north stories illustrating the life of Tlingit (Alaskan Indian) child in the late 19th century and an almanac filled with all sorts of information about Alaska.

Tribal Scars and Other Stories by Sembene Ousmane, Insdape Corp., 1628-1629 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, $2.50.

Beautifully wrought stories by a gifted West African writer about the cultural fetters which still shackle the people even in an Africa of independent nations.

The Life and Death of Leon Trotsky by Victor Serge and Natalie Trotsky, translated from the French by Arnold J. Pomerans, Basic Books, $10.95.

Victor Serge, distinguished novelist and historian of the Russian Revolution, and Trotsky's widow collaborate on an intimate biography of Lenin's colleague, whose murder in Mexico was carried out on Stalin's orders. An important closeup look at Trotsky.

EYE OF THE STORM is Bob Tapia's painting of Golden Hinde II, a replica of Sir Francis Drake's 16th century ship.

Shades of Drake! Golden Hinde!

Marine artist Bob Tapia, originally from San Fernando, now of Sausalito, tells us:

"Imagine a cool, breezy day in San Francisco with bay water churning slightly and the inevitable fog creating textures in the sky. It is the late 1570s and from the horizon, with billowing sails, a magnificent English ship glides into the bay. Her master — Sir Francis Drake; her name — the Golden Hinde."

Four centuries later Golden Hinde II, a full-scale replica of Drake's ship, sailed again into San Francisco Bay to be captured on canvas by Tapia. Now the California State Museum of Science and Industry, 700 State Drive, Los Angeles, is presenting Tapia's collection, commissioned by the Golden Hinde Co., Ltd., through Jan. 18.

Tapia's original oil paintings depict the life and excitement of the vessel, following her course through calm and storm, journeying through time to recreate the romance and adventure of the Golden Hinde II and her voyage. The exhibit also has examples of Tapia's fantasy boats and seascapes portraying the mysticism, drama and power of the sea.

AS A RESULT of her projects in textile conservation and research, and her participation in the Museum Studies Program at Long Beach State University, Mary Schoerer, a student in the art department, has been awarded a $12,000 Rotary International Fellowship. This handsome award will be used for study at the Courtauld Institute in London.

Constance W. Glenn directs the LBSU Museum Studies Program.

While a student, Schoerer served as an intern at Los Angeles County Museum of Art. She also was curator of the Motherwell portion of the LBSU Art Galleries exhibition, "Beyond the Artist's Hand."

MORE NEWS from LBSU: Alvin A. Pine, associate professor of art will give a lecture/slide program Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Lecture Hall 151 on campus.

Pine recently returned from a nine-month sabbatical trip to Afghanistan and Iran to study and observe traditional metalworking and jewelry techniques of native craftsmen. During this period, from September, 1975, through June, 1976, Pine also trekked in Nepal and Burma. His record of the sabbatical and his observations will make up the program which is open to the public without charge.

BEGINNING Nov. 15 and continuing through Nov. 19, San Pedro Art Association will have its fall show on display at the Municipal Gallery, 638 S. Beacon St., San Pedro, on the fifth floor. Hours are 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. The public is invited to vote for three of their favorite paintings. The one receiving the largest number of votes will be given a ribbon.

On loan for this show only is a painting, "La Baiana" (The Sweet Vendor), by Brazilian artist Lucia Perdigao. Competitive paintings by local artists will be judged by a panel of two professional artists and one community representative. Prizes will be awarded in three categories: oil and acrylic, watercolor, and miscellaneous. There also will be a grand prize for best of show.

Competition is open to all artists with only one restriction: the work must be original. Artists must bring their work to the gallery Nov. 15 between 12:30 and 5:30 p.m.

THE PUBLIC is invited to the opening reception for the third in a series of art exhibitions at Pomeroy Art Gallery, 5651 Lincoln Ave., Suite A, Cypress, Saturday from 3 to 10 p.m.

Both Fil Mottola and Vincent, whose work will be on display, will be present.

CAC grant aids inmates

A $10,000 award from the National Endowment for the Arts/Expansion Arts Program for 1976-77 has been made to Artists in Prison, Inc.

"This grant will enable co-directors Vickie Rue and Jeremy Blahnik to develop an original play with music with the women and men inmates of Terminal Island Federal Correctional Institutional Theater Workshop," said program director Susan Albert Lowenberg of Artists in Prison, Inc.

Part of the grant will be used for two 30-week theater games/improvisation workshops at the Neuropsychiatric Institute of UCLA, with emotionally disturbed and developmentally disabled adolescents. This part of the program will be led by Stephanie Liss and Julie Mannix of Artists in Prison, Inc.

THE TERMINAL ISLAND Workshop production will be performed by the inmates who also will do the costumes, lighting and graphics, April 25-30 at the Mark Taper Forum Lab.

"The Terminal Island Workshop/Artists in Prison, Inc. production of 'Convictions,' created and performed by inmates, was presented by the inmates at the Lab in June. It was one of our most important and stimulating projects," said Lab director Robert Greenwald. "We are looking forward to this second event with great anticipation."

Just completed by the Workshop, the six-performance run of Charles Gordone's Pulitzer Prize winning play, "No Place to Be Somebody," was seen by more than 1,800 inmate and outside audience members. It was presented inside the prison Sept. 10-14.

A SECOND GRANT, awarded to Vickie Rue of Artists in Prison, Inc. by the California Arts Council, also will be used for the Terminal Island project. Additional matching funds are being sought for both grants.

Other projects on the agenda for Artists in Prison, Inc., include a Theater Workshop at the California Institution for Women at Frontera, where the women will create a play to tour to other female penal institutions.

A two-year research and treatment project with adult alcoholics at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Sepulveda, two film projects and a paper documenting the state of the arts in social institutions in the United States await additional funding.

Polay programs season

Next Sunday at 8 p.m., Lakewood Philharmonia will open its sixth season under the direction of Bruce Polay in Long Beach City College Auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way. Concertmaster Stephen Bryant will appear as violin soloist.

On the program will be "Adagio for Strings" by American composer Samuel Barber and "Iberia" from "Images pour Orchestra" by Debussy.

Bryant will be featured in the "Violin Concerto in D-major" by Jean Si-belius and "Tzigane" (Gypsy Rhapsody) by Maurice Ravel. He recently was selected as concertmaster of the Los Angeles Young Musicians Foundation Orchestra and has been chosen to perform with the Pasadena Symphony.

Tickets may be obtained by writing to Lakewood Philharmonia, P.O. Box 487, Lakewood 90714. General admission for single concerts is $2.50. Season tickets are $12. Special rates apply for Lakewood residents.

Who's noticing?

Vi Coulter, left, seems oblivious to heated exchange between Jim Doherty and Laurella Daggett in scene from 'Sabrina Fair.' The three performers, all familiar to Southland theater-goers, appear in Samuel Taylor's Cinderella-type story at Long Beach Community Playhouse, 5021 E. Anaheim St., Fridays and Saturdays through Dec. 11. Call the box office for reservations.

80 LBCC musicians to take part in concert

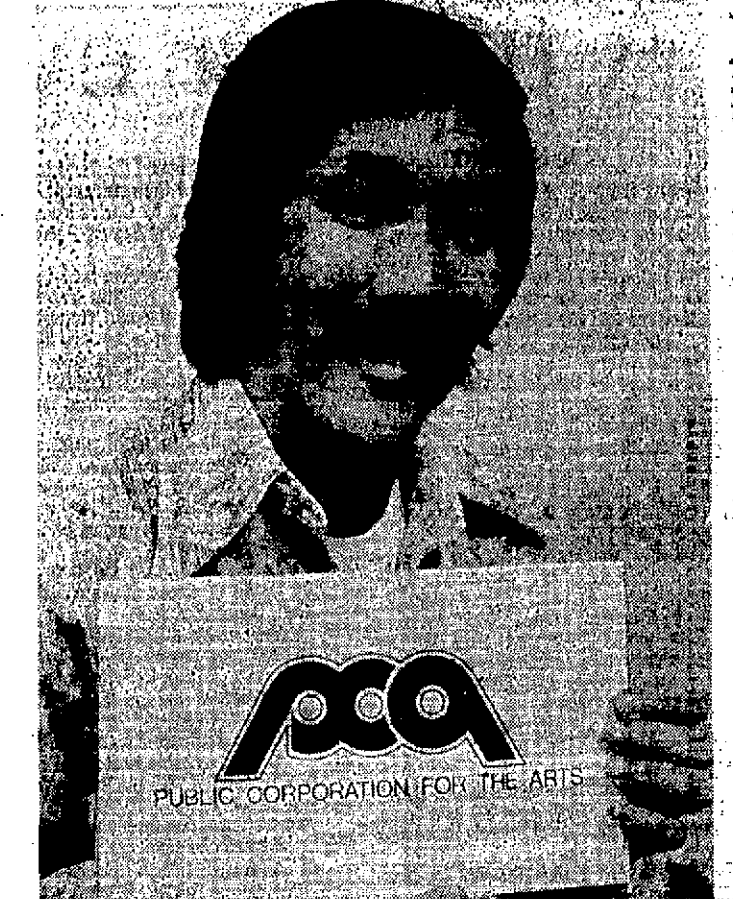

Compositions by Mozart, Schubert and Dvorak will be performed when Long Beach City College's orchestra department presents its first concert of the school year next Sunday.

Eighty music students will perform at 3 p.m. in the Liberal Arts Campus Auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way. The Chamber Orchestra will play Mozart's "Jupiter Symphony;" the LBCC String Quartet will perform the first movement of Schubert's "String Quartet in C-major."

After intermission, the LBCC Symphony will present Dvorak's "Carnival Overture" and "New World Symphony."

General admission is $2.

BEAMING with pleasure, Curtis Mizufuku displays his design which won Public Corporation of the Art's logo competition.

New logo design accepted by PCA

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

It was a triumphant moment Wednesday for Curtis Mizufuku when he received a certificate and a $500 check for creating the winning logo in Public Corporation of the Arts design contest, nosing out 34 other entries from professional artists and designers as well as students.

Mizufuku, senior graphic design major at Long Beach State University, entered the competition, along with the entire class of 15 students taught by professor James J. Van Elmeren.

"It's not often that anyone wins an award of this cash value," commented Councilwoman Eunice Sato as she made the presentation at a meeting of the PCA board of directors in the City Council Chambers.

Replied the artist, who will graduate from LBSU in May, "It gives me more confidence in my future."

Mrs. Sato is chairman of the City Council's Human and Cultural Affairs Committee.

The new logo will be used on stationery and in many other ways to identify Long Beach PCA.

AFTER ROUTINE announcements of future committee meeting dates, and a report on activities by Leslie Olmsted, director of development, John Watts, who heads the cultural survey committee, told PCA directors that the survey will be mailed immediately to the nearly 50 member organizations of the Congress of the Arts. The congress functions under the Public Corporation of the Arts. Follow-up interviews will be scheduled in December.

At the suggestion of director Laura Killingsworth, the board agreed that, if requested, it will mail the survey questionnaire to any cultural group in the area, whether or not the organization belongs to the Congress of the Arts.

The PCA will meet again Wednesday, Nov. 24, at 4 p.m. in the conference room of its headquarters, 130 Pine Ave. The session is open to the public.

L.B. Symphony concert Saturday

After its rousing, standing-room-only season opener Oct. 9, Long Beach Symphony is now holding final rehearsals for its second subscription concert.

This will take place Saturday at 8 p.m. in Long Beach City College Auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way.

Conductor Alberto Bolet has chosen an all-orchestral program. He will open the concert with Beethoven's "Symphony No. 3 in E-flat" (Eroica).

The symphony next will play "Dance of the Seven Veils" by Richard Strauss. To complete the bill, the conductor has selected "Ten Basque Melodies" by Jesus Guridi.

SEATING for the concert is limited because, for the first time, the Long Beach Symphony Association can boast of a sold-out season.

However, some seats are held in reserve and others are made available when season subscribers, unable to attend a concert, return them to the symphony office. These then are for sale to the public for that individual program.

It's difficult to deal honestly with alcoholism

Do you think alcoholism is an illness? That question was posed to me in a question-and-answer period following a recent public address. The woman who put the question to me thought more and more people considered excessive drinking as some kind of misbehavior rather than an illness. Certainly it can be an illness, and it can also

dr. walt menninger

mask other serious emotional problems. But the line between normal drinking and excessive dependency upon alcohol (alcoholism) is not easy to draw. After all, during any given month, one survey noted, 58 per cent of the population drink alcoholic beverages —

that's about 125 million Americans. Of those current drinkers, 62 per cent report having one or two drinks on an average day; 22 per cent have three or four drinks a day. Fourteen per cent, or roughly 17 million Americans, admit to having five or more drinks on an average day!

Excessive use of alcohol is a significant problem in this country. The substance is widely available, relatively cheap, and has the capacity to dull your judgment as you take more and more of it. It works like an emotional anesthetic, deadening anxiety and emotional pain.

The capacity of alcohol to reduce one's inhibitions makes it particularly effective as a "social lubricant" at cocktail parties. But this same quality is involved in the problems associated with alcohol — it continues to be the drug most associated with crime, violence, auto accidents, marital problems and child abuse.

WHAT MAKES alcohol abuse particularly difficult to deal with is the tendency of many people to deny their dependency upon it. People can get "hooked" on alcohol and be unable to see the degree to which it controls them, instead of vice versa. That is part of the "illness" of alcoholism.

The alcohol-dependent person is most reluctant to give it up, feeling great discomfort without it. He or she may strongly object to any accusation that the drinking is a problem. Thus the partner in a marriage can feel helpless about confronting the spouse with the criticism or suspicion of excessive drinking.

There is no painless way to cope with alcoholism. But there is an increasing number of good programs, many developed with the support of recovered alcoholics, to help people come to grips with the problem.

How can you tell if someone is an alcoholic?

There are a number of checklists available, but a recent study of the department of psychiatry at the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis found three questions would pretty well screen alcoholics:

Has your family ever objected to your drinking? Did you ever think you drank too much in general?

Have others ever said you drink too much for your own good?

These screening questions aren't foolproof, but nearly all (96 per cent) of the definite and probable alcoholics were identified by a "yes" answer to them. What about you?

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him in care of this newspaper. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in his column.)

Smoking adds to heart disease risk

Sixth in a series

By ALTON BLAKESLEE and JEREMIAH STAMLER, M.D.

It is so easy to do, and keep doing ... lighting a cigarette. It seems casual, debonaire, "satisfying." And it can become a compelling habit. It "scratches the itch" in your lungs that the smoking created in the first place, as one Swedish doctor puts it.

Cigarette smoking also gives you a two to six times greater risk of a heart attack than non-smokers face.

For nearly 25 years, that message has been becoming ever more clear.

Back in 1954, an American Cancer Society study of 190,000 men aged 50 to 69 rang a first loud bell of warning. Death comes prematurely to cigarette smokers, it found. About 25 per cent of these too-soon deaths occurred because of lung cancer. But about 50 per cent came about because of coronary heart disease.

Smoking, that study was saying, has twice the potential of stopping your heart as it does of giving you lung cancer.

Public attention and headlines on that study focused on the cancer rather than heart risk. Perhaps dying of lung cancer may have seemed scarier than being blotted out by heart attacks. That study, by Dr. E. Cuyler Hammond and Dr. Daniel Horn, has been supported and reinforced by study after study, in this country and elsewhere.

THE MESSAGE from them all is: Smoking hurts your heart and circulatory system. The risk is related to the number of cigarettes smoked daily, for how many years, and whether you inhale.

Men aged 30 to 59 who smoke about a pack of cigarettes a day run twice the risk of having a heart attack as non-smokers. And smoking more than a pack a day triples their chances, according to pooled results of five major studies of middle-aged men.

The cigarette influence on risk of having a fatal heart attack, compared with a non-smoker, is dramatized in figures from the American Cancer Society's study of one million Americans and their habits that affect health.

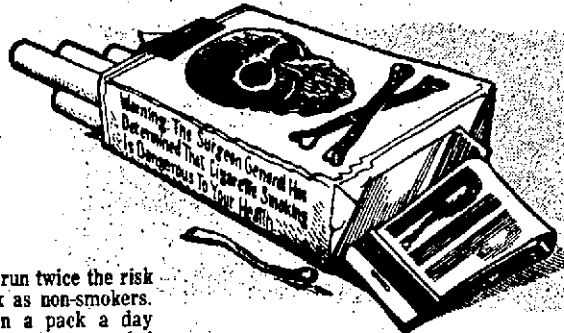

Take one example, men aged 40 to 50. If they smoked half to one pack of cigarettes a day, their chances of fatal attacks were 2.6 times higher than for non-smokers. One pack to two packs daily, the chances rose to 3.8 times higher. More than two packs a day, the risk was 5.5 times greater than for non-smokers.

Middle-aged women who smoke run about three times higher risk of heart attacks than women who don't smoke cigarettes.

The earlier one starts smoking, the higher becomes the relative risk of collision with a heart attack, various studies show. Young men and women are heading for trouble, with risk compounded by other factors, such as high blood pressure and high blood cholesterol.

Four autopsy studies have shown that atherosclerosis of the coronary arteries was more severe in habitual cigarette smokers than non-smokers.

WHEN SMOKERS abandon their habit, the risk goes down. Men who quit cigarettes soon begin to have the same life expectancy and freedom from heart attacks as men who never smoked. This is particularly true if they had quit smoking before having an initial attack.

With heart disease its major killer, the United States also has the highest per capita consumption of cigarettes in the world.

Consumption has seen-sawed. It dropped, briefly, after the first report in 1964 to the Surgeon General of the U.S. Public Health Service, which declared smoking is bad for health.

Subsequently came a ban on TV and radio advertising of cigarettes, and the printing of a warning on each pack of cigarettes saying smoking is hazardous to health.

Many people responded to the cautions. Some 100,000 American physicians have quit smoking, and most are advising their patients to do likewise.

And in the last 20 years, some 20 million American men have said farewell to cigarettes.

American women are doing less well on this score. Still smoking, they are developing lung cancer at a higher rate than ever before. And there is an additive effect between smoking and the contraceptive pill in increasing the risk of heart attack and other blood clotting incidents, especially after age 35 or 40.

All the people who have managed to quit have demonstrated it truly is a solvable problem, one intelligent way of reducing the risk of premature heart attack.

MEDICINE AND YOU Deters hepatitis activity

Interferon, an antiviral substance produced by the body, has been used to treat successfully a small group of patients with chronic hepatitis B.

Hepatitis is a disorder characterized by liver inflammation and other symptoms.

About 10 per cent of U. S. patients hospitalized with acute hepatitis B became chronically infected — that is,

ben zinser

they continue to carry hepatitis B substance in their blood.

It's estimated that 100 million persons in the world today are chronically infected with the hepatitis B virus and are therefore potentially transmitters of the infection. No effective treatment is available, and spontaneous recovery is rare.

Dr. Thomas C. Merigan and associates of Stanford University School of Medicine treated four persons. Laboratory-produced interferon from human white blood cells was used.

The patients were injected with interferon once a day either for one week or for a month or more. The interferon significantly reduced or eradicated evidence of hepatitis activity in all patients. The anti-hepatitis effect seemed to be long-lasting for those who were treated for a month or more.

Interferon is in limited supply and is very expensive. Drug companies are beginning to produce the substance in human cells grown in the laboratory, which could increase the supply and decrease the cost.

The research was supported by grants from the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases; the National Institute of Arthritis, Metabolism and Digestive Diseases; and the Division of Research Resources. Details are reported in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Help for asthmatics

Hypnosis is an effective adjunct in the treatment of asthma, but counseling is just as important, says a doctor.

Dr. David R. Collison of Chatswood, New South Wales, Australia, says that good to excellent results were obtained in 54 per cent of a series of 121 patients. All the patients who were improved said they felt better.

Trance depth proved to be an important factor. Results were good to excellent in 36 of the 43 able to go into a deep trance.

The figures were 27 of 47 of those who went into a medium trance.

Only two of those able to go only into a light trance had good or excellent results.

The report is in Clinical Psychiatry News, a medical newspaper.

Vitamin C for flu

The famed chemist, Dr. Linus Pauling, thinks the nation's $135 million swine flu vaccine program is unnecessary.

Dr. Pauling, a Nobel Prize winner, says that large doses of vitamin C can do just as well as the vaccine in protecting against influenza.

Up to 10 grams daily of the vitamin "ought to give 75 per cent protection — as good as the vaccine and without the side effects."

THE FORMULA

Lanolin cream gives skin protection

By and large, the wool we use for clothing and other fabrics has the lanolin removed from it. There is a notable exception however. Our Canadian friends do not remove the lanolin from some wool that is used to knit the heavy sweaters so popular in that beautiful cold country.

By leaving the fat in the wool, a high degree of

norman stark

water repellency results serving as protection against rain and snow. Here's a formula for a hand and face cream that contains lanolin as an important ingredient.

You'll need one-half teaspoon POWDERED SOAP, two tablespoons DISTILLED WATER, two tablespoons LANOLIN, and two tablespoons GLYCERIN. Mix the soap and glycerin into the water. Now add the lanolin with constant, rapid stirring. Water-soluble perfume may be added as desired. Use as you would any face or hand cream.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formula las are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Now you can obtain The Formula Book 2, the exciting follow-up to THE FORMULA BOOK, with all new easy-to-make formulas for personal, home, and pet care. Price $5.95. And we now have available both formula books in a handsome gift pack — two oversized paperback books in a durable slip case, ideal for early Christmas shoppers, $11.90. Please indicate whether you want Formula 1, II or the two-volume gift pack. Write to The Formula Book, 6700 Squibb Road, Mission, Kan. 66202.

AAUW sets breakfast

A pre-Christmas breakfast is planned Saturday from 9 to 11 a.m. at Bullock's Santa Ana, sponsored by La Palma Branch of American Association of University Women.

A demonstration of decorating with sheets and a style show using sheets will be featured.

Cost of the brunch event is $4 and reservations may be made with Sueko Nakayama, 17522 Lori Ann Lane, Cerritos, or Marie Maguire, 5792 Roxbury Court, Cypress. Deadline is Monday.

The workshop

Few Americans realize that the very first portrait of Santa Claus was painted at West Point Academy (of all places!) in 1837, by a faculty artist named Robert Weir.

He patterned his portrait of Santa after poet Clement Moore's description, and gave the world the well-known countenance. Since that time, Santa has appeared in many forms, but we think one of the cutest is our Santa train project, pictured below. Your home will be the talk of the neighborhood with this lawn display.

Construction of the train is simple. Just glue the three large, full-size pictures onto plywood, saw them out, and paint by numbers. To remove all guesswork, we tell you exactly which colors to use, how to glue the pictures the best way, and all other information you need. The display will last many seasons because it's all done with waterproof materials.

To obtain the C-5 Santa Train, send $4 (includes first class postage and handling) by cash, check or money order. To see our full selection of easy-to-build Christmas displays, write for a free brochure. Send all orders to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Press-Telegram Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

HANDY TIP: When working with craft projects, an old egg carton makes a dandy place to store pins, sequins, etc. The top section makes a nice compartment for storing glue and ribbon. If you have a do-it-yourself question, send it to Steve Ellingson at the above address.

Christmas has traditionally been a do-it-yourself season. That's why we created these clever, easy-to-build yuletide charms. The Santa, sleigh, reindeer, elves, snowman and angel are full-size patterns you trace onto plywood (each just three feet high). Note how the curvatures of the figures have been simplified so that even the novice handy person can saw them out in a jiffy.

They look delightful on the lawn or garage door, but are equally useful inside as Christmas card holders, fireplace displays or in children's rooms.

Over the centuries, Christmas decorating was traditionally a do-it-yourself thing... those green boughs our ancestors cut in the forest; the paper rings, popcorn and cranberry garlands that were strung in the homes.

That's why we think you'll like these four projects pictured above with actress Susan Oliver. They're home decorations that you can create, different from those hum-drum factory-made tinsel rings.

With these simple step-by-step directions and pictures (plus patterns), you can whip out one or all of these decorations in an evening or two. You could hang the pom-pom wreath on the front door, the gold star in the hall or entranceway. Then, the more casual looking burlap wreath could go in the den while the fruit and nut ring would be perfect for the kitchen or dining area.

All four projects utilize common materials like corrugated cardboard, dried materials, burlap, Christmas tree balls and white glue. The plastic fruits are available in most dime stores or florist supply shops.

To obtain instruction sheet 568 for all four decorations, send $2.50 (includes first class postage and handling) to the Van Nuys address.

A. The New Wharf Pottery, active in the Staffordshire district of England between 1878 and 1894, earned a fine reputation for its superior earthenware. Flow blue fanciers appreciate the firm's lovely Waldorf pattern which was marketed in a complete dinnerware service. The firm's trademark was usually accompanied by the pattern name, plus the full name or initials. It is still possible to acquire a complete set of the Waldorf pattern provided the seeker is possessed with equal amounts of patience and persistence. ### Ira corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn: I had a difficult bidding problem and I didn't fare well in the post mortem. I opened one diamond, LHO bid two clubs and partner bid two spades. This was my hand:

♠ J
♥ A K 5
♦ 9 8 7 4 3
♣ A 10 6 5

I didn't like any bids that I might choose so I decided to pass. Was my "crime" deserving of the heavy criticism that followed?

Dodged the Issue, Columbus, Ind.

Answer: A change of suit by an unpassed responder to the opening bidder is a forcing bid in all standard systems. Therefore, answer number one is that you violated the system by your pass. Did your crime deserve heavy criticism?

I cannot answer that question because heavy is a relative term. Suffice it to say that you should have bid something. I agree that no attractive bids were available, but I would choose two no trump as the best of a bad lot.

Dear Mr. Corn: Rubber bridge, no vulnerability, no part scores. The bidding goes as follows and I held:

♠ Q 9 7 6
♥ 7 6
♦ A 9 7 6
♣ Q J 4

East 1st Pass South 2nd Pass West 3rd Pass North 4th Pass

Should I have passed or should I have competed? I chose the latter and won. My opponents criticized my action and I'm wondering if they ate sour grapes?

Tenacious Tom, Milwaukee

Answer: In all such types of problems, one must ask, "What do I have to gain versus what do I have to lose?" In my opinion the chances for probably gain are minimal while the chances for a loss are more substantial. I pass and hope to bid game on the next deal.

Dear Mr. Corn: In some of your answers to bidding problems you suggest bidding games and slams for which I can visualize distributions that can defeat the ideal contracts. Why don't you show all 26 cards and then offer a small prize to anyone who can figure out how to beat the contract?

Seeking Prizes, Memphis, Tenn.

Answer: Most questions I receive are two handed bidding problems, i.e. "How do I reach six spades with these two hands?" I do not usually know what the opposing hands are and if I did, I wouldn't include them unless they were of importance to the reader.

My objective, and the objective of any efficient bidding system, should be aimed at reaching the optimum contract on the cards given.

True, one can think of distributions that may set a game or slam. But if one bids, in fear of disaster threatening every hand, he is destined to make many overtricks and to lose many rubbers.

The main idea is to reach the best contract indicated by the bidding.

Dear Mr. Corn: Rubber bridge and my opponent opens three spades. I overcalled three hearts and the trouble started. What is the proper ruling for insufficient bids?

Not Enough, Long Beach, N.Y.

Answer: The offender has two options. He may substitute the lowest sufficient bid in the same suit (four hearts) with no penalty, or he may choose any other bid including a pass (doubles and redoubles may not be substituted). If he chooses the second course, his partner is barred for the rest of the bidding.

Further, if the offender chooses a pass and his partner becomes the opening leader, declarer may require or forbid the lead of a specified suit.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Menu tasty now as then

Since we have just brought to a close the election campaign of this Bicentennial year, we are repeating a chef of the week recipe written by Senator George Deukmejian who has served 14 years in the California Legislature as assemblyman and senator. He came up with it during a coffee-break.

"The passing of the decade of the 1960's and early 70's, is definitely not an indication of the passing of the problems served to the State Legislature during the last 14 years. We have an especially sumptuous (if indigestion-causing) meal placed before us this session. As your representatives, we will be expected to move forcefully ahead, tasting and sampling various suggestions for solutions to the multitude of problems facing California.

"The Senate received an early recipe for success from the Senate Chaplain, Rev. Robert S. Romeis, who on the second day of the session offered this prayer:

"God of all grace, make us realize that good government, like good stew, doesn't just happen. Help us to see it needs a base of old-fashioned honesty, some balanced portions of common sense, a dash of daring, and more than a sprinkling of vision—all warmed up by a deep fire of love for all human brothers. Enable us to create this kind of government, so that Thou, O Lord, will not have to ask, 'What's cooking in California?'"

"The hors d'oeuvres have been a surprise, if not entirely appetizing to some. With the unexpected change in Senate leadership no one quite knows who the chief chef will be throughout the cooking period.

"THE SALAD will be made of crisp portions of

SENATOR GEORGE DEUKMEJIAN

Conservation Measures, underwater oil drilling will be a substantial base, filled with redwood slivers, slices of ripe commercial fisheries problems, state park enthusiasms, and topped with a heavy sauce of pesticide control—as well as pest control.

"The main course will be hot tax reform and budget battles, served on a bed of roasted school, finance and welfare problems.

"The piece de resistance will probably be dessert. We will be offered legalized marijuana 'grass pie' or a generous portion of fruit cake for consenting adults.

"It will be an interesting meal, and one that will prove filling for all. We expect to end the dinner party with bicarbonate of solved problems and salts of a better California, for all."

DEAR ABBY

Give discipline with love

DEAR ABBY: I know the libraries are full of books on the subject, but you seem to put so much into a few words. What financial aid, but Bob is still afraid of his mother. Or maybe I should say he's afraid of hurting her feelings, so he lies to her.

makes some kids good and some bad? In other words, is there a formula for raising good kids? Is it heredity or environment? — TRYING HARD

DEAR TRYING: That battle has been going on for a long time, but I'm inclined to be on the side of environment.

All kids need discipline. "Discipline" does not mean punishment; it means "teaching." Kids need to know how far they can go. And they don't really want everything they ask for.

Reward them when they're good, and deprive them of something they enjoy when they misbehave.

I don't believe in hitting a child. A little slap on the wrist (just enough to hurt his dignity) is all right. However, hitting a child hard enough to hurt him physically may rid you of YOUR hostilities, but it will only reach the child that violence is the answer to all conflicts.

Don't ever tell a child he's "bad." If he misbehaves, tell him you do not like what he DID; don't tell him you don't like HIM.

Give a child lots of love, and when he comes to you with a confession, don't be too hard on him.

DEAR ABBY: Another guy and I have shared an apartment for three years. (I'll call him Bob.) We're both adults and don't depend on our parents for even come home to sleep on Saturday night, but I can't tell his mother that.

I wish Bob would tell his mother the truth and get it over with, but he can't seem to do it. In the meantime I have to lie for him. So what's the solution? — HATES TO LIE

DEAR HATES: You don't HAVE to lie. You're not obligated to give Bob's mother any information. When she phones, tell her her son is out and you'll ask him to return her call when he returns.

DEAR ABBY: I am not a vain man, but I'm only 29 and I'm rapidly losing my hair. I suppose I could consider a hairpiece, but I'd rather keep what hair I have if it's at all possible. I've heard that taking female hormones can prevent baldness in men. It makes sense to me because you never see any bald women.

Have you ever heard of men taking female hormones to prevent baldness? Can it be dangerous? If it's okay, will I need a prescription to get it? — GOING BALD

DEAR GOING: Baldness is hereditary. And my consultants tell me that if men start monkeying around with female hormones, they'll have to start making brassieres in men's sizes. And yes, you DO need a prescription for it, so the word from here is to forget it.

Gourmet guide

thomey

ORANGE COUNTY has a surprisingly large number of fine restaurants. So, quite logically, many people drive from Long Beach to enjoy the cuisine in our neighboring county.

But the reverse is also true. A lot of Orange County residents drive regularly to Long Beach to enjoy our fine restaurants, such as Francois Manhattan, 1909 E. Fourth St. near Cherry Avenue. The Manhattan was established in the 1940s. For a great many years — long before the remarkable expansion of new restaurants in Orange County — its residents drove to Francois Manhattan and lavished praise on its beef Stroganoff and lobster thermidor, epicurean creations which were then very scarce in Anaheim, Santa Ana and Orange.

Now the younger residents of Orange County are making the same discovery their parents and grandparents made in the 1950s: Francois Manhattan is a treasure of a restaurant! Executive chef Charles Cutshaw, who's been at the Manhattan for eight years — is a Rembrandt or Matisse in the art of preparing the most scrumptious continental sauces. His Stroganoff, thermidor, veal piccata, cacciatore and scallopine sauces are achievements equal to those of the best restaurants in Paris, Rome or San Francisco.

Recently, an Orange County gourmet — youngish and smartly-dressed — left his table three different times in order to tell Pat Wise, the Manhattan's friendly general manager, how much he was enjoying the various dishes in his large table d'hôte dinner. Pat hears such enthusiastic compliments all the time. The Manhattan has such an off-the-beaten-track location that many who discover it for the first time say: "I came here by a lucky accident. No one would ever guess that there's such a marvelous restaurant in this part of town."

The Manhattan has an old-world decor and a great deal of old-fashioned warm hospitality. Its luncheons, from about $3, are so different from those in ordinary restaurants that knowledgeable people, such as physicians, engineers, businessmen and women executives, are continually bringing in their friends who quickly share their enthusiasm. The dinners, $5 to over $9, are huge, including tray of relishes, tureen of epicurean soup, salad or spaghetti; entree, potatoes or rice, beverage, ice cream or sherbet. There are nearly 30 table d'hôte entrees plus such specialties as flaming duckling, chateaubriand and beef grenadine for two.

The Manhattan's service is outstanding because many of the employees have been there so long that they have unusual affection for the place. Among the guests' favorites are maitre d' Joe Shavitz, Al Hardy, Roy Ghore, Bobby Ortiz, Dora Paul, Ruth Owens, Mickey Rowe, Shirley Zion and Cary Massaro. (The Manhattan is closed Mondays.)

ROBERTO SOLTERO JR.
Sizzlers have outstanding budget dining

THIS NAME IS Roberto Soltero Jr. He is handsome and young, with nearly nine years experience in the restaurant business.

Roberto is friendly, cheerful and works very hard. He is manager of the good-looking Sizzler Family Steak House, Del Amo Boulevard just west of Long Beach Boulevard. I like him very much because he is a young man in whom I have great faith and trust. I have recommended his restaurant many times.

It's important to get it on the record that I trust Roberto because his is such an unusual restaurant. The special all day today at that Sizzler Family Steak House will be steak-a-bob platters for two persons for $2.99, with the coupon that appears in this restaurant section. The coupon offer will be good day and night, today through Thursday.

The offer means that those steak-a-bob platters are approximately $1.50 each. That's an extremely low price. It is, in fact, the kind of low price that makes a restaurant columnist like me shudder in his boots. I am aware of how high food costs are in this era of continual inflation. How can any restaurant offer quality food at such a low price? Will people be unhappy with some of the orders? Will there be complaints?

I am willing to predict that there will be very few complaints this week at that Sizzler Family Steak House. I also know that if any guest is unhappy with his steak-a-bob platter, he will find that Roberto will make an immediate adjustment, provided, of course, that the complaint is justified. More important, I feel that the vast majority of families dining this week will be very happy with their platters, because Roberto can be trusted to offer unusual good quality for that low price.

The steak-a-bob is delicious because Roberto's kitchen staff cuts their own meats, a system that lowers costs and raises quality. The steak-a-bob consists of four pieces of ball-tip sirloin broiled with green pepper, pineapple, onion and cherry tomato. Each serving includes approximately six ounces of beef. Also included are fresh, baked potato or French fries and very good Sizzler toast. Other menu highlights include salads, pastries, beer and wine.

The Sizzler Family Restaurants are a different concept in dining out, offering the kind of steak, baby lobsters and king crab that are usually very high-priced in dinner houses. Through their coupon offers, the Sizzlers make it possible for families on budgets to enjoy such fine entrees at low prices. In keeping with those small prices, the Sizzler's portions are smaller. The coupons are also honored at the Sizzler restaurants at 4031 Candlewood St. and at 1430 E. Pacific Coast Highway.

Tough struggle

Florida's Jimmy Fisher battles Georgia's Ben Zambiasi (44) and Ronnie Swoopes (78) to get into end zone in first period of SEC game Saturday. Georgia overcame halftime deficit to win, 41-27.

Houston snaps long Texas streak, 30-0

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Houston quarterback Danny Davis scored once and hit a crucial fourth down pass to set up another touchdown and Lennard Coplin kicked three field goals as the 19th-ranked Cougars defeated 20th-rated Texas, 30-0, Saturday.

Arkansas rallies for tie

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Senior quarterback Mark Jackson sneaked the final yard for a touchdown on a tense 80-yard fourth-quarter drive to enable Baylor to tie the 12th-ranked Arkansas, 7-7, Saturday.

Arkansas, which was knocked out of the SWC leadership because of the tie, dodged an upset bullet when Lester Belrose of Baylor missed a 32-yard field goal with 16 seconds left.

Belrose had a 15-mile an hour wind at his back, but hooked the ball just left of the upright.

Arkansas now has a 5-1 record for the year and is 3-0-1 in SWC play. Baylor is 1-2-1 and 4-2-1.

Arkansas had apparently dealt Baylor a staggering blow in the defensive duel when freshman wide receiver Bruce Hay slipped behind the Bear secondary and caught quarterback Ron Calcagni's 41-yard scoring bomb late in the third quarter.

Hay was all alone behind Baylor cornerback Scooter Reed. Steve Litole added the extra point.

But Jackson countered by engineering a 13-play drive before 47,900 homecoming fans.

Texas Tech scared by TCU

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Rodney Allison staked unbeaten Texas Tech to two quick touchdowns Saturday and the fifth-ranked Red Raiders turned back a bold, gambling upset bid by Southwest Conference doormat Texas Christian, 14-10.

Allison winged a Brian Nelson to covered 88 yards for one touchdown and the junior quarterback then pranced three yards for another.

The heavily-favored Raiders (7-0) then spent the remainder of the sun-swept afternoon battling for their lives against a hapless TCU club that had lost seven in a row while

Georgia takes it away, 41-27 Florida tries a gamble...and loses

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — "When you gamble and don't make it, you've got to suffer the consequences," said coach Vince Dooley Saturday after his seventh-ranked Georgia Bulldogs smashed Florida, 41-27, taking advantage of a Gator gamble that failed.

Florida, leading 27-20, missed on a fourth-and-one try at its own 29. Six plays later, Georgia tied the game and controlled it the rest of the way.

"I could feel what Douglas felt," Dooley said, referring to coach Doug Dickey of Florida. "When it backfires, it's really trouble."

Georgia, amassing more than 500 yards in offense, rode the brilliant quarterbacking of Ray Goff to the victory that propelled the Bulldogs into the favorite's role for a berth in the Sugar Bowl.

Goff scored three touchdowns and passed for two others as Georgia erased the 10th-ranked Gators' 27-13 halftime lead.

"The Lord is No. 1 and we're No. 2," Goff said.

Meanwhile, a dejected Dickey remarked, "We were not out-played, we were out-coached. I made some dumb calls. They assaulted us and took the game away from us."

Dooley said he probably would have gambled also under the circumstances.

since he thought the momentum had changed following his team's 80-yard touchdown drive earlier in the third quarter.

But Erk Russell, Georgia's bald-headed defensive coordinator, disagreed, saying, "I thought it (the gamble) lost the game."

The loss was another frustrating blow for the Gators, who could have clinched their first-ever Southeastern Conference crown. It lifted Georgia to an 8-1 record, 4-1 in the SEC, and put Florida at 6-2, also 4-1 in the SEC.

Goff executed the option offense to perfection throughout, scoring his touchdowns on runs of nine, five, and one yards and hurling scoring passes of eight and six yards to Ulysses Norris.

When Goff wasn't picking the Gator defense to pieces, he relied on the hard running of Kevin McLee, who rambled for almost 200 yards.

Georgia's other touchdown came on a two-yard plunge by Al Pollard, who gambed just under 100 yards.

Florida had dominated the opening half with quarterback Jimmy Fisher scoring on a five-yard run and tossing touchdowns passes of six

and sixth-ranked Maryland to a 21-0 victory over Cincinnati Saturday.

The Terps, now 9-0 and winners of 13 in a row over two seasons, allowed Cincinnati just four first downs through the first three quarters.

Maryland missed a scoring chance following a fumble recovery deep in Bearcat territory early in the game, which was watched by scouts from the Orange and Gator bowls.

But the Terps drove 52 yards in 15 plays late in the first period, capping the march with a one-yard touchdown plunge by tailback Alvin (Preacher) Maddox.

The deepest penetration for Cincinnati (6-2) came in the fourth period when it moved the ball inside the Maryland 30. Penalties killed the drive, however, and the Bearcats turned the ball back to Maryland.

Kentucky tops Vandy

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Derrick Ramsey accounted for 202 yards total offense, scored one of two touchdowns and won most valuable player honors as he led Kentucky to a 14-0 victory Saturday over Vanderbilt.

Ramsey collected 118 yards rushing on 13 carries and passed for another 84 yards to push his total to 1,060 for the season, the first Wildcat to pass 1,000 since 1974.

He almost personally authored Kentucky's first touchdown, rambling on runs of eight and 31 yards before dashing the final 16 for the score.

Kentucky's other touchdown was a gift when Preston Brown, calling for a fair catch, fumbled a Kentucky punt on the Vanderbilt 17-yard line just before the third period ended.

Pepper's proud moment: Georgia Tech upsets ND

ATLANTA (AP) — "I told our players that if I live to be 1,000 years old I could never be prouder of a group of players than I am of these guys today," said Georgia Tech coach Pepper Rodgers after his Yellow Jackets upset 11th-ranked Notre Dame, 23-14, Saturday.

Tech (4-4-1) got a pair of touchdown runs by David Sims in the second half while its defense allowed

Notre Dame, a three-touchdown favorite, only 34 yards after halftime.

'Bama bounces LSU; bowl berth assured

BIRMINGHAM (AP) — Fullback Johnny Davis bulled through the Louisiana State defense for touchdowns of 13 and 58 yards Saturday to lead 15th-ranked Alabama to a 28-17 Southeastern Conference victory with scouts from eight bowls watching.

Davis, stung when demoted to the second team

earlier in the season, ran with a vengeance as the Crimson Tide raised its record to 7-2 and virtually

LSU, which last defeated Alabama in 1970, has a 4-3-1 record. Tailback Terry Robiskie set an LSU record by scoring the 25th touchdown of his collegiate career, but by then the Tide had put the game away.

Alabama led 14-3 at halftime and each team scored twice in the second half.

Memphis St. fumbles, falls to Vols, 21-14

MEMPHIS (AP) — Wingback Stanley Morgan scored twice on runs of one and six yards Saturday as Tennessee defeated Memphis State, 21-14.

Coach Bill Battle's Volunteers took advantage of a Tiger fumble early in the third period to turn what had been a Memphis State victory celebration into a wake.

Memphis State, hoping for a first-time ever victory over its cross-state rivals took a 14-7 lead into the dressing room at the half.

But the Tiger visions evaporated 11 plays deep in the second half when

Syracuse can't stop Navy QB

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Joe Gattuso scored two touchdowns and quarterback Bob Leszczynski came up with a big passing performance as Navy stopped Syracuse, 27-10, Saturday.

Gattuso, junior tailback, ran for 159 yards and caught seven passes for 39 yards to help Navy raise its record to 2-1.

Leszczynski completed 18 of 25 passes for 169 yards. One 12-yard pass to Phil McConkey was good for Navy's last touchdown of the game. At one point in the game, the Navy quarterback completed 12 consecutive passes.

Arizona State loses another, to Air Force

TEMPE (AP) — Air Force quarterback Dave Ziebart connected on a 22-yard scoring pass to Paul Williams with 10 seconds left in the game to give the Falcons a 31-30 come-from-behind victory over Arizona State Saturday night.

The Falcons entered that crucial fourth period trailing 27-12, but came up with three touchdowns as they increased their season record to 3-6 and snapped a three-game losing streak. The loss means that ASU coach Frank Kush will suffer his first losing season ever as the Devils are now 2-6.

Wake Forest rips Duke

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Mike McGlamry tossed two touchdowns passes to fight out Steve Young to lead Wake Forest to a 38-17 rout of Duke Saturday.

Wake Forest, now 4-6 overall and 3-3 in the ACC, capitalized on numerous Blue Devil errors, scoring after recovering one Duke fumble and two pass interceptions.

Five of the touchdowns came in the last quarter with Wake Forest scoring on an eight-yard pass from McGlamry to Young on the opening play of the period.

Fumble helps Auburn upend Mississippi St.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Cornerback back Henry Davison galloped 20 yards on a fumble return Saturday to launch Mississippi State toward a 28-19 victory over Auburn.

Davison's second quarter touchdown run put new life into the sluggish Bulldogs.

Mississippi State drove 64 yards for another touchdown before the half, with fleet halfback Daryl McGlasker sprinting the final three yards. They added single scores in the third on a one-yard run by fullback Terry Vitranio and in the fourth on a 13-yard sweep by McGlasker.

Rice rallies to nail SMU

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Tommy Kramer, the nation's leading passer, led Rice to two touchdowns in the final four minutes to rally the Owls to a 41-34 victory over Southern Methodist Saturday.

The Mustangs had pulled to a 34-20 lead at the end of the third quarter on the running of Arthur Whittington, who scored on runs of five and one yards and returned a third-quarter punt 50 yards for another touchdown.

Pitt rips Army, eyes No. 1 spot

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tony Dorsett is No. 1 in the college football world these days...and the rest of the Pitt Panthers may be about to join him.

Dorsett, the all-time rushing king, galloped for 212 yards and three touchdowns and smashed his ninth NCAA record Saturday in leading unbeaten second-ranked Pitt to a 37-7 victory over Army.

Meanwhile, in West Lafayette, Ind., top-rated Michigan was dropping a 16-14 shocker to Purdue.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Penn State's defense set up three touchdowns and a field goal with three fumble recoveries and an intercepted pass Saturday as the Nittany Lions thundered past North Carolina State, 41-20, for their fifth successive victory.

Two fumbles set up two short Penn State scoring drives in the opening quarter. Quarterback Chuck Fusina banged one yard

MIAMI (AP) — Quarterback E.J. Baker ran for one touchdown and passed for another Saturday night to bring Miami (Fla.) back from a 6-0 deficit for a 13-6 victory over Boston College.

No. Carolina tops Clemson

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Senior tailback Mike Voight scored three touchdowns Saturday to lead North Carolina to a 27-23 victory over Clemson.

The win was the Tar Heels' seventh in nine games and the second in three conference starts, while Clemson fell to 2-5-2 overall and 0-3-1 in the ACC.

North Carolina jumped to a 21-0 lead in the second quarter before Clemson put together single touchdowns in the second and third quarters and added a field goal early in the final quarter to cut the Tar Heels' lead to 21-17 before Voight scored a one-yard sneak to clinch the victory.

THE CHAMPION

Festive Mood, longest shot in the field (75-1) and the oldest contestant (7), was third, nearly two lengths behind L'Heureux, with Riot in Paris, fourth, four more lengths behind.

Honest Pleasure, clearly showing the effects of a long 3-year-old campaign, tired badly after Pellinore stormed past him and finished seventh, eight lengths back of the winner.

Spending the first two years of his career in Ireland turned 4-year-old King Pellinore into a first-rate, durable runner, his jubilant trainer, Charlie Whittingham, said after his colt had picked up The Champions $240,000 winner's share.

"Your horses don't break down in Europe," explained Whittingham, who took King Pellinore under his wing when initial owner Vincent O'Brien brought him back to the U.S. early this year. (Pellinore was purchased two months ago for $1 million by Fred Sahadi's Cardiff Stock Farm.)

"They race on nice, soft turf courses in Ireland, not on all kinds of tracks like we have here. Consequently, they stay sound and can race a couple years longer than they might if they began their careers in the U.S."

Whittingham disdained the talk that King Pellinore, whose last dirt race was several months ago, was strictly a grass horse.

"He trains well on dirt, so I had no doubts about his ability to run on the dirt today," said the trainer. "There were just more grass races on the schedule and that's why he has raced consistently on turf."

"But he doesn't like clods in his face. When he was getting some clods in the early stages today, he just went outside and carved his own path."

"I told Bill (Shoemaker) not to let Honest Pleasure open up too much on him, and he was all right down the backstretch. He started loafing when he got on the lead, but as soon as he saw that other horse (L'Heureux), he dug in again."

SHOEMAKER, WHO notched his record 7,150th victory and 118th in races of $100,000 or more value, agreed with the trainer.

"My colt was trying to ease himself a little near the wire, but as soon as Don's (Donald Pierce) horse came alongside, he put his head down and started pulling away," said the 45-year-old reinsman. "I knew I won it."

"It was a beautiful trip, laying right there behind Honest Pleasure, because I knew that horse was really making some fractions up front. I came up to him around the final turn still with a handful of horse."

"I guess we just can't beat that horse," sighed Pierce, whose last start with L'Heureux was a narrow loss to King Pellinore in the Oak Tree Invitational two weeks ago.

"We had early trouble and got far back. Then we made a long run and got right up to Shoe's horse, but never got past him. He really tries, but Shoe's horse is something else."

CRAIG PERRETT, imported from the East Coast with Honest Pleasure, admitted that Honest Pleasure's long campaign—he has raced almost constantly without rest for two seasons—had taken something out of the 1975 2-year-old of the year.

"He just didn't have the kick he did a few races back," said Perrett. "He just got tired today. But he makes them beat him if they're gonna. You don't win $300,000 (Honest Pleasure's two-year earnings) by not trying."

But thanks to his Irish "prep" work, King Pellinore tried just a little harder in the world's richest invitational handicap.

THE EMERALD ISLE and Shoemaker have another big chance for glory on Oak Tree's final day of competition today, as Tony Peja's stakes-winning Habington heads a field of 11 2-year-olds in the $132,150 Norfolk Stakes.

Under the conditions of the championship event for juveniles, all entrants will carry 118 pounds for the mile and 1/16 on the main track.

Habington, an Irish-bred son of Habitat to be ridden by Shoemaker, scored his initial stakes victory in the Sunny Slope in his last outing, Oct. 20. Earlier he was runnerup to Del Mar's top 2-year-old, Visible, in the Balboa Stakes and in the Del Mar Futurity.

Heading the opposition are Eastern invader Hey Hey J.P., fourth in the Laurel Futurity last weekend; Talc Of Power, runnerup in the Sunny Slope, and Replant, third in the Sunny Slope.

Completing the lineup are Transcription, Palopodium, Au Vol, Red Sensation, Paclad, Cathy's Rejeat and Incredibly Lucky.

If all 11 start, a record $79,290 will be awarded to the winner.

Post-time for the first race on getaway day is 12:30 p.m.

Calvin notes big difference in NBA: the checks don't bounce

"I guess if I'd wanted a big family I could have had a kid in every city—six stops, six kids. I just hope things work out that I can finish my career here." — Mack Calvin.

Mack Calvin noticed a big difference from the ABA in the NBA right away.

"You usually get paid on the first and 15th," one of the Lakers' newest employees says, "so I was surprised last week when it was only the 28th and they gave us our checks four days early. I couldn't believe it."

"Last year down at Virginia, my wife Gale would take a check to the bank and it would be 7 or 8 days before it was any good. It was embarrassing for her. They'd just give her the runaround."

That was life in the American Basketball Association, where Calvin lived the first seven seasons of his professional career, performing for five different franchises that always seemed to be falling out from under him.

Lacking national TV and big city roots, the ABA suffered from severe lack of exposure, so Calvin's earliest fans remember him only as a star guard at Poly High, Long Beach City College and USC.

But Mack remembers. "The only time people heard what was happening in the ABA was when the checks would bounce," Mack says. "It bothered me somewhat. Every year I would make the all-star team or first team all-league but we didn't get any recognition. All the good years I had, nobody even knew what team I was on."

CALVIN WAS drafted by the Lakers (14th) and the L.A. Stars out of USC in 1969. After playing his rookie season for the Stars, he was traded to Miami.

"I was there for two years and that team folded," he says. "I was put in the dispersal draft and went to Carolina. After two years, that team folded."

"Then the Carolina coach, Larry Brown, the assistant coach. Doug Moe, and general manager Carl Scheer and I went in a package deal to Denver."

That single season with the Nuggets was the happiest of Mack's career.

"We had a good team and I had a helluva year. I was in a good situation, it was a good town, a good franchise. I was really happy."

But Denver wished to acquire David Thompson, the all-America from North Carolina State, and figured Virginia would nab him first in the draft.

"Denver had to give up something to get his draft rights," Mack says, "and Virginia wanted me, so I was stuck again, going to a weak team."

CALVIN MISSED the first three months of the season with a knee injury. He didn't need surgery, but while he was out coach Al Bianchi was fired and Mack was hanging around not doing much, so

"They asked me to be the interim coach. I stopped after five games when my checks started bouncing."

There are other memories that will help him to appreciate the merger that saw four ABA franchises and assorted players absorbed into the National Basketball Association.

"When we were in Carolina and had to go to Memphis, we would leave at 8 o'clock in the morning and wouldn't get there 'til 2:30, 3 o'clock."

That's not bad time for a bus ride, Calvin is told.

"It was a plane trip," he says. "Piedmont Airlines—you know, a prop job—and we had six stops. A milk run."

"Those things were frustrating, but I was able to make some money. I've been fortunate that I've invested my money wisely and saved some. I'm just happy to still be playing basketball."

Rockets host West Covina

The Long Beach Rockets will call on their hot pitching duo — Greg Harris and Don Driskill — again this afternoon when they host West Covina in Southern California Winter League play at Long Beach City College, 1:30.

The two young pitchers combined on a two-hitter last Sunday as the Rockets edged the L.A. Lions, 1-0. Driskill worked the first three innings and hurled hitless ball. Harris, the former LBCC ace, took over in the fourth and shut the Lions out on two hits the rest of the way. En route to the win, Harris struck out eight and walked none.

The Rockets scored the only run they needed in the fourth when first baseman Monte Bollinger singled with one out and came home on leftfielder Dan Parma's triple.

Doug Stodgel will be behind the plate, Tony Muser in centerfield for the Rockets, who are 2-2 on the season.

Christiansen bitter, claims Trojans out to pour it on

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

STANFORD — The bitterness and the animosity linger on.

It is USC and Stanford. It is a fierce rivalry. Sometimes foul. And it always brings out the latent anger in some men.

Like Stanford coach Jack Christiansen, whose job on the Farm is considered by many to be in jeopardy.

"Christiansen was a man in control of his emotions in the wake of a 48-24 embarrassment Saturday afternoon but his inner anger was evident as he accused what he called the poll-conscious Trojans of pouring it on and rubbing Stanford's bloodied noses in the dirt.

"It must be great to inherit a national powerhouse," Christiansen said of first-year Trojan coach John Robinson, "then get another team down, jump on it and kick the (bleep) out of it.

"That must be good for the ego," he added acidly.

It was only four years ago that Christiansen and John McKay became embroiled in a dispute of highly publicized proportions.

While walking back to the dressing room McKay was accosted by some less than discreet Cardinal fans who hurled complimentary remarks about USC's black players.

McKay snapped that he would like to beat Stanford "by 2,000 points some day." When Christiansen was apprised of the remark he refused to debate the issue and would only say, "I don't want to get into a urinating contest with a skunk."

Since that time, football relations between the schools have been strained at best.

Even the departure of McKay to the professional ranks and the arrival of Robinson has done nothing to diminish the ill feelings.

"You can change coaches but that doesn't necessarily change the philosophy," Christiansen said in reference to USC's habit of running up scores.

Required to perform without the services of Ricky Bell, the Trojans stunned Stanford with the pass, Vince Evans throwing for four scores and Rob Hertel one.

"It didn't surprise me that they came out passing, especially after we heard Bell wouldn't play," Christiansen said. Then he added tersely, "and it didn't surprise me that they were still throwing when the score was 41-10."

Reminded that the Trojans had also inflicted crushing defeats on Oregon (53-0) and Oregon State (56-0), Christiansen said, "It was the same way today. But then, I expected it.

"If you're playing for

Asked to discuss the five personal fouls called on the Trojans, Christiansen was more than willing. "As far as I'm concerned," he said, "they only called about one-tenth of them. USC was holding on every play."

Are the Trojans a dirty football team?

"I wouldn't want to use that term," Christiansen smiled, "but you might."

But as upset as he was, Christiansen also was gracious enough to give the Trojans an accolade or two.

"They just physically beat us, both on offense and defense," he said. "There isn't any doubt they kicked the hell out of us, outmuscled us. They were just too tough and too quick."

Christiansen said the game's pivotal play came in the second quarter when it was still a respectable 14-3 game.

Savann Thompson of Stanford was standing at his own 13 and signalling for a fair catch when the ball ticked off his fingers and Steve Obradovich recovered for the Trojans. Moments later, Charles White was in the end zone and the Cards were left for dead.

Christiansen claimed Thompson was hit before the ball got to him.

"It's amazing when 50,000 people can see an error and the guy who is supposed to call those things can't. That was the play of the game, in my mind."

Thompson corroborated his coach's version.

"Somebody hit me on the knee," he said. "They (the Trojans) were yelling and screaming at me, trying to break my concentration and while I was waiting for the ball, somebody got me on my knee. They should have called it."

Thompson and fellow defender Rich Waters were also involved in another big play, Evans' 56-yard TD strike to Shelton Diggs on the third scrimmage of the afternoon.

"It was a foulup on our part," said Christiansen. "We were supposed to be in a man-to-man coverage and when you're supposed to stick with your man."

"Rich was supposed to hollar if they went deep," Thompson explained. "I didn't hear him."

That was the beginning of a bad and bitter day for Christiansen.

When it was over he said, among other things, of course, "I'm hoarse, I have a cold and I want to die."

Under the circumstances, it seemed like a good idea.

SC OUTBOMBS STANFORD—

Robinson said USC's defense was "great."

The Trojans extended their streak of holding the opposition without a touchdown to 11 quarters before Stanford quarterback Guy Benjamin punched over from the 2 on the final play of the third quarter.

"Stanford got 24 points, but only 10 when we had our people in there," noted Robinson.

USC picked off four Stanford passes, cornerback Ricky Odom grabbing three and safety Dennis Thurman the other.

"Benjamin took a peek at the man he was going to throw to when he lined up behind the center," said Odom. "I just followed his eyes when he was setting up, and just looked the ball into my arms."

Although he wound up with respectable statistics (16 of 32 for 144 yards), Benjamin was only 6 of 7 with two interceptions in the first half when the Trojans ran away with game.

Freshman Charles White, filling in for Bell, ran for 136 yards in 23 carries and scored twice.

"Ricky said he wished he could be out there," said White, "so I tried to do what I could to make up for his absence. He told me to squeeze the ball and run, and I did."

Evans said the Trojans "won it for Ricky Bell and Mike Carey."

Carey is a reserve cornerback who is scheduled to undergo surgery early next week. He has Hodgkin's Disease.

"It's a sad thing," said Evans. "It put kind of a special touch on the game."

USC scored twice in the first three and one-half minutes.

It took the Trojans only three plays after the opening kickoff to get their first, Evans throwing a 57-yarder to Diggs, who had gotten behind Stanford defenders Savann Thompson and Rich Waters.

On the first play after the next kickoff, the Cardinals got cute, and paid the price. James Lofton's pass off a reverse was intercepted by Odom at the Stanford 42, and the Trojans didn't blow the opportunity.

Five plays after the interception, Evans threw a 21-yard scoring pass to Diggs, who was given strong blocking by tight end Bill Gay in his race for the end zone.

Down 14-0, the Cardinals regrouped. Mike Nichel ran 44 yards to the USC 10 on a fake punt and, after three plays had advanced the ball only to the 9, Nichel kicked a 26-yard field goal to cut the Trojan lead to 14-3.

USC manufactured a break early in the second quarter. The Trojans grouped around the Cardinals' Thompson as he prepared to field a punt at the Stanford 13. They yelled and waved their arms, causing Thompson to fumble. Steve Obradovich recovered for USC, amidst a claim by the Cardinals that Thompson had been bumped on the fair catch.

Five plays after the recovery, White dove the final two yards for a 21-3 lead.

On the first play after the kickoff, Odom intercepted a slant pass to Stanford's Tony Hill at the Cardinal 26 and returned it to the 15.

Evans passed nine yards to split end Randy Simmrin for a touchdown. Late in the second quarter, the Trojans went 80 yards in six plays, Evans tossing a 23-yard scoring pass to Diggs in the corner of the end zone. Walker's kick was blocked, but USC had a 34-3 halftime advantage.

The Trojans extended their lead to 41-3 in the third quarter after Thurman's interception set them up at the Stanford 8. White ripped up the middle for the last three yards.

Benjamin capped an 80-yard drive with a two-yard run to cut the deficit to 44-10 on the last play of the third quarter, but early in the fourth period Hertel connected on a 16-yard pass to flanker Mike Robinson to finish off a 65-yard USC drive.

Reserve quarterback Mike Cordova led the Cardinals to two touchdowns against USC reserves in the fourth quarter.

With Michigan beaten by Purdue Saturday, Robinson was asked how he would vote in the coaches' poll this coming week.

"You have to stay with a team that's unbeaten," said the USC coach. "I'll probably vote for Pitt, UCLA and USC, in that order."

Asked if Pitt's weak schedule would keep it out of the No. 1 spot in the polls, he said: "No, Pitt will get a chance to lose. They'll play a good team in a bowl, and they still have to face Penn State."

"Don't forget, Pitt has beaten Notre Dame."

When it was noted Georgia Tech had beaten the Irish Saturday, Robinson gasped.

"Are you kidding? Well, I guess I don't sound so profound after all."

"Don't forget, Pitt has beaten Notre Dame."

When it was noted Georgia Tech had beaten the Irish Saturday, Robinson gasped.

"Are you kidding? Well, I guess I don't sound so profound after all."

Ed isn't A royal performance yet over — even if king had hair sticks

By JOHN SPEAR
When last heard from, I was complaining about a local performance of a very forgettable Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "Allegro."

Some of you may wonder what kind of performance of R&H might elicit a favorable response in this quarter. The answer will be found at Jordan High auditorium in the Long Beach Civic Light Opera's current production of "The King and I."

In the first place, this stands as one of the best of American musicals. Secondly, the CLO performance is at worst adequate and, in most respects, excellent.

The orchestra, under conductor Robert Billings, was well-rehearsed and did well by the fine score. The acoustics were good, with the exception of one loudspeaker that sounded as if it had succumbed to the swine flu.

The pivotal role of Anna was in the capable hands of Kathy Davis. Her clear voice did well by the British accent, and the security in her acting grew with the evening to a positively scintillating "Shall We Dance."

Burton in film version of 'Equus'

Richard Burton is starring in the film version of Peter Shaffer's prize-winning stage play "Equus."

The filming is under way in Toronto under the direction of Sidney Lumet, who directed "Murder on the Orient Express" and "Dog Day Afternoon."

Burton played the role of Dr. Martin Dysart for 12 weeks on Broadway. Peter Firth, who created the role of the disturbed young man, also stars.

Where the drummer is at right now is rock. It wasn't always that way.

"I started out in 1938 playing country-western music," Cassidy said. "Then it was polka, and then Dixieland and then the early forms of jazz. Later it evolved into the big band jazz sound."

THE BAND is trying to stage a comeback on the strength of its latest album, "Farther Along," a typically diverse work in which four of the five original members play together for the first time since a 1971 split.

It's the group's eighth album and, according to some critics, not its best. The old man of the skins bristles at the criticism.

"It's a worthy piece of music — it stands up for itself," Cassidy said. "We are human beings affected by everything around us, just like you are. What we record is dictated by the times and where we are at the time."

Ron Lyle no match for Young

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jimmy Young put his youth and speed to good advantage in winning a unanimous decision over Ron Lyle in a 12-round heavyweight bout Saturday.

Young, 28 and third-ranked in the heavyweight division, controlled the fight after an even first round with hard left jabs and punishing body work. Lyle, 34 and ranked fourth, is known for his knockout punch, but was unable to come up with one against a smoother, quicker opponent. The 34-year-old Denver boxer never had Young in trouble.

New backpacking course to start

Ready to put your backpacking gear away and forget it until next spring? Don't! Alpine guide Frank Ashley, who teaches the backpacking class at the El Dorado Nature Center, not only is planning another series of five classes, but also has a number of weekend trips from now until Christmas. His first trip of the late fall season began Saturday and will end today.

He has others planned for the weekends of Nov. 13-14, 20-21, Dec. 4-5 and Dec. 18-19. The weekend trips are planned for novices and experienced backpackers. They are not duration contests and the elevation gains are slight. Each trip starts at 8:30 a.m. Saturday and finishes shortly after 4 p.m. Sunday. Cost per person for the two-day weekend is $17.50.

As for the new series of classes, the dates are Nov. 17 and 24, Dec. 1, 8 and 15. All of those dates are Wednesdays and the hours are 7 to 9:30 p.m. The classes will be held at the El Dorado Nature Center, and they are designed for beginners as well as experienced. Cost is $10 for the series, and Hal Boley and Art Toth, of the Nature Center, emphasize that payment must be by check or money order to the Long Beach Recreation Commission. No cash will be accepted.

Ashley, who lives in Culver City, does not conduct the trips for the City of Long Beach, but rather on his own, and any information about those trips may be had by writing him at P.O. Box 291, Culver City 90230. His telephone number is 633-7821.

ASHLEY HAS BEEN AN ACTIVE backpacker and mountain climber for 18 years and he teaches classes throughout the Southern California area. His summer trips include journeys to Alaska, Ecuador and British Columbia.

The first night's course consists of discussions of equipment, its selection and care and the "10 essentials." Food, cooking, stoves vs. wood fires, types of stoves, cooking gear, menus and lightweight foods available are subjects for the second week. Map and compass reading are discussed the third week.

Then come camping and hiking techniques, trip plans; regulations and permits, check lists and places to go. In the fifth week, he teaches how to avoid mountain dangers, survival techniques and a wrapup of the course.

The Nature Center has two films scheduled for this month. Walt Disney's Mysteries of the Deep will be shown at 1 p.m. Saturday, and Terwilliger's Bay Tidelands will be shown at the same hour on Saturday, Nov. 20. Admission is free. There are no films scheduled for the Thanksgiving weekend.

Those of you who have never visited El Dorado Park Nature Center and all of its surrounding area are missing one of the most beautiful spots in this city. There are lakes, waterfowl and high-sprouting fountains. Also, starting Nov. 8, the Department of Fish and Game plans to begin stocking the large lake with rainbow trout. Plants probably will continue every other week through the winter and early spring.

RICH ROBERTS—

"But you know, I've got to be the hard-luck guy in the world. Every place I go, the franchise is either folding up or the owner is selling out. I read in the paper this week that Jack Kent Cooke is going to sell his team. I've got to be the curse. There's no question about it."

HE IS KIDDING. He hopes he has settled down to live year-round in his Baldwin Hills home. His and Gale's only child, Christy, will soon be 5 and starting school.

"She was born in Florida," Mack says. "I guess if I'd wanted a big family I could have had a kid in every city—six stops, six kids. I just hope things work out that I can finish my career here. This is where I wanted to play."

Calvin did not get off to the best start with his new teammates. In a Sports Illustrated discussion of the Lakers two weeks ago, Mack was quoted as saying, "There isn't really much talent here."

"I don't even remember saying it," he says. "Even if we had a terrible team I would never say that."

"I think we're working together. It's a different system with different coaches. When you have a player like Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar), all the players have to try to blend their talents around him. I think that's what Jerry (West) is trying to do."

"There's been a lot said about the fact he was a perfectionist, which is still true. You might make a simple little pass and throw it away. He gets kind of upset on little things like that."

"This is a different situation for me—the first time I haven't been able to start. I think Jerry would like to play a lot of different players. Certain coaches play seven basic people, but he's talking about 9 or 10 playing night in and night out, which is good."

"It doesn't make any difference to me. I just want to play and contribute. I think the days are gone when I'm going to average 20 points, especially on this team with Kareem. You have to play a different role."

CALVIN AVERAGED 19.9 points in the ABA. Despite his lack of height—he is 6 feet, 1/4 inch tall—he was an inside scorer, driving and jumpshooting. He won't miss the ABA's three-point play because he seldom shot from long range.

"The month I've been playing here I've found the big difference is inside in a radius of 12 or 15 feet from the basket," he says. "It's really congested, like a web in there. You've got big forwards, big centers constantly picking you up."

"The forwards here are 6-9, 6-10 and 220-225. Over there the forwards were 6-5, 6-6. That's a tremendous difference. You could drive and had easy shots inside. But I think, in time, I can adjust. I've always been a slow starter. I'm just beginning to get confident now."

SO MACK is back, and he would like to say hello. "Some of the people I haven't seen lately and who are still in the Long Beach area have been a tremendous help to me," he says.

He mentions his former Poly High coaches, Bill Mulligan and Willard Foerster, and former LBCC coaches Chuck Kane and Bill Barnes.

Calvin was all-CIF on a CIF champion at Poly, all-state on a state junior college champion at LBCC.

"I go back to Long Beach all the time," he says. "I go to the Recreation Center and work with the kids from Poly."

"I've been out playing ball in the so-called big leagues all these years, but there are people that helped me get there and I want them to know I haven't forgotten."

Undefeated, but hurting slightly LBCC women cagers roll on

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

For the past five weeks, the Long Beach City College basketball team has been knocking down opponents like a row of stacked dominoes. Only a series of injuries has bothered the Vikings.

Monday, LBCC will test its strength again in a non-league game at Golden West that may well provide an indication of how well the Vikings will fare in the conference playoffs during December.

Coach Donna Prindle ranks the Rustlers as a "tough, solid team. They use a zone press and score well from the outside." Golden West's only loss this season has been to Fullerton, defending conference champion.

One of the leading players in GW coach Judy Garman's strategy will be Katie McLean, 6-foot center. Katie is averaging of 17 rebounds and 17 points through the first 11 games. Forward Sharon Campbell follows with a 12-point average.

The match-up is the beginning of a month-long series of contests which will keep LBCC away from home until Dec. 6.

The Vikings, undefeated this year, used every player Wednesday and still rolled up an 80-31 win over Santa Monica.

Santa Monica never really challenged LBCC which used a zone press during the first half to step out to a 42-20 lead. Switching to person-to-person coverage during the second period, the Vikings held their opponents to 11 points.

Toni Bell shot an incredible 80 per cent from the floor, putting in 17 points. Rhonda Henderson followed with 15 and Kathy Kellis and Brenda Pinesett added 12 each. Brenda took rebounding honors with 13.

Joan McLean, recovering from an injured knee, played only briefly. Adrienne Hamilton, who suffered a knee injury during the second game, faces surgery and will be out for the remainder of the season.

PREP PATTEN — It may all come down to Tuesday's varsity volleyball game between Wilson and Lakewood to determine the Moore League championship.

If the Lakers can hand the Bruins their second loss, the title will be shared by Wilson, Lakewood and Millikan with 8-2 records. As it stands now, Millikan's win over Lakewood Thursday gave the Bruins, once again, the sole possession of first place and put the Lakers back on equal footing with the second place Rams.

It took two wins by Wilson against Poly and Compton last week to keep the Bruins number one. Coach Terry Stevens says these victories were earned against "much improved" opponents.

Millikan, which got off to a slow start, this year will be monitoring the results of the Wilson-Lakewood game while trying for its second win over Poly.

Scores in the Millikan-Lakewood match were 15-11, 15-8, varsity; 15-7, 16-14, JV's. Lakewood split games with Compton taking the varsity match 15-9, 15-9, and losing to the Compton JV's, 17-16, 7-15, 15-5.

If the Bruin varsity tennis team can come up with one more win Tuesday against Lakewood, the Moore League title will be assured with a perfect 10-0 record. Thursday Wilson swept Compton, 18½-4, varsity, and 7½-0, JV.

The Lakewood varsity and JV tennis teams recorded wins against Compton and Millikan. The tallies were 20-2½, varsity; 7½-0, JV, vs. Compton, and 12½-10, vs. Millikan.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

varsity, 4-3½, JV against Millikan. The Lancer JV's hold a firm grasp on the Moore League lead.

A STUNNING 3-0 loss to Pierce College may prove just the stimulation the LBCC field hockey team needs for its impending clash with East L.A. Tuesday, coach Anita Miller reasons.

Sitting in third place in the league with a 2-2 record, the Vikings need a victory against East L.A. to maintain their standing.

LBCC went into the Pierce match two up on the school for the season. Coach Miller made no excuses. Her team just wasn't playing up to par.

WITH ONLY one of her top four women fencers returning this year, Long Beach State fencing coach Jo Redmon for the most part is building her team with new talent.

Back in the top spot is third-year veteran Robin Huddleston, who was second in the conference and ninth in the Westerns last year. In the second position is Gabby DePaz, who fenced last season for LBSU and is "coming along fine this fall." Filling the other spots are Wendy Pukerton and Judy Czyprian.

Jo may be adding a new fencer to the roster at the semester break — Lisa Seranton, who plans to transfer from El Camino, Lisa, who won a recent prep meet over 35 entries, may be challenging for the number one or two positions.

The only home fencing event this year will be Dec. 3 when the men's and women's teams compete against Cal State Fullerton, and L.A. State.

Upcoming for the men's squad are bouts in men's foil, Nov. 13, at UCLA and in the epee, Nov. 20, at UC San Diego. Rich Fitzharris, who will be fencing No. 1 in foil, recently won a touch C meet. He is also No. 1 in epee for LBSU. Ed Farrell, No. 2 in

Dick will bounce back if series takes pratfall

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

Dick Van Dyke could never be a politician. He's too straightforward. The other politicians would drum him out of the corps.

Why, if he were running for office and it looked as though he didn't have a chance to win, he'd probably come right out and say so.

That's the impression I got of Dick during an interview in the commissary of NBC Studios in Burbank the other day.

Dick's new comedy-variety series, "Van Dyke and Company," is in trouble. It has been finishing third in its time period behind ABC's "The Streets of San Francisco" and CBS' "Barnaby Jones."

Rumors have been rife, as rumors are apt to be, that "Van Dyke and Company" may follow the already canceled "Gemini Man" in a fast disappearing act from the NBC lineup.

But, now, NBC has shifted the variety series, starting this week, from the 10-to-11-p.m. Thursday slot to the 8-to-9 time-period the same evening, replacing "Gemini Man."

So what does Van Dyke think about the show's future?

"I don't think we're going to make it," said Dick.

Just like that. Why, it jarred me almost enough to make me drop my glass of iced tea.

EVEN THOUGH Dick feels his show would have appeal to youngsters, he doesn't think the shift to the "family hour" will help his show's ratings. "The competition will be even tougher there — against 'The Waltons' and ABC's 'Welcome Back, Kotter' and 'Barney Miller' — than it was when we faced the two action-adventure series," said the lanky star with the bright blue eyes and grayish hair.

For a man whose TV series may be going down the tube before long, Van Dyke was in remarkably good humor during his lunch break from rehearsals. He came across as the unassuming nice guy he appears to be on the tube, and he didn't badmouth anybody for the scheduling woes that have plagued his series.

Because the first presidential debate aired on Thursday night, Sept. 23, Van Dyke's show premiered on Monday night, Sept. 20. The following week, it was pre-empted by the two-hour premiere of "NBC's Best Seller: Captains and the Kings." Three weeks later it was bumped by a World Series game, and last week it was knocked off the air again by a two-hour "Captains and the Kings" show.

"A guy came up to me the other day and said he'd seen my special," Dick said, emphasizing the word special. "That's what it seems like we've had — some specials, rather than a series."

IT MIGHT be enough to drive some TV stars to drink, but not Van Dyke, who's a recovered alcoholic, as he disclosed a couple of years ago while making the TV movie "The Morning After," about a drunk.

He's taking everything in stride, and knows there'll be plenty of other performance opportunities for him if the series fails.

"If we're canceled, it'll be a first for me," he said. "In 25 years of television, I've never been canceled. But it should be a good character-building experience, I suppose."

Dick has been one of the big names of TV comedy since 1961, when "The Dick Van Dyke Show," one of the tube's best-ever situation comedies, began its five-year run on CBS. He won Emmy Awards three of those years, and the series made a major star also of a young lady named Mary Tyler Moore.

Van Dyke, who has starred on Broadway and in a number of popular movies, did a second situation comedy series, "The New Dick Van Dyke Show," for CBS for three years, from 1971 to 1974.

He realizes it is extremely tough to make a success of a comedy-variety series on TV these days, since, as he puts it, "most viewers seem to prefer a story." He wanted to do a variety series that would be "different," with emphasis on sight-gag humor, to take advantage of his great physical comedy abilities.

"HAS THE series worked out as well as you had hoped?" I asked Van Dyke.

"Yes, everything has worked out even better than I had hoped," came the reply. "We've had a good chemistry, a good working atmosphere. We wanted to do mime particularly the is joined each week by the five-member L.A. Mime

DICK VAN DYKE ... moving to new time slot

Company, as well as by guest stars), and on every test we've done on the show, mime has rated first.

"I don't regret trying a variety show, and I feel we've done a good job," he added. "And if you're going to have a choice of doing a good series or getting a good rating, I guess I'd pick having a good show."

The series, incidentally, has drawn considerable praise from critics, as did the "Van Dyke and Company" special of last fall, which led to the series.

Carol Burnett will be Dick's guest star on the show scheduled for this coming Thursday night, at 8 on Channel 4, and he disclosed that he and Carol are planning to team up for four weeks this winter on the stage in "Same Time Next Year" at the Huntington Hartford Theater in Hollywood.

THE ACTOR has a commitment from NBC to star in a sequel to "The Morning After," which aired on ABC in 1974 and gained him an Emmy nomination for his dramatic performance as an alcoholic.

The emphasis in the new TV movie will be on institutional treatment available to alcoholics, Dick said, adding that it probably won't be about the same character as the earlier movie. "In fact, I'm toying with the idea of not playing the patient, but rather the therapist," he said.

Van Dyke said he has been offered a number of TV dramatic series, "but I think I'd get bored to tears doing a dramatic series."

How about a situation comedy? Replied Dick: "It would have to be something really different."

Dick and his wife, Marjorie, who was his childhood sweetheart, live in San Diego (Coronado Island), and also own a ranch in Arizona. They have two married sons and two daughters aged 21 and 15.

"What have been the most satisfying years of your career?" I asked Dick, who has hit the 50 age mark.

He thought a moment, then replied: "Now, I'd say. You worry less as you get older. I just enjoy it now. When you're young, the ratings pressure can drive you up the wall."

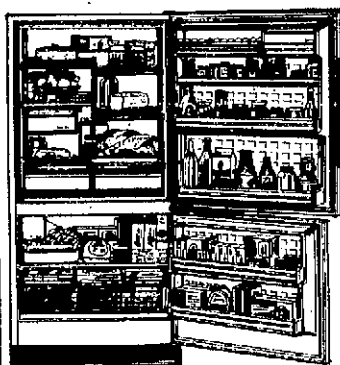

"Five years ago, I thought I could retire. But now I feel I'd get bored. I really enjoy my work."

That's good news for the rest of us, who can expect to see plenty of the talented performer in the future, regardless of how long his present series lasts.

Reiner's film role not Meathead type

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

"Extras on the set pass me by all day, then later in the afternoon they ask me, 'Are you really Rob Reiner?'"

He is really Rob Reiner. But workers on the set of "Fire Sale" have to be told, because he looks more like a bond salesman than Mike (Meathead) Stivic of the television superseries "All in the Family."

"They shaved off my mustache and cut my hair short," said Reiner as he lunched on location food a few yards from the Hollywood Freeway. "I wear three-piece suits through out the picture. That's the way the character is supposed to be: Straight. He is a very conservative fellow who is trying to cut the umbilical cord with his domineering mother."

THE MOTHER is Kay Medford, out of "Funny Girl." "Bye, Bye, Birdie" and "The Dean Martin Show." The father is Vincent Gardenia, from "Bang the Drum Slowly" and "The Front Page." The other son is Alan Arkin, who is also directing "Fire Sale." The plot defies description, relating to the current trend of nutty comedies.

The 20th Century-Fox movie was shooting one day at the ordinarily sedate Queen of Angels Hospital in midtown Los Angeles. Reiner, a thinking man's comedian, seemed reluctant to be interviewed, claiming misconstrued quotes of the past. But he relaxed somewhat amid the smoggy roar of the freeway.

"Fire Sale" is his first feature film since beginning "All in the Family" six and a half years ago.

"I'VE HAD other offers, but nothing that would be worth going to Norman Lear and saying, 'Hey, can you let me off for three weeks?'" said Reiner.

"For this script I did it. It wasn't easy to arrange, because Carroll (O'Connor) gets four weeks out of the show, and Sally (Struthers) gets four weeks. For me to be written out of three weeks took a lot of doing. But Norman said, 'If anybody deserves it, it's Rob.'"

Indeed, Reiner and Jean Stapleton have been the steady members of the cast while O'Connor and Struthers have conducted their contract disputes. Reiner can remember being off only a couple of shows, one being the pilot that spawned "Maude."

LIKE HIS father, Carl, Rob Reiner is a complex talent, unwilling to be typed in a single area, yet not rebelling against success. He declines to bad-mouth "All in the Family."

"They're a good group of people," he said, "and I can appreciate them because I have been in some bad companies before. I've had nothing but good times on the show, and last year was more fun than ever before."

"Everyone was relaxed. We had a new director, Paul Bogart, who is an absolute joy, sensitive and understanding. He is lower-keyed, and hence his approach added different values to the characters. He was also good at finding new camera angles in the apartment, not an easy thing to do after six years."

REINER remarked that he was unhappy with "All in the Family" only in the early weeks. O'Connor and Stapleton had made two previous pilots with different performers as Mike and Gloria. Hence the daughter and son-in-law were ill-defined for the talents of Struthers and Reiner.

"For the first six-seven weeks I struggled to get the character," Reiner commented. "After that it was easy."

How much longer will "All in the Family" last? "As long as Carroll wants to do the show, I guess, and he has expressed a desire to go for the eighth season, the one after this. I'd like to do it this year and maybe next; it depends on what's going on for me."

AMONG the possibilities: Two development projects for series with CBS and NBC written with Phil Mishkin. Reiner plans to direct, write and act, a resolve he reached as a 17-year-old at Beverly Hills High School.

"My father did nothing to influence me," he said. "He would probably have discouraged me, since he knew comparisons would be made to him. That was a problem. I made my own personal hell trying to do it on my own. Later things fell in place."

CLARK GABLE as Rhett Butler, Vivien Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara, Leslie Howard as Ashley, Olivia de Havilland as Melanie and Hattie McDaniel as Mammy have major roles in "Gone With the Wind."

'Gone With the Wind' finally reaches tube

"Gone With the Wind," panoramic Civil War drama, winner of 10 Academy Awards including the 1939 citation for Best Picture, will have its much-anticipated network television premiere in two parts — on NBC as a "Big Event" from 8-11 to-night and from 9 to 11 p.m. Monday on Channel 4.

The internationally acclaimed movie drama, which re-creates Margaret Mitchell's best-selling novel of southern life, during the strife-torn war years and the postwar era, features an all-star cast including Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland and Hattie McDaniel.

The film, produced by David O. Selznick and released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was, for nearly three decades, the top-grossing box office attraction in the history of the movie industry.

Miss Leigh won the Best Actress Oscar. She was selected for the role of Scarlett O'Hara following a nationally publicized two-year talent search involving 1,400 actresses.

Hattie McDaniel, who won the Best Supporting Actress award for her portrayal of the devoted Mammy, became the first black performer to be honored by the Motion Picture Academy.

Others who won Oscars for their work on this film were: Victor Fleming (Best Director), Sidney Howard (Best Screenplay), Lyle Wheeler (Best Art Direction), Hal Kern and James Newcomb (Best Film Editing) and Ernest Haller and Ray Rennahan (Best Color Cinematography). Producer Selznick received the Academy's Irving Thalberg Memorial Award.

Among the film's most memorable scenes are the spectacular burning of Atlanta; the tragic view of thousands of wounded soldiers lying unattended at a railroad station; and the tempestuous love scenes between Scarlett (Leigh) and Rhett Butler (Gable).

For a generation afterward, people talked about the scene where Rhett leaves the plantation and tells Scarlett, "Frankly, my dear, I don't GIVE a damn!"

Does your family's health coverage provide for catastrophic illness?

Does it give you up to $300,000 in protection?

Does it provide good basic coverage as well?

If you've answered "no" to any of the above, Coronet 365 for individuals and families is the Blue Shield plan for you.

Coronet 365

Coronet 365 is a completely new plan from Blue Shield for individuals and families that offers up to $300,000 in benefits in case of catastrophic illness or injury. If you go to any of Blue Shield's 18,000 physician members, they will accept Blue Shield payments as payment-in-full for their covered services. Some people talk about Government Health Insurance for catastrophic coverage . . . but Blue Shield leads the way by making it available to you — now! Here are some of the benefits: FULL PAYMENT for covered outpatient surgical services and in-hospital medical and surgical services of member physicians (for up to 365 days in the hospital!) UP TO 365 DAYS IN THE HOSPITAL WITH: 80% of charges for semi-private room and 80% of all covered in-hospital extras, such as drugs and x-rays. PLUS! After you meet the annual qualifying requirement for Catastrophic Coverage, such services as: doctors' home and office calls, prescription drugs, complications of pregnancy, private duty nursing, rental of hospital beds and wheel chairs, artificial limbs, insulin, and disabilities such as mental disorders.

ACT NOW! There's much more to Blue Shield's Coronet 365 than we can possibly tell you on a single page. So fill out the coupon below and mail it in for more information about Coronet 365. Give yourself and your family peace of mind . . . today!

ARE CONCRETE SWIMMING POOLS OBSOLETE?

Judge for yourself!

This is a SAN JUAN, fiberglass, one piece swimming pool being lowered into the prepared ground! A beautiful, full-sized pool with a permanently smooth, non-abrasive finish that algae simply cannot invade! Only one of the reasons why up to 90% of old fashioned cement pools' maintenance effort and expense can be eliminated.

The SAN JUAN POOL comes in several sizes (shown here, 16 by 34 feet); equipped as you wish and priced demonstrably fairer than a plaster/concrete pool. It's longer lasting, too, because fiberglass, 12 times stronger than concrete, is forever. Colorful, it never needs painting! Moulded in the plant in one piece, in one incredible process, the SAN JUAN has a structural, yet flexible strength that has withstood four major earthquakes. Its smooth finish makes contact a pleasure, not a scratch. Much faster, easier to install... before investing in any pool get the complete story, including color photos of local installations. Get the concrete pool story, too... it only makes ours better!

P.S. Off season, winter prices now in effect! Save importantly

CRITICS' CORNER

By LEE WINFREY
Knight News Service

PHILADELPHIA — "Serpico" reminds me of the Bible's Gadarene swine. Of all the new television series this fall, no other has plunged so quickly from a level of potential quality down into a pigsty of muck.

I find it impossible to decide whether the Oct. 29 segment of this crime series was most reprehensible because of its preposterous plot, its contempt for women, its psychotic violence, or its lubricious vulgarity. So I'll just tell you a few of the things that happened in the episode entitled "Prime Evil."

1. Frank Serpico was assigned to catch a loan shark named Alex Demico. So he went to an illegal gambling joint operated by Demico, showed his police badge at the door, and was admitted to shoot dice. He quickly lost $23,000.

I laughed out loud. The number of gambling joint operators who would willingly let a policeman they did not know inside to gamble, and thus easily gather evidence, is probably smaller than the number of people who thought Lester Maddox would be elected president of the United States this year.

The number who would let an ordinary policeman have $23,000 in credit is probably smaller.

2. Serpico was told that his contact inside the Demico operation would be a policewoman, Detective Sgt. Marion Wagner. She was living with Demico, functioning as his mistress.

I could scarcely believe they were trying to peddle such a plot line. In the first place, police departments do not assign policewomen to sleep with suspects in order to get information. The women would justifiably object, and doubtless the husbands of those who are married would object loudly also.

In the second place, if Sgt. Wagner is making love to Demico, why would Demico be needed on the case at all? How could he get closer to Demico than Sgt. Wagner already is, or into a better position to gather evidence?

3. The dialogue involving Sgt. Wagner was, almost without exception, cheap vulgarity. Demico's name for her was "Panty Hose." In the middle of the show, after calling her a "cheap slut," he watched while a henchman raped her.

Afterward the script added a contribution to the old myth, which so many women are fighting against these days, that rape victims enjoy being assaulted. Sgt. Wagner told Serpico, "It was like I wanted him to do it. Like I needed it."

But she went back on the case. Serpico asked her, "He turned you out (of his house)? How are you going to get back in?" Sgt. Wagner replied, "The way he wants it: On my knees."

4. After working over Sgt. Wagner, and earlier having his henchmen break the hands of a physician who was behind in his loan payments, Demico set out at the high point of the show to kill Sgt. Wagner with a crossbow. He told his chief plug ugly, "C'mon, you can pick up the garbage."

Demico got his comeuppance, though. Sgt. Wagner jumped him from behind and killed him with karate. With a sigh of relief, she fell at show's end into Serpico's embrace.

Richard Danus deserves special mention for this episode. He wrote it.

The censors at NBC deserve special mention, too. They passed this trash for public broadcast.

Morita still laughs

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (U)—On the final night of "Mr. T. and Tina" on ABC, Pat Morita, star of the canceled show, was at an awards dinner here for James Komack, whose company made the program.

You wouldn't know the series was dead by looking at Morita. He laughed, cracked jokes, gave no hint of gloom. His only regret is that, as a guest speaker, he didn't have enough time for just one more joke.

"I would have said many people offered me condolences for being off the air," he said. "And that people asked me why they took 'T. and Tina' off. I had no answer. So I went to Mr. Komack."

"I said, 'Jimmy, why'd they take us off?' He says, 'Bad ratings.' I say, 'Why'd we get bad ratings?' He says, 'Well, we were on in a very bad time slot. People were still up.'"

THUS SPAKE Pat Morita, stand-up comedian, actor, native of Berkeley, Calif., and a performer now getting his nightclub act back in shape while doing a guest TV shot now and then.

A series cancellation has been known to cause a star deep depression, not to mention repossession of the family Rolls-Royce. But Morita shrugs off his program's demise as part of the hazards of show biz.

He said he hadn't expected the ax to fall so quickly, despite the comedy's low ratings, but added: "Hey, things happen. It's that kind of business."

SPECIAL

DEAN MARTIN'S RED HOT SCANDALS OF 1926
(4), 8 p.m. — Dean hosts a nostalgic look at the 1920s in this special featuring guests Jonathan Winters, Dom DeLuise, Hermione Baddeley, Abe Vigoda, Georgia Engel, Charlene Ryan and the Goldiggers.

THE BIG EVENT (4), 9:00 p.m. — "Gone With the Wind" (Pt. II) (see "Sunday special")

MOVIE (7), 9:00 p.m. — "The Chase," Marlon Brando, Jane Fonda, E. G. Marshall, Angie Dickinson, Robert Redford. An innocent man convicted of murder escapes from the pen and heads for home in Texas. The sheriff of his home town tries in vain to avert impending tragedy. The reason: the convict's wife is having an affair with the son of a cattle baron.

In two years, Manson could be your next door neighbor.

Shocking as it may seem, in 1978 Charles Manson can apply for parole. Should he get out?

Be watching tonight as Eyewitness News Reporter Chuck Henry begins an intense four-part series on Manson.

You'll hear Paul Crockett, the only man Charlie was afraid of and tried to kill three times. Dr. Louis West, a brainwashing expert, will talk about "programmed killers" and how our society is breeding more Mansons every day.

Finally, you'll see the latest interview with Charlie himself, as he describes his own grisly philosophy.

Don't miss this fascinating Eyewitness Closeup. After all, in two years Charlie and his friends could be the family next door.

TELEVISION

- ABC AFTER-SCHOOL SPECIAL (7), 4:00 p.m. —
 "P.J. and the President's Son." Lance Kerwin stars in the dual role of Preston and P.J., the story of identical 15-year-olds, one an American President's son, and how they trade places. A modernization of Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper."
 MOVIE (4), 8:00 p.m. —
 "The Great Waldo Pepper." Stars Robert Redford in the title role as a barnstorming stunt pilot in the 1920s, whose thirst for action and determination to make up for his wartime defeat by a German air ace culminates in an all-too-real rematch staged as part of a Hollywood movie.
 MOVIE (2), 9:00 p.m. —
 "Death Wish." Charles Bronson stars in a drama of one man's vendetta against crime in the streets. (Due to mature theme, viewer discretion advised.)
THEATER IN AMERICA (28), 9:00 p.m. —
 "Taming of the Shrew." The American Conservatory Theatre of San Francisco presents this comic Shakespeare classic.

INTRODUCING LIFE-SIZE COLOR TELEVISION

Advent's VideoBeam® 750 Brings Football (And Everything Else) To Life in Your Living Room.

Advent's VideoBeam® 750 is a totally new kind of color TV set. Its 6-foot diagonal measure picture is more than 15 times the size of the picture most people watch at home.

It brings you TV as you've never seen it. Alive. Involving. In the room instead of in the box.

The VideoBeam 750 is a unique two-piece TV set. Its console unit (about the size of an end table) projects the picture onto a separate screen.

It's as easy to operate as a standard color set. And its big picture is bright and clear. You can watch in ordinary light in an ordinary room.

Until you see Advent color television, you really haven't seen television.

THE BIBLE
 Says

J. T. SMITH

DEATH-BED SALVATION

In the past week, I have received two letters wanting to know what I believe about a person who is "saved but cannot be baptized." It is obvious that I have still not made my point clear about one being saved according to the teachings of the Bible. According to my understanding of the Scriptures, there is no person saved who has not been baptized!

This, I am sure, brings up a number of questions. However, I have some questions also. Where, after the Lord's death, burial, and resurrection did He ever promise to save anyone until he had obeyed all that the Lord had commanded him to do? What did the Lord command?

BELIEVE - BAPTIZED - SAVED
 Mark 16:16
 Notice where the "saved" is in this passage. It comes after baptism.

REPENT - BAPTIZED - REMISSION OF SINS
 Acts 2:38
 Now where is "remission of sins" promised in this passage? It comes after baptism.

ARISE - BAPTIZED - WASH AWAY SINS
 Acts 22:16
 Please observe where "sins being washed away" is said to take place in this passage. It is after he was told to be baptized.

In all of these passages where baptism is commanded, salvation always comes about as a result of one believing, repenting, and being baptized. I do not know of any time that one was said to be saved, have the remission of sins, or is said to have his sins washed away before he did all of these things. By what authority, then would I have the right to tell a person that he is saved before he is baptized? I would have none. By what authority do other preachers tell people they are saved before they are baptized? And, where is the passage that so states that one was said to be saved, receive remission of sins, had his sins washed away before he was baptized? I am still waiting for the passage.

'Animal World' gets 2nd Burrud

Is being the son of a famous father a help or hindrance?

Ask this question of, say, any given dozen of today's young people, offspring of celebrities, and probably half will tell you it is a hindrance, embellishing their opinions with grandiose statements about making it on their own.

These opinions are not shared by John Burrud, 23-year-old son of Bill Burrud, pioneer producer-host of "Animal World," and many other successful television series. John has become an important cog in his father's Bill Burrud Productions Co., gradually developing multiple talents as a cameraman, writer and producer.

"IN THE fiercely competitive world of show business today everyone who hopes to get anywhere needs at least some help, and not to accept help from someone because he happens to be your father is simply being unrealistic," says John, adding: "Of course, what you do after a helping hand is extended is entirely up to you."

When "S.O.S. Save Our Sharks" hits the nation's television screens as an episode of the syndicated "Animal World" series in November, young Burrud, who conceived, wrote, produced and filmed the program, will take a big step forward towards an identity of his own with the TV public.

The episode, narrated by the elder Burrud, will startle many. Indicative of John's independent thinking, it will depict the shark not as a lurking, lethal menace, but mainly in its truer and less understood light as an invaluable aid in combatting oceanic pollution and helping maintain a stable balance within the ecological system of the sea.

"I DECIDED this was a show I badly wanted to do because I am greatly opposed to sharks being slaughtered as a so-called 'sport' or simply for trophies because hunters feel sharks are evil," John said.

"After all, of 300 shark species only about 12 have been recorded as dangerous to man. Of course, while I consider this particular program my baby I had to get my father's OK to do it."

John got his first real taste of the sometimes fascinating world of television when at age 15 he accompanied his father to Africa on a "Walking Safari" which also happened to be the title of the "Animal World" episode Bill Burrud was filming at the time.

"I found the elephants, lions and other magnificent creatures of the veldt much more exciting than high school. I never liked homework and books, anyway, and had no desire to go to college. Soon after that I asked my father for a part-time job," explained John.

"If you've made up your mind, you're going to have to start work with me as low man on the totem pole," Bill told his son.

TODAY, young Burrud no longer has to sweep the floor and run errands.

Ironically, John's aversion to books and study disappeared about the time he would normally have been entering college, and John enrolled for night courses in cinematography and business administration.

Young Burrud says his main goal is to eventually produce a major feature film "because there's so much junk geared strictly to sex and violence on theater screens today." "S.O.S. Save Our Sharks" is due to air "Animal World" airs Nov. 27.

Jerry Lewis
a host on NBC's
'First 50 Years'

Jerry Lewis, who with Dean Martin made his TV debut on NBC in 1950, has been set as a host for NBC Television Network's "The First Fifty Years," the special saluting NBC's 50 years of broadcasting, to be on "The Big Event" Sunday, Nov. 21, from 7 to 11:30 p.m.

Lewis joins other hosts including Johnny Carson, Dean Martin, Gene Kelly, Angie Dickinson, George C. Scott, Gregory Peck, Jack Albertson, Freddie Prinze, Bob Hope, David Brinkley, Joe Garagiola and Don Meredith. Orson Welles will narrate the four-and-a-half-hour special.

Jerry, who made his professional debut at the age of 5, zoomed to national acclaim when he and Martin teamed in Atlantic City's 500 Club in 1946. In less than a year, their salaries went from $350 to $5,000 a week.

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

JUDITH CAMPBELL IN 1960

Q. I am amazed reading about the extramarital affair the late President John F. Kennedy had with Judith Campbell. Where were the assignations held—in the White House? And did not Kennedy realize that Judy Campbell was reporting each time to the late Sam Giancana, head of the Chicago Mafia? Really! This whole thing is so shockingly sordid it is beyond my comprehension. Why didn't the Secret Service do something about it? Surely they must have known that Kennedy was playing around?—Mrs. J. B. W., Philadelphia.

A. Before he was elected President, John F. Kennedy was introduced to Judith Campbell by Frank Sinatra in Las Vegas. Later, in Miami, Sinatra introduced Judith Campbell to Sam Giancana of the Mafia. He introduced Giancana as Sam Flood. For many months the showgirl did not know Giancana's real name or his position as leader of the Chicago crime syndicate. Judith Campbell's first assignation with Kennedy, then a U.S. Senator, took place in the Plaza Hotel, New York City, about March 7, 1960. After Kennedy was elected President in November, 1960, further assignations took place in the White House and elsewhere. The Secret Service, charged with guarding Kennedy, surely knew of the liaison but was powerless to prevent it, since extracurricular sex activity did not endanger Kennedy's life.

Reportedly, Judith Campbell told Giancana of her affair with Kennedy. Giancana did not mind sharing her favors with the President. He may well have thought of using his knowledge to blackmail Kennedy at some later date. The CIA also made the monumental error during that same period of enlisting Giancana and his late henchman John Rosselli in efforts to assassinate Fidel Castro of Cuba.

FBI agents subsequently wiretapped Giancana, learned about his and Kennedy's sexual relationships with Judith Campbell. They reported it to J. Edgar Hoover. Director Hoover in turn reported it to Robert Kennedy, then Attorney General of the U.S. Hoover also notified President Kennedy of the Giancana-Campbell relationship. Kennedy thereupon severed his friendship, not only with Judith Campbell, but with Frank Sinatra as well.

Q. What is the marital status of heavyweight boxer Muhammad Ali? Didn't one of his girlfriends just give birth to a baby by him?—Morton Ingliss, Chicago.

A. Khalilah Ali, married to Ali for nine years, filed suit in Chicago recently for divorce on grounds of mental cruelty and desertion. They have four children. Ali acknowledges that he is the father of an illegitimate daughter born Aug. 6, 1976, to his long-time traveling lover, Veronica Porche. The baby girl, Hana Yasmeen Ali, was born in Berrien (Mich.) General Hospital, according to a parenthood certificate filed with the Berrien County registrar of deeds.

VERONICA PORCHE AND MUHAMMAD ALI

Q. I've been told that people in the hometown of the late Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery speak disparagingly of his memory. True?—Victor Newmarket, New York City.

A. They consider Montgomery "cheap and niggardly" in Bentley, England. Montgomery, who died there in March, 1976, at age 88, left $270,000 in his will. Of that sum, he bequeathed only $165 each to five members of the Cox family, who spent their entire working lives in his service. Apart from this bequest, the Montgomery estate went to Monty's son, the new Viscount of Alamein. Michael Cox, Monty's chauffeur, said of him: "Monty never gave more than he had to. What he left our family is a paltry sum. It will pay for a few rounds of beer."

Q. Is it true that the two highest-paid baseball players are both black?—Ron Gamble, Birmingham, Ala.

A. Hank Aaron, now retired, was paid $240,000 in 1976 by the Milwaukee Brewers, Dick Allen $225,000 by the Philadelphia Phillies. Both are black and reportedly the highest-salaried players in big league baseball last season.

Q. Has anyone in this country made more money from broadcasting than Lowell Thomas, who is 84? I am told he is worth $100 million. True?—K. G., Pawling, N.Y.

A. Lowell Thomas has earned millions as a broadcaster, but it was not until the mid-50's—when he helped found Capital Cities Communications—that he could amass his present fortune, estimated at $10-15 million. Capital Cities owns some 14 radio and TV stations, also newspapers in Fort Worth, Tex., Pontiac, Mich., and Belleville, Ill. Capital Cities also owns Fairchild Trade Papers, which publishes Women's Wear Daily, Home Furnishings Daily, and other trade papers of that ilk. At last count, Lowell Thomas owned approximately 175,000 shares of Capital Cities stock, worth more than $8.5 million.

Q. Why has Susan Ford moved out of the White House—because she is tired of Secret Service surveillance?—Monty Campbell, Charlotte, N. C.

A. Susan Ford and three other sophomores from Mt. Vernon Junior College for Women have moved into an Alexandria, Va., townhouse, the basement of which houses the Secret Service persons assigned to guard Susan. So long as she is the President's daughter, Susan cannot escape the Secret Service. None of the Ford children particularly likes living in the White House.

With Prince Bernhard in Dutch, God Save the Queen!

by Lloyd Shearer

Holland's Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard watch a parade. He had to resign defense and business posts for his role in Lockheed bribery case. However, the government will raise his 1977 pay 16 percent to $355,400 and Juliana's 7 percent to $1.7 million. The money is taxable, in contrast to salaries paid British Royalty.

THE HAGUE, HOLLAND.

Hurt deeply by the scandal involving Prince Bernhard, 65, who played hanky-panky with Lockheed, Northrop, and other U.S. aircraft manufacturers, Queen Juliana, 67, is expected to abdicate the Dutch throne next year.

She probably will be succeeded by her daughter, Crown Princess Beatrix, 38, whose image and reputation contrast sharply with those of her shy and kindly mother.

Beatrix is considered haughty, snobbish, imperious, sharp-tongued, and not nearly as popular with the Dutch people as Juliana, who, after living in exile in Canada and London, ascended the throne in 1948. The Dutch people came rapidly to love this hefty, plain-looking, bicycle-riding queen.

Juliana, who dislikes pomp and pageantry, is nervous and self-conscious in front of photographers. No beauty, she gave birth to four daughters—one half-blind—and the Dutch people have always empathized with her solemn and stolid ways. They may have heard about her husband's reputation as the secret playboy of the Western World, but they made no big thing about it—at least not until the Lockheed scandal broke.

Now they are faced with the prospect of a new queen Beatrix, a graduate of the University of Leiden, who set off a furor in 1966 when she—like her mother—married a German. He is Claus von Amsberg, who served during World War II in one of Hitler's panzer divisions. When Beatrix and Claus were married, many Dutch executives boycotted the ceremony, and the Dutch people demonstrated in the streets of Amsterdam.

First male heir

However, von Amsberg and Beatrix produced a son, Prince Willem-Alexander, the first male heir to the Dutch throne in 77 years. Moreover, von Amsberg is a low-key personality. And the people seem to have warmed to him because he learned to speak fluent Dutch and stayed clear of internecine politics and business affairs.

There is a possibility that Crown Princess Beatrix may not accept the Dutch throne in 1977 if her father, Prince Bernhard, is subjected to continued humiliations by further disclosures of his many past activities. In that case, her son, Prince Willem-Alexander, 9, would become king of the Netherlands and a regency would rule until Willem became 18.

Crown Princess Beatrix, who may succeed Queen Juliana next year, with husband Claus von Amsberg and sons Constantijn and Willem-Alexander (front).

CONGRESSIONAL AGE PROFILE

Senior citizens of this nation have a powerful lobby in the U.S. Senate. Although those Americans over 65 constitute a little more than 10% of the country's population, their members make up 24% of the Senate.

A study of the 94th Congress, which adjourned last month, reveals that less than 12% of the House members are senior citizens, which reflects approximately the national proportion.

Herewith an age breakdown of the 94th Congress:

Age	House	Senate
25-34	24	1
35-44	90	11
45-54	157	33
55-64	110	31
65-74	43	18
75-84	7	6

In the 94th Congress, the median age in the Senate was 56, in the House, 50.

NAVY SPY SHIP

No one wants the Glomar Explorer, the salvage ship used by the Central Intelligence Agency to recover half of a Soviet submarine in 1974.

As a result, the U.S. Navy has taken over the 618-foot ship.

For the past two years, the government tried unsuccessfully to find another federal agency that might use the $65 million ship, but no agency wanted it. So the government asked the General Services Administration (GSA) to sell or lease it. GSA offered Glomar at $30,000 a day, but no one would touch the ship, which is equipped to lift 2000 tons a day from 20,000-foot depths.

The Glomar Explorer, built by the government in secret cooperation with the late Howard Hughes, will be mothballed at Suisun Bay, Cal., after another $2 million is spent on preserving its engines and secret equipment.

The Glomar Explorer will be equated with the failure of a mission by the CIA. Nothing especially worthwhile was found on the half of the Soviet submarine that was salvaged from the Pacific.

FRANCO FADING

Generalissimo Francisco Franco -- who was buried last November in the basilica of the Valley of the Fallen, a monument to the civil war dead, 60 miles from Madrid -- is rapidly fading from the memories of the Spaniards he ruled for almost 40 years.

Crowds of visitors who once thronged his grave have given way to a mere trickle. Franco is buried in a vault on which the only inscription is his name.

More people visit his El Pardo residence in Madrid, a 32-room, 16th-century palace that has been turned into a museum. The entrance bears a plaque which reads: "El Caudillo worked tirelessly for the peace, well-being, prosperity and enhancement of the fatherland."

The showpiece of the residence is Franco's bedroom, spotted with glass cases which display 10 of his most splendid uniforms. Franco was a little man, 5-foot-3, who loved to dress in military gaud.

Spanish postage stamps and coins bearing his image are rapidly being replaced by new ones with the portrait of King Juan Carlos. The king hasn't visited Franco's gravesite since the funeral.

Of the World War II dictators -- Hitler, Stalin, Franco, Mussolini, Chiang Kai-shek -- none survive. Mao Tse-tung came into power in China in 1949, and Tito of Yugoslavia consolidated his power a year later. Only Tito, wracked by hepatitis, continues.

SWISS BANK SECRECY

Bank secrecy has broad public support in Switzerland, according to a public-opinion poll conducted by the Isopublic Institute of Zurich.

Approximately 63% of those people questioned favor retaining bank secrecy, while 27% want it abolished.

Bank secrecy has been a way of business life in Switzerland since 1934. The law making it possible was adopted then mainly to protect Jewish depositors from reprisals in Germany. In the 1930's Hitler ordered the death penalty for anyone transferring money abroad without authorization. To protect those people who did, Switzerland later introduced numbered bank accounts as a common practice. It is still in force, although the law on bank secrecy no longer applies to criminal and bankruptcy investigations. It does, however, apply to agents investigating tax-evasion cases. They are barred from examining bank accounts.

The poll on bank secrecy was paid for by Swiss Credit Bank, one of the country's three largest.

NUNS' RIGHTS Italian nuns know their rights and mean to exercise them. Several months ago a bank in Bologna bought an institution in which several nuns had worked for years. Overnight the sisters found themselves out on the street. Seventeen applied for unemployment insurance.

Lawyers for the bank argued in court that the nuns were ineligible for such benefits because their work was purely humanitarian, not financial. However, the court ruled that nuns, like all Italian workers, were included in the laws and therefore deserved unemployment compensation. In Italy approximately 150,000 nuns are employed in nursing and child care facilities.

JEANNE CORDELLIER

"BED SELLERS" The confessions of two active French prostitutes have made the list of best sellers in Paris. The memoirs of Jeanne Cordellier, 32, entitled "Derobade" (The Dodge), sold more than 250,000 copies in four months and is No. 1 on the list at this writing.

The other "bed seller" is "Ulla About Ulla," which has sold 100,000 copies.

Unfortunately, it seems the practice of writing about their lives throws these young women into fits of severe depression.

The prostitute who calls

'ULLA': THAT'S WHAT SHE CALLS HERSELF

herself Ulla has just recovered from her second suicide attempt, while Jeanne Cordellier admits, "The more I write, the more obsessed I become with suicide. A good pistol, blood and brains which spurt out on the wall--that's what I think and write about."

Why have these seamy confessionals proved so popular in France? They are not only sex-ridden, they are frequently humorous. Jeanne Cordellier writes that after engaging in amorous exercises, the Japanese immediately wash themselves with Scotch.

SUICIDE West Berlin and Hungary have the highest suicide rates in the world, according to incomplete statistics of the World Health Organization.

WHO reports that an international comparison of suicide rates is of "questionable value" so long as the reporting methods of specific countries vary widely. The report, however, does reveal some interesting trends.

In 1970, for example, in West Berlin 67.5 men per 100,000 and 33.8 women per 100,000 took their own lives--15 and 30 times higher, respectively, than in Mexico.

But statisticians consider Mexico's suicide statistics unreliable because of that country's religious constraints.

Greece is the European country with the lowest suicide rate. Hungary, a country where many years ago a melancholy pop tune caused hundreds of people to take their lives, leads the suicide list with rates of 63.8 for men and 23.8 for women.

In an accompanying commentary, the WHO report adds that East Germany, Denmark, Hungary, Austria, Finland, Sweden, and Czechoslovakia are the European countries which consistently have high suicide rates.

HUGHES PROJECT STALLED

earlier this year, Hollywood was most eager to film his biography. Warner Brothers moved rapidly, believing that Paramount, was about to sign a $2 million deal with actor-producer Warren Beatty.

Warners agreed to pay Beatty $1,750,000 plus 10% of the gross for his treatment, hoping eventually to make a co-production deal with Paramount. Apparently Beatty signed with Warners. But now the studio is in no great hurry to get started on the project because the Howard Hughes story has not yet ended. No one seems to know who will inherit Hughes' $2 billion estate. And even more important, not too many people seem to care.

MAZDA MAKING U.S. COMEBACK

Four years ago, Mazda, Japan's rotary-engine car, burst on the U.S. market with surprising success.

It offered a rotary engine, light and compact, with fewer moving parts than the piston engine. Sales were brisk, and the U.S. rapidly became Mazda's second largest export market. Then came a 1973 and the energy crisis, and it was shown that Mazdas consumed too much fuel. Sales plummeted. Of the 512 U.S. dealerships that sold Mazdas exclusively, only a few survived.

Mazda's parent company, Toyo Kogyo Ltd. of Hiroshima, hopes to make a U.S. comeback with its $7000 luxury model, Cosmo. The company insists that its faith in the rotary engine remains unshakable. "It will eventually become," says corporation president Kohel Matsuda, "the dominant power plant of the future."

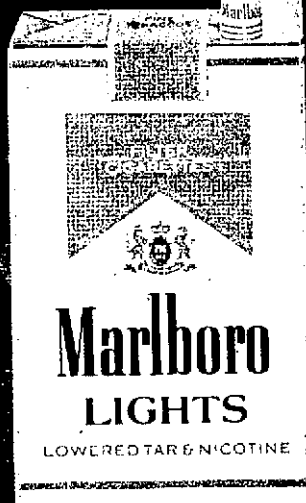

General Motors, which bought the rights to the Wankel rotary engine, has suspended production plans. Mazda is the only mass-produced car in the world with a rotary engine.

The World's Greatest Athlete Chases the Big Money

by L.H. Whittemore

Decathlon gold medalist Bruce Jenner and his wife Chrystie are keeping in shape. It is estimated he can make $2 million from TV commercials alone.

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Will success spoil Bruce Jenner? That's the question being asked about the 27-year-old American who was proclaimed "the world's greatest athlete" after winning the decathlon at the Montreal Olympics last summer.

Among those asking it are Jenner himself and his beautiful blonde wife Chrystie.

Says Bruce: "Our lives have changed drastically. I'd like to think it's all for the good, but there have been some drawbacks."

Says 26-year-old Chrystie, who dropped out of college and worked as a United Airlines stewardess to help support her husband while he trained for the decathlon: "Sometimes I'd give my eyeteeth to be back where we were."

For more than three months now the Jenners have been plunged into a grueling round of travels, interviews, screen tests and meetings with agents, producers and promoters that make the 10 track and field events of the decathlon almost seem like a cakewalk in comparison.

They've even added a third member to their team—a 37-year-old bachelor named George Wallach, who has taken over as "personal manager" for the star athlete. Wallach, at whose home in Beverly Hills the couple is staying, is blunt in describing the kind of life he sees ahead for Jenner.

"Bruce can be a one-man business, like Arnold Palmer," he exclaims. "I hate to sound so commercial, but even though Bruce Jenner is a human being, he's also a product. We're making the conversion from 'jock' to 'personality.'" (Last month he signed a contract with ABC to appear on several shows.)

Wallach has estimated that Jenner can make $2 million from TV commercials alone. Among the products under consideration for his endorsement have been automobiles, motorcycles, various foods, men's toiletries and clothing. Another item would be dog food, promoted by the couple's three-year-old Labrador, Bertha, that used to run with Bruce as he trained.

Even dog in the act

"We could feature her as 'the most physically fit dog in the world,'" Wallach points out.

Beyond the commercials, however, there is a delicate problem. Like Mark Spitz, who won seven gold medals for swimming in the 1972 Olympics, Jenner is faced with the possibility of quickly fizzling out as a celebrity. The solution, both he and Wallach feel, is to refrain from "jumping too fast" into too many promotions. That was Spitz's big mistake, in their view, causing him to lose out over the long haul.

Becoming "the world's greatest athlete" at the Montreal Olympics, Jenner couldn't restrain his joy. Overnight, he was an international celebrity.

1. The Fresh Lemon. It does more for and with vegetables than anything in your kitchen, except maybe salt. Read on for proof.

2. Lemon Butter. One of the world's great tastes. Just melt  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup butter or margarine. Add grated peel and juice from  $\frac{1}{2}$  fresh lemon; heat. - Delicious over any cooked vegetable.

3. Green Beans. In small saucepan combine  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup butter, dressing with grated peel and juice from  $\frac{1}{2}$  fresh lemon; heat. Serve over hot cooked green beans. Delicious chilled, too.

4. Fresh & Fast Salad Dressing. Use your favorite packaged salad dressing mix, but add fresh lemon juice instead of vinegar. Tastes fresher, zippier, better.

5. Quiche. Melt  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup butter and add juice from  $\frac{1}{2}$  fresh lemon and  $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. salt. Add slowly to 3 egg yolks, beating constantly.

6. Savory Corn on the Cob. Season cooked corn by rubbing with a wedge of cut lemon. Add butter and salt, if you like. (A sprinkle of grated Parmesan cheese makes a tangy variation.)

7. Peas. Peel 1 lb. peas. Add 3 slices bacon until browned. Remove and crumble. To dripping add 1 can (2 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained, juice from  $\frac{1}{2}$  fresh lemon, 1 tbsp. sugar, 2 tsp. instant minced onion and  $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. salt. Stir in 1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen peas, cooked and drained, heat. Garnish with bacon and lemon. Serves 3 to 4.

8. Caesar Salad Supreme. To  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup olive or salad oil add 1 small clove garlic, minced. Toss 2 medium heads romaine lettuce, torn in pieces, with garlic-oil, 1 tsp. salt and freshly ground pepper to taste. Break 1 coddled egg over salad; squeeze on juice from 2 fresh lemons. Add 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce and 6 anchovy fillets (optional); toss well. Add 1 cup croutons and  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup grated Parmesan cheese; toss lightly. Serves 6 to 8.

9. Lemony Dip for Fresh Raw Vegetables. Combine 1 cup sour cream with juice from  $\frac{1}{2}$  fresh lemon,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup crumbled blue cheese and  $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. onion salt. Garnish with parsley and lemon.

Observations

The greening of TV. Television quality gets better tonight, as Masterpiece Theatre presents the first episode in Richard Llewellyn's classic, "How Green Was My Valley." Times may change, but the warmth, conflicts and physical hardships of a Welsh coal miner's family have an enduring quality—which is why Llewellyn's novel lends itself so well to this new adaptation for television. The six-part series stars Stanley Baker, Sian Phillips and Rhys Powys: father, mother and son coping with life. Underwritten by a grant from Mobil, Masterpiece Theatre is seen over PBS stations. Later in the season, it will bring back the Bellamys and their servants in "Upstairs, Downstairs" against a background of the Roaring Twenties.

What doth it profit a man? About a nickel on every sales dollar, whether he runs a giant corporation or a neighborhood hardware store. According to latest statistics from Robert Morris Associates, the national association of bank loan and credit officers, a typical hardware store makes $13,200 a year on sales of $300,000, after salaries, including the owner's, are paid. That's a profit of 4.4 percent on sales, and 16.8 percent on "shareholders' equity," assuming the business has a net worth of about $80,000. Meanwhile, a study by Citibank put the profit of leading manufacturers last year at 4.4 percent of sales, 12.3 percent on the basis of shareholders' equity. Interestingly, a major research organization found that many people think these companies make as much as 33 cents on every sales dollar.

Nobody's perfect. Which is why we get so many opportunities to tweak the noses of governmental agencies. On the other hand, sometimes an agency has a kudo coming. Like the Commission on Federal Paperwork, which has been instrumental in passing legislation calling for annual reporting of employee wages, rather than the present quarterly method. If carried out at the state level, too, the new law could save employers—especially small businessmen—millions of hours and some $250 million annually, says the Commission. It will also reduce the Federal Government's paper load by approximately 24 million pages, and save Uncle Sam $20 million a year.

Up to the Summer Games, Bruce and Chrystie had been sole partners in his career. Now they also have a personal manager, George Wallach of Beverly Hills, in their lives. While they sort out news clippings, Wallach deals with agents and advertisers.

ATHLETE CONTINUED

Not until mid-September did Jenner actually capitalize on his overnight stardom. For a guest shot on the Bill Cosby TV show, he earned $7500 after a day's taping session. Otherwise, he played in two celebrity tennis tournaments, both for charity, appeared on the Jerry Lewis Telethon for muscular dystrophy, went on the Tonight Show, and accepted an invitation to the White House.

In August, Bruce and Chrystie flew to Rome so that he could screen-test for the title role in Superman. He failed to get the part, apparently because he photographed too young.

But Jenner maintains an easygoing posture. "Nothing is the end of the world," he says. The worry and planning have been left largely to George Wallach and Chrystie.

"The other night," she says, "the three of us stayed up late, talking about the future. Suddenly I realized that George and I were mostly talking to each other. I kept saying, 'Bruce, we're discussing you! What's your opinion?' Well, he was listening, but unfortunately he doesn't put a whole lot of value on his own ideas. For that reason, he's easily influenced."

Jenner himself admits, "I'm the doer, while Chrystie is the thinker." But he is keenly aware that her adjustment to the whirlwind is just as difficult, maybe more complex than his own.

"Our relationship has become more complicated," he says. "Up until the Olympics, Chrystie and I were like partners. Then suddenly the Games were over. And mainly it's been me getting into new things, while she's been left behind somewhat."

Life more complex

The questions, for Chrystie, go like this: How much does Bruce still need her to participate in his career? Can she develop a career of her own? What is her role, now that so many facets of their lives have changed?

Are you still smoking?

In the years since the criticism against smoking first appeared, many people have given up cigarettes. But many more people haven't.

And that's who we'd like to talk to. That even larger group of people who are still smoking today.

If you're still a smoker, you've probably heard the charges leveled against 'tar' and nicotine. You may have become concerned. And chances are you even tried to do something about it. Like trying several of those empty-tasting low 'tar' and nicotine cigarettes.

If you're like a lot of other smokers, you probably went right back to your old brand, and concluded that a good-tasting low 'tar' and nicotine cigarette has never been invented.

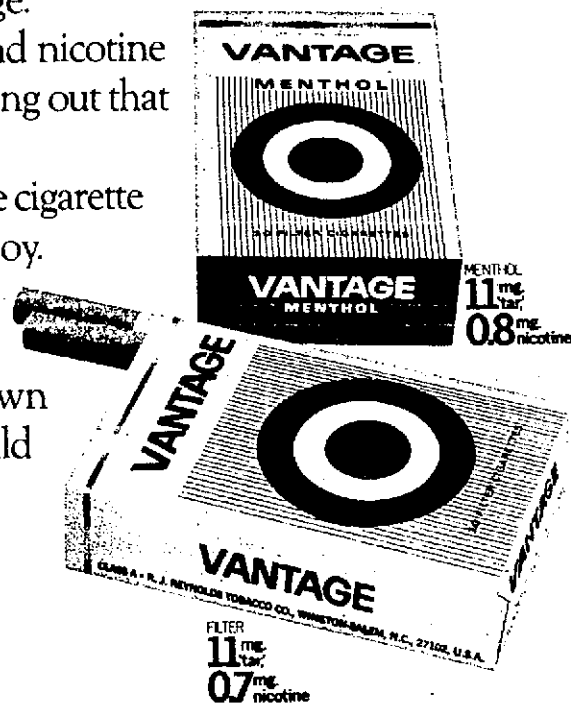

Well, if that's the case, you haven't tried Vantage.

Vantage cuts down substantially on the 'tar' and nicotine you may have become concerned about. Without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavor you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you can smoke. But it may well be the lowest you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

So, if you still smoke, but would like to cut down on 'tar' and nicotine, Vantage is one cigarette you should seriously consider.

PARADE • NOVEMBER 7, 1976

Jenner followed her advice as if his life depended on it. At Montreal, he earned 8618 decathlon points—164 more than any predecessor, his face radiating the pain and glory of victory.

"For a while after," Chrystie recalls, "I started thinking that I was the star, too. I just got caught up in all the attention. It can get out of proportion. I don't want to settle for thrills from someone else's experience. I realize that my husband's achievements aren't mine. I'm just not a follower."

Now, when they arrive at a party or public event, Bruce is always mobbed by fans. "I head for another part of the room," Chrystie says. And she's even feeling like "the third wheel" in the relationship between herself, Bruce and manager Walach. "I call them 'the dynamic duo,'" she jokes. "I'm constantly following them around, listening to 'Bruce Jenner this' and 'Bruce Jenner that.' Well, sometimes I get up to here with Bruce Jenner!"

A wife's problem

It's a problem that only the wife of a superstar can fully appreciate. On the one hand, Chrystie would like to be a talk-show hostess on television, doing her own thing. She'll probably make some commercials by herself, promoting women's clothing or sunglasses, "but you won't see me washing Bruce's magic socks," she quips.

On the other hand, she would like to raise a family and return to their "normal" life of the past. "I have a fear of Hollywood and Beverly Hills," she says. "We have to keep our heads above all this. We don't want the public's need for Bruce Jenner to determine what he is, or what we are. The burning thing in me is to remember who we are and what's always made us happy—like just staying home with each other, for instance."

Much has happened to this young couple in the last several months, but much more, albeit in a less dramatic way, will happen in the next few years. Right now they are asking questions and groping for answers.

Over a quiet breakfast, Bruce and Chrystie talk seriously of how their lives have become a whirlwind. "Sometimes," she laments, "I would give my eyeteeth to be back where we were."

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Young Motherhood

One of the most imprudent things a girl of 17 or younger can do is to become a mother. Young motherhood, in fact, is a serious handicap in today's society.

A six-year study headed by University of Pennsylvania sociologist Frank Furstenberg Jr., comparing the life adjustment of 404 Baltimore girls who became mothers at 17 or younger to 301 classmates who postponed child-bearing until later, shows that young mothers are far more likely to:

- Drop out of school, even though they wanted more education;
- Suffer unemployment, poverty, and welfare dependency;
- Have further pregnancies in their teens;
- Endure breakup of their marriages because of economic pressures.

Furstenberg concludes that most teen-age pregnancies are unwanted and could have been prevented by available community-based fertility-control services.

His study appears in the current issue of Family Planning Perspectives, which carries another article, this one by Frederick S. Jaffe and Joy G. Dryfoos, reporting that each year a million girls aged 15-19 in the U.S. get pregnant—with two-thirds of such pregnancies unintended.

Girls below age 15 account for an additional 30,000 pregnancies. Six in 10 of these end in live births, three in 10 in induced abortions, the rest in miscarriages. More than one-third of all these births are out of wedlock.

Shocker

It sounds incredible, but the Australian Council for Educational Research declares it true. About 10 percent of 14-year-old schoolchildren in Australia cannot tell the time correctly.

The council recently made the first national survey of the reading, writing, and arithmetic of 14,000 students aged 10-14 in 600 Australian schools.

The survey found that about 10,000 of the 14-year-olds cannot do simple multiplication and subtraction. About 7500 students aged 10 and 2000 aged 14 cannot understand the simple sentence "He is taller than his sister."

One 10-year-old in every Australian classroom and one child in 100 at age 14 is unable to read the simplest school book.

Law Waxes

Law school enrollment, which climbed sharply a few years ago, is leveling off. So reports the American Bar Association.

Despite an overall increase, in which women now comprise approximately 23% of approved law school enrollments, the pace has slowed.

Law school enrollment has increased steadily in the past decade, doubling from approximately 62,500 students to the current 117,000. But, according to James P. White, Professor of Law at Indiana University's Indianapolis School of Law, "The law school boom of 1973 has passed. Watergate is over, and fewer unqualified students are applying. Scholarships have also not risen proportionately with the increased costs of a law school education."

I'm a registered nurse. And while I was in training, there wasn't a day that went by that I didn't see a new mother leave the maternity ward with a bundle of love in her arms and a heap of fat on her thighs and backside. Still I didn't learn. The day I left the hospital with my first baby, I weighed 168 pounds.

It's not as if I didn't know better. But having been a working girl until my pregnancy, I found it difficult to stay home for nine months with nothing much to do but clean house, watch television and empty the refrigerator. By that I mean eat whatever was in it, before filling it up again.

As the scale climbed (to 180 pounds), I kept telling myself it was mostly water—which I'd get rid of when the baby came. And whatever extra pounds that were left, I figured I'd take off immediately after. What a joke! All I dropped the day my daughter was born was 12 pounds, leaving me with 168 pounds to carry around.

My first reaction was to do something that would turn people's eyes away from my fat. So I paid special attention to my hair. That way, I hoped people would look at me from my neck up only. Unfortunately, it didn't stop my husband from looking up and down at me.

Each time we'd go shopping for clothes, he'd reach for a size 9 and say: "Why don't you buy this?" It was his way of telling me to lose weight. But all it did was make me go home and munch on cheese doodles, hot dogs, candy corn, chocolate—or anything else in the house.

From time to time, of course, I'd go on a self-styled diet, but with little success. Yet I would never take reducing-drug pills or water pills. I don't believe in them.

In desperation, I decided to go back to work. My daughter was walking then and by taking the three-to-eleven shift, I was able to take turns with my husband caring for her. Only listen to what happened. You've heard of people having a tough time finding a job because they're too fat. Well, I had a hard time staying on the job because of cracks about my weight. I got so embarrassed that I quit. Just took off for home in Old Bridge, New Jersey.

I don't know what made me think putting my 9-pound baby daughter on my lap could hide my 168 pounds.

At 112 pounds, I don't need to stand behind anyone to cover up my figure.

It was around New Year's, I remember, and I made a resolution right then to lose weight. I had seen those stories in magazines about people who'd lost on the Ayds plan, so I decided to try it. I bought a box of Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy, the chocolate fudge kind, at my drug store. I liked the fact that Ayds contained vitamins and minerals, but no drugs or medications.

I read the directions carefully. Then I took one or two Ayds before meals with a hot drink and they really helped satisfy my appetite.

For breakfast, I'd have one Ayds and hot tea; then orange juice and a toasted bagel with half a teaspoon of jelly or margarine. Lunch, I'd have Ayds again and maybe a tuna fish salad. And for dinner, Ayds and tea before a hamburger or steak, or maybe fish, string beans, and diet soda. Then in the evening, I'd have a couple of Ayds for snacks.

That way I was able to keep my intake of calories low, yet feel satisfied. As a result, I lost one pound the first week on the Ayds plan. Three pounds the second. And two pounds the third. Being a nurse, I knew it was much smarter to lose weight gradually than rapidly.

In five months, I lost 43 pounds on the Ayds plan. But that's not the best of it. I found with the plan that I could have all sorts of delicious cookies, candies and snacks at home for my husband and friends, yet not be tempted myself.

Actually, I changed my eating habits enough with the help of Ayds so that I was able to get down to 112 pounds by fall. Why, the only plump one at our Thanksgiving table was the bird. As for me, my friends said I was all bones. But my husband said I suited his taste just fine. And he meant it. Thanks to the Ayds plan, I never have to hide behind my child these days.

VEGETABLES IN A RING

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Delicious, nutritious and pretty as a picture, Southern Vegetable Ring with Okra-Tomato Sauce combines four vegetables in a new and delightful way. Serve it for lunch, dinner or supper as the main dish. We're sure there won't be any leftovers!

For a dinner menu, begin with chilled grapefruit sections. Follow with the vegetable ring and hot corn muffins or corn sticks made easily with a packaged mix. Add protein to the menu by serving baked caramel custard for dessert.

SOUTHERN VEGETABLE RING with OKRA-TOMATO SAUCE

VEGETABLE RING

- 3 cups boiling water
- 1 package (6 oz.) hash brown potatoes with onions
- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen chopped mustard greens
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ½ cup dairy sour cream
- ¼ cup grated sharp cheddar cheese

Add boiling water to potatoes; let stand at least one hour; drain. Meanwhile, cook mustard greens according to package directions; drain. Combine potatoes and mustard greens with remaining ingredients; mix well. Pack firmly into oiled five-cup ring mold. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. While ring mold is baking, prepare sauce. When mold is done, turn out on serving plate; fill center with sauce. Serves four or five.

OKRA-TOMATO SAUCE

- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen sliced okra
- 1 can (1 lb.) stewed tomatoes
- 1 cup well-seasoned medium white sauce

Cook okra according to package directions; drain. Combine tomatoes and white sauce; cook and stir over moderate heat until thickened. Stir in drained okra; heat to serving temperature. FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

The Lincoln Mint Announces "THE PRESIDENTIAL GOLD LIBRARY"

Limited Edition in Gold-Available in
24 Kt. Solid Gold. Brilliant Gold Medals
Honoring Every Chief Executive.

In mid-April of 1789, a special messenger dismounted and knocked on the door at Mount Vernon, home of General George Washington. He carries a summons—the General had been unanimously elected as the first President of the United States. Then on April 30, outside Federal Hall in New York, the first Presidential oath of office was administered.

Since that inauguration 187 years ago, the Office of the Presidency has achieved an aura and power that is felt in every corner of our globe. Great and courageous men followed in that office—Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, the Roosevelts, Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy—each one leaving upon America a part of himself.

And now in our Bicentennial year, The Lincoln Mint, one of America's oldest and most respected creators of fine medallion art, is proud to announce a unique collection of limited-edition medals:

The Presidential Gold Library

Medals Struck in 24 Kt. Gold.

There has never been a collection quite like The Presidential Gold Library.

Entrusted with designing and creating the medals was a staff of master artists and metalsmiths long a part of The Lincoln Mint. The bas-relief sculptures may well be the crowning glory of The Lincoln Mint's 70-year tradition of leadership in medallion art.

Unique "Collector's Library"

Its beauty and intrinsic value is only one of many compelling reasons why this limited-edition is so extraordinary. We believe each President deserves a separate album to allow his portrait, personality and deeds to be individually examined and admired.

Thus, each brilliant solid gold medal comes to you in its own separate presentation album. These albums are designed to enhance the magnificent appearance of the medals. Each volume, luxuriously bound and then embossed in 24 kt. goldleaf, carries the Official Presidential Seal—and bears the name of each President described within.

Opposite the medal is a concise monograph by a noted historian narrating the achievements and historical role of that President. Portraits in Gold, portraits in words—an inspiring way to gain a fresh perspective on the lives and struggles of the remarkable men entrusted with the highest office America can bestow.

With your third issue you will also receive a handsome hand-rubbed walnut bookcase to house and display your library. Your name, delicately inscribed on a bronze plate, proudly announces that you are the original owner of The Presidential Gold Library, a limited-edition created especially for you.

Limited Edition Only for Advance Subscribers

This opportunity to acquire The Presidential Gold Library is strictly limited. We are setting a worldwide limit of only 9,999 sets of each size edition. Upon acceptance of your subscription, you will be sent one Presidential album each month until your Presidential Gold Library is complete.

The subject is fascinating and important—and the beauty of lustrous 24 kt. Solid Gold enhances superbly detailed portraits executed by the artists of The Lincoln Mint. Whether you choose the 20 grain size... diameter 3/4" or the 45 grain size... diameter 1", the medals are truly a craftsman's masterpiece.

Consider, too, the unique, new medium for displaying your collection—a walnut bookcase with your personal name plate; each medal in its own album.

Also, do not overlook the investment aspects: remember, your price is guaranteed to hold firm until you complete your set!

What a splendid and valued heirloom to pass on to the next generation—and the next! The Presidential Gold Library will long endure as the Bicentennial year's finest tribute to the leaders of our American democracy.

Act now on this rare opportunity to adorn your home or office with these medallion masterpieces. Once closed, our subscription rolls will never be reopened.

Make their drinks with Comfort™...it tastes delicious just poured over ice!

Save these drink recipes as mixed at famous places:

COMFORT™ ON-THE-ROCKS

Served at the Red Lion in Vail, Colo.

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort

Pour over cracked ice in short glass; add twist of lemon peel. Delicious!

COMFORT™ SOUR

Served at the Top of the Mark, Hotel Mark Hopkins, San Francisco

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
½ oz. fresh lemon juice
½ teaspoon sugar

Shake with cracked ice; strain into glass. Add orange slice on glass rim and cherry. No other Sour matches it!

COMFORT™ OLD-FASHIONED

As served at the Gaslight Club, Chicago

½ oz. sparkling water
Dash Angostura bitters
½ tspn. sugar (optional)
1½ oz. Southern Comfort

Stir bitters, sugar, water in glass; add ice cubes and S.C.; stir. Add twist of lemon peel, orange slice, cherry.

COMFORT™ COLLINS

Served in Miami Beach at Hotel Fontainebleau

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
Juice of ¼ lime = 7UP

Mix Southern Comfort, lime juice in tall glass; add ice cubes; fill with 7UP. The best—and the easiest to mix—of all Collinses!

COMFORT™ 'N TONIC

Served at Anthony's Pier 4, Boston

Juice, rind ¼ lime
1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
Schweppes Quinine Water (tonic)

Squeeze lime over ice cubes in tall glass; add rind, S.C. Fill with tonic and stir.

OPEN HOUSE PUNCH

Super punch! Tastes like a cocktail!

One fifth Southern Comfort
3 quarts 7UP
6 oz. fresh lemon juice
One 6-oz. can frozen orange juice
One 6-oz. can frozen lemonade

Chill ingredients. Mix in punch bowl, 7UP last. Add drops food coloring as desired (optional); stir. Add ice, orange and lemon slices. Serves 32.

That's why it makes mixed drinks taste so much better!

It's easy to mix exceptional drinks your whole crowd will enjoy. Just make them like the experts do...with the smoothness and wonderful flavor of Southern Comfort. Comfort™ is a completely different kind of basic liquor that makes drinks taste much better. Try it. Simply pour some over crushed ice. Sip it...and you've discovered a liquor that actually tastes delicious with nothing added. No wonder so many barmen use it instead of ordinary whiskey to mix Sours, Manhattans, etc.... even tall drinks like the Collins. They know this "switch" improves these drinks tremendously! Prove it to yourself; make both Manhattan recipes below. Compare them...and you've learned the secret of entertaining guests very Comfortably!

ordinary MANHATTAN

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Bourbon or rye
½ oz. sweet vermouth
Dash Angostura bitters (optional)

improved MANHATTAN

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
½ oz. dry vermouth
Dash Angostura bitters (optional)

Mix like ordinary recipe. Then sip it. Southern Comfort gives it a far more delicious flavor! Comfort™ Manhattan, as served at Paul Young's Restaurant, Washington, D.C.

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

A CHIMNEY WITHOUT MASONRY WORK:

Made of fiberglass resin, a new chimney has the look and feel of brick and stone and can be installed by a carpenter in a fraction of the time needed to construct a real masonry chimney. Because it weighs only 30 lbs., it requires no special wall or roof construction and can be installed in any type of weather (claims the maker). Available in 4'-high model for rooftop installation and in special sizes. Castle Rock Enterprises, Dept. PP, 88 Hubbard St., Winsted, Conn. 06098. (right)

'IMPOSSIBLE' LOCK:

A new replacement cylinder lock reportedly is impossible to open without a proper key. The pins are said to be unreadable by any special tool because they give the tool a false reading by design, while the cylinder itself is armored and drill-resistant. It's available as a mortise cylinder for use with mortise entry locks and as a rim cylinder for surface-mounting auxiliary locks. Suggested retail price: $14.95. Builders Hardware, Dept. PP, 61 Brightside Ave., E. Northport, N.Y. 11731.

BABY PACK: Adaptable to fit a child up to 30 lbs. and providing head support for sleeping, a new baby pack can be worn in front or back—and the baby cannot fall or crawl out (claims the maker, herself a mother). The pack uses no zippers, snaps or buckles that might fail, relying instead on straps and heavy non-slip rings. In indigo denim or canvas, $26 ppd. Andrea's Baby Pack, Dept. PP, 2441 Hilyard St., Eugene, Oreg. 97405. (right)

FITNESS AID: Track jogging can produce jolts, but when you jog on a new mini-trampoline the jolts are softened and absorbed (claims the maker). Useful in home or office for both jumping and running in place, the trampoline can also serve as a springboard for gymnastics, diving board at the pool and, turned on its side, as a baseball or tennis pitchback. It weighs less than 10 lbs., sits 6" to 8" off the floor, accommodates up to 250 lbs., is available in three diameters: 37" at $127.50; 43" at $137.50; 50" at $147.50 ppd. Skip Hellen, Dept. PP, 11259 Virginia Ave., Lynwood, Cal. 90262. (right)

THREE-WAY UTENSIL: Fork-like in appearance, this eating utensil also serves as a knife and spoon. The knife along both edges cannot cut your mouth (claims the maker), and the fork tines and spoon contour are said to allow comfort and ease of handling. Set of six: $9.95 ppd. NEEA Sales Co., Dept. PP, 6770 Crampton Court, Box 19389, San Diego, Cal. 92119.

MARRY NOW, PAY LATER?

In this mad, mad world, marriages on our continent are breaking up at a frightening rate. One analyst states that out of every ten marriages in the U.S. today, four will end in divorce. No need here to get into a religious debate on divorce. We are all agreed that it is at very least a human tragedy. Even when the separated put on a brave front, there remains a certain anguish over "what might have been."

Getting married is not like buying a car. One can get rid of one car and get another without suffering any soul scars. Not so when one leaves one spouse and goes it alone or takes up with another. Often too, there are children whose suffering at the separation of their parents can affect their whole lives.

Surely, if we have any feeling for the good of society and the happiness of individuals, we ought to do what we can to prevent unwise and premature marriages, and to help prepare those who are planning to marry. As a step in this direction, we are pleased to offer a new pamphlet: "Are You Fit to be Tied?" It has a light touch but a serious message in easy language. Write for your free copy today. No one will call on you.

The SONGBIRDS OF AMERICA

Bell Collection

□ A Series of 12 Bavarian Porcelain Bells depicting America's Most Beautiful Songbirds □ Exclusive Original Works of Art □ Hand Decorated and Trimmed in 22kt. Gold □ A Limited Edition Available Only in This 150th Anniversary Year of Audubon's "Birds of America" □ Original issue price guaranteed.

Birds delight even the most casual observer. They grace our world with beauty and song and inspire us with their freedom of flight. Now the minstrels of the meadows, woodlands, deserts and streams—the songbirds of America—have been captured brilliantly in a series of finely crafted porcelain bells.

Honoring John James Audubon

No one in recorded history has ever devoted such enormous energies and talents to capturing the wondrous beauty of birds as John James Audubon. In his almost life-long quest he recorded in brilliant watercolors the hundreds of birds native to North America.

To honor Audubon's herculean task in this the 150th anniversary year of his "Birds of America," the Danbury Mint has chosen 12 of the most beautiful songbirds of America and portrayed them on fine porcelain bells.

Exclusive Works of Art

One of the nation's foremost American wildlife artists has been commissioned to execute the original watercolor enhancing each bell. Jo Polseno, renowned bird painter, has created the original works of art for the 12 bells in this series. Working directly from life, in the woods and fields of America, the artist has conceived and created his designs—portraying each bird in authentic and exacting detail. By following the techniques used 150 years ago by John James Audubon, Polseno has created birds which seem to come alive. Each brushstroke captures the beauty, color and texture of the songbirds. We believe his achievements are remarkable. The accompanying full color illustrations demonstrate the painstaking accuracy and style which will be characteristic of the original watercolors for this fine collection.

Finest Bavarian Porcelain

The finest Bavarian porcelain has been used in creating this exquisite series. The shape of the bell was specially selected to complement the delicate scenes vividly portrayed. Each bell has been hand decorated with a band of precious 22kt gold. The fine skill of old world craftsmen has been employed to reproduce the fine detail of the birds on each bell. Every bell in the series will bear the hallmark of the Danbury Mint.

A Limited Edition At A Guaranteed Price

The Songbirds of America Bell Collection is being issued as a strictly limited edition. It is available only by advance reservation and only until December 31, 1976. The original issue price of $35.00 per bell is guaranteed to each subscriber throughout the series. Each subscriber will receive a numbered certificate of registration authenticating the status of the individual collection within the limited edition.

Actual size of bells 5 inches in height.

Read and Save Money

As a car owner, you know how much auto repairs cost these days. Jobs that seem simple have a way of adding up to a small fortune when you drive into your service station or garage.

Is there a way to beat the high cost of getting your car fixed? Yes, there is. It's a simple, sensible, easy-to-follow book called Basic Auto Repairs. Written by automotive expert Byron G. Wells and available to PARADE readers for only $1.50 plus 25¢ for postage and handling, it tells how you can save big money making your own car repairs.

Of course, you can't fix everything yourself, and this book is quick to tell you so. Some major repairs have to be left to trained experts.

But you'll be astounded at the number of things you can do yourself, once you've developed a little know-how, patience and confidence. Basic Auto Repairs will tell you how to find trouble spots, how to diagnose malfunctions, how to go about replacing parts. It is specific in telling you what not to do yourself—advising, for instance, against doing your own tire repairs. It also tells you where and how to shop for automotive equipment and tools you'll need to work with speed and safety.

Beyond its instructions for making repairs, Basic Auto Repairs provides a clear and comprehensive guide to your car and its operation. You'll learn what the various systems—electrical, cooling, engine—do and how they work together. Through diagrams, charts, pictures and text, the book will give you an understanding of your car that you've probably never had before. Even when a major job has to be done by a mechanic, you'll be able to talk to him knowledgeably and confidently. And the tips you'll find on preventive maintenance alone will repay you the cost of the book many times.

Basic Auto Repairs belongs in every car's glove compartment. It will make you a better, safer, and more confident driver—and can save you a bundle at the same time.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $1.50 (plus 25¢ for postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "Basic Auto Repairs" to PARADE, Box 4, Dept. S, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery. [GENERAL OFFICES: 1346 39TH ST., BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11218.]

The case of 22-year-old Karen Anne Quinlan, who's been in a coma for over two years, now has new dimensions as a moral and legal dilemma.

Life or Death for a Baby

The Next Karen Quinlan Case?

by Amitai Etzioni

Any day now we shall have a new Quinlan case. By this I mean another court battle concerning the right to withhold or withdraw medical treatment, thereby letting a person die. Chances are, however, that next time the debate will center not around an adult, hurt in an accident or dying from a disease, but the even more difficult question of the fate of a newborn baby with severe birth defects.

Every expectant mother faces the far-from-trivial risk that her child will be born deformed. Some babies are born with practically no brains; some with damaged spines, heads, bones; others with their intestines disconnected. Thanks to new developments in medicine, more and more of these infants, who years ago would have died almost immediately, now live for years—and even grow up to adulthood.

Increasingly the question arises: what is the moral obligation of the parents,

the physician, and society toward such a child? How hard should we try to save or to prolong the life of a baby born with serious birth defects?

A study conducted at Yale-New Haven Hospital between 1970 and 1972 illustrates how frequently such decisions arise: the study found 43 babies in that period whose deaths were related to decisions to discontinue treatment of their deformities. Dr. Robert A. Cooke, Vice Chancellor for Medicine at the University of Wisconsin, told a Senate health subcommittee hearing in 1974 that he estimated 2000 infants a year were dying in the United States as a result of decisions made to withhold or stop treatment due to the seriousness of birth defects.

The question of which infants shall be allowed to die and which helped to live is even more complex than the question of artificially sustaining the terminally ill, such as Karen Anne Quinlan. For fatally ill or injured persons, the suggested criterion is brain death (or, in the Quinlan case, irreversible loss of consciousness), after which the person is judged unable ever again to lead a human life—that is, to be aware, to communicate, be loving, or function on his or her own.

Terminally ill

In the cases of infants born with no brain above the brain stem, or with a condition for which doctors can promise only a very short prolongation of life, the issues are very much similar to those involving irreversibly comatose adults. Such babies are, in effect, unusually young terminally ill patients. However, large numbers of severe birth defects do not fall into this category. Not only is there a functioning brain, but many of these infants, if kept alive, would develop into conscious human beings. To withhold or withdraw life-sustaining measures from such defective newborns thus involves deciding the fate of a person who, despite severe physical or mental abnormalities, is much more akin to you and me than is a once-normal but now brain-dead—or irreversibly comatose—body.

The next dramatic case will involve a seriously deformed infant, according to the author, and the agonizing question will be: Should the baby be permitted to die?

It is important to recognize that developing human consciousness need not entail having anything near a normal IQ. Indeed, most such babies are likely to be retarded in varying degrees. "Consciousness" refers instead to such things as capacity to respond to outside stimuli, awareness of self and surroundings including other people, the ability to love and be loved, and identifiable "personality."

Heart of the dilemma

The potential for human consciousness is at the heart of the dilemma: when, if ever, is it appropriate not to do "everything possible" to save a human being who is conscious or has some potential for conscious existence? Should consideration be given to the quality of that conscious existence? Is it moral to go to great technological lengths to sustain the life of a severely defective newborn if that means the child will be condemned to a life of severe mental and physical disability, extraordinary dependence on others, steady pain and recurrent treatment? What if survival means a lifetime of care in an institutional "dying bin"—or going home to be hidden away from the neighbors? What if it means a constant balancing on the brink of death, in and out of hospital emergency and operating rooms?

What makes these questions all the more difficult to deal with is that the death of an infant is usually more traumatic than the death of an old person. A mother in the delivery room is rarely expecting tragedy. Hence the greater inability to face the issues involved in the decision to let live—or die.

Lacking the public discussions that followed the Quinlan case, the decisions concerning infants are often made by physicians. In many instances they simply tell the parents that the infant died, or was born dead, and "spare" them the decision as to whether all the tools and techniques available to medicine should be used to sustain the infant's life. Conversely, the New Haven researchers reported that during one period the hospital's policy was to treat all infants born with certain severe birth defects "vigorously." Parents were asked to sign consent forms and the

In 1974, a group of doctors at Maine Medical Center requested a court order to continue treatment of a child with no left eye, a deformed hand, several disconnected vertebrae, and afflicted with tracheal esophageal fistula (so it could not be fed by mouth). His parents had refused permission to treat. Ironically, while the court was making its died (feeding the baby by mouth would have killed it) when its parents refused permission to correct a blockage which could be fixed with relative ease. The child was born with Down's syndrome (mongolism). In Norfolk, Va., a child was born with hydrocephalus. Damage from the swelling produced by the accumulated fluids on the brain was expected to be very severe and a decision was made not to feed the baby. However, the Virginia Society for Human Life intervened to the point of trying to have prosecuted whoever made the decision to let the baby starve. The child was sent home.

These cases illustrate how arbitrary the decisions often are—decisions which so deeply affect the lives and happiness of both the infants and their families. What is needed is very much what happened in the Quinlan case as well as in other cases involving fatally injured and terminally ill persons: full-scale debate, spurred on by public hearings; media attention, perhaps court cases.

Basic questions

We must face such basic questions as: What guidelines should be used in such cases? Will we continue to abide by a policy of trying to do "all we can" for all newborns or only for those who have a chance for conscious life? What other guidelines should and could be implemented? Who will make the judgment: the physician, following his or her own values; the parents, who have the final responsibility for the child and who must live with the outcome of the decision; or the courts, which could approve guardians for such children? Or is the legal process ill-equipped for decisions best made "quietly" and informally?

It's necessary to go beyond debates among specialists, exchange of cases in medical journals, and discussions of policy in hospital committee meetings. The public has to be involved. Only by joining in widespread dialogue can we all gradually define our perspective on these agonizing questions.

Amitai Etzioni is professor of sociology at Columbia University and director of the Center for Policy Research. His Genetic Fix, released as a paperback by Harper and Row in 1975, was nominated for the National Book Award in Science in 1974.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

babies were operated on even before the parents had a chance to see them, let alone have the nature of the defects explained to them. Some physicians, often of the younger generation, prefer a more open, "participatory" approach and consult the parents. Still others disregard the parents' wishes and insist on their right to treat the infant.

decision, the physicians changed their minds due to reevaluation of the child's prognosis. But the court ended up by appointing a guardian and forcing both the parents and the doctors to go through with the surgery.

At the opposite extreme, five years ago at Johns Hopkins, physicians let a child starve for 15 days until it finally

Charles A. Beardsley, the late president of the American Bar Association, once spoofed his fellow lawyers for their "use of high-sounding, nonsensical language. In parody, he said, "Beware of and eschew pompous prolixity."

Beardsley then took lawyers to task for the language used in wills. He said: "And then, if a lawyer were going to draw my will, he would probably start like this: 'In the name of God, Amen. I, Charles A. Beardsley, of the City of Oakland, County of Alameda, State of California, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, and not acting under any fraud, duress, or any undue influence of any person, whatsoever, do make, publish, and declare this my last will and testament, in the manner following, that is to say.'

"And this is all it means: 'I, Charles A. Beardsley, make my will as follows.'"

Over the centuries, the most caustic critics of law language and advocates of reform have been the lawyers themselves. Yet legal language remains as far removed from the mainstream of verbal and written communication as the minuet is from the hustle.

Four centuries ago, Sir Thomas More was a successful London lawyer before he became Henry VIII's Lord Chancellor. His wit was renowned and apparently unerring. History tells us that he jested even on the scaffold to which Henry VIII eventually dispatched him. Sir Thomas continually poked fun at his fellow lawyers, calling them "people whose profession is to disguise matters."

Swift's verdict

Jonathan Swift wrote that the language of lawyers was such that "no mortal can understand." The 18th-century philosopher and jurist Jeremy Bentham was more direct. Law talk, he said, was "literary garbage."

Garbage or not, lawyers still endlessly grind out documents beginning, "To all to whom these presents come or may come; greeting." And with perfectly straight faces they continue to do business with such word tools as: "Now therefore in consideration of the premises and the representations, warranties, covenants, and undertakings of the parties hereinafter set forth..."

Thomas Jefferson was sharply critical of his own profession. He held that from time immemorial lawyers had been devoted to cloudy phrases "which from verbosity... are rendered more perplexed and incomprehensible not only to common readers but to lawyers themselves."

The only period in American history when plain language was the language of the law was in the early settlement of the Old West. Miners and prospectors made their own law without benefit or hindrance of lawyers. For example:

"All persons buying a claim shall have an undisputable [sic] right to the same."

It May Not Be English But It's Strictly Legal

by George Gordon Coughlin

Lawyers have changed but their jargon hasn't. These attorneys depicted by the 19th-century French artist Daumier would have been understood by colleagues of today.

Some modern lawyers seem to be restraining their verbiage, but the body of the profession clings as if to a life raft to its stilted phrases: "May it please the court"; "Know all men by these presents"; "Comes now the plaintiff"; "Be it remembered."

And be it remembered, also, that the word "witnesseth," often used by lawyers, does not exist—in any dictionary.

Do we need any of that in a busy world with crowded court calendars?

Consider now redundancies rampant in the simplest transactions: false and untrue; separate and apart; each and every; to have and to hold; warrant and defend; from and after; for and during; force and effect; aid and abet; by and with; cease and desist; fraud and deceit; hue and cry; nominate and appoint; in such case made and provided.

Lincoln not immune

President Lincoln wrote his Gettysburg Address as a modest orator rather than the lawyer he was. But amidst the immortal and simple words of his speech is the sentence, "It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this." Let's face it. Fitting and proper is saying something twice. Mr. Lincoln was probably the only lawyer in history to get really effective mileage from a legal redundancy.

The whole bag of esoteric, useless and meaningless words and phrases was inherited along with the law they represent. Archaic legal language has been carefully preserved and elevated almost without alteration to the heights of a sacred trust. Almost from the beginning of recorded law, contracts, writs, deeds, and such were not accepted in court unless framed in stilted, formal words. Wordy language was carefully mummified in law formbooks.

Plain people long ago discarded such quaintisms as thence and theretofore, theretofore and therewith, but lawyers love such words. And the here words march on the scene like an army with banners: herewith; heretofore; hereby; hereinafter; hereinbefore.

One of the hallmarks of law language is the use of everyday words to express special legal meanings. To most people the phrase "to make a motion" involves some kind of movement. To a lawyer it means "to apply for a court order." When a lawyer delivers legal papers, he "serves" them, yet no food or tennis is involved. In law, "action" has nothing to do with activity. It means "lawsuit."

Other examples of common words with special legal meaning: executed—signed and delivered; instrument—legal document; master—employer; prayer—request to a court; without prejudice—without loss of legal rights; specialty—sealed contract; plead—file papers in a lawsuit; consideration—essential ingredient of a contract; said—mentioned before.

Lawyers display a weakness for flexible words with ambiguous meaning or no meaning at all. They often use them just because they are vague. Most flexible words, however, slip unconsciously into the tedious double-talk of the legal document.

Consider: reasonable, substantial, and/or, forthwith—all flexible words. A "reasonable" length of time to one may be unreasonable to another; ditto, "substantial," and so on.

There is a legion of laymen who sincerely believe that lawyers use Latin and French phrases and mix up the English language deliberately in order to baffle the public and make something that is simple appear scholarly and, ergo, worth a hefty fee. Such belief is unfounded. Today there is no intention to confuse. Lawyers simply use the language of the trade.

Legal jargon is taught in law schools, and the sad fact is that most graduates can't write clearly because their thought has been obscured by legalese.

Foreign influence

Foreign-language legal phrases abound. Some are needed because they resist simple translation; also, court papers and proceedings containing such phrases and words are the warp and woof of American law. Habeas corpus, for example, refers to an ancient order or writ which commanded that a person (generally a prisoner) be brought before a judge to determine if he is being legally detained. Literally, the Latin translates "you have the body." Since most people concerned with the problem know what Habeas corpus means, there's no point in substituting an awkward translation. Corpus delicti doesn't translate easily. It means "body of the crime." An ex post facto law is a law passed after the occurrence of an act. It would be hard to come up with a simple English equivalent.

But there is an abundance of easily translatable foreign legal phrases: ab initio—from the beginning; amicus curiae—a friend of the court; causa mortis—in contemplation of death; caveat emptor—let the buyer beware; caveat venditor—let the seller beware; cestui que trust—the beneficiary of a trust; certiorari—review by a court; et al—and others; ex contractu—arising out of a contract; flagrante delicto—caught in the act; force majeure—superior force, Act of God; laches—undue delay; lis pendens—notice of pending suit; particeps criminis—participant in a crime.

The most effective route to badly needed reform would seem to be for lawyers and judges with clout to tell the nation's law schools that, while love and respect for tradition are noble emotions, they should not obscure the present. Law schools can, if they would, break away from tradition, teach students to cut through the prevailing tangle of words and uncover the bare bones of simple declaratory sentences. What the law school doesn't teach, the law student isn't likely to perpetuate. It's up to the law schools of America to teach lawyers to talk plain English.

Why isn't More white?

Because More is burnished brown. To make its longer, leaner design look as good as it tastes.

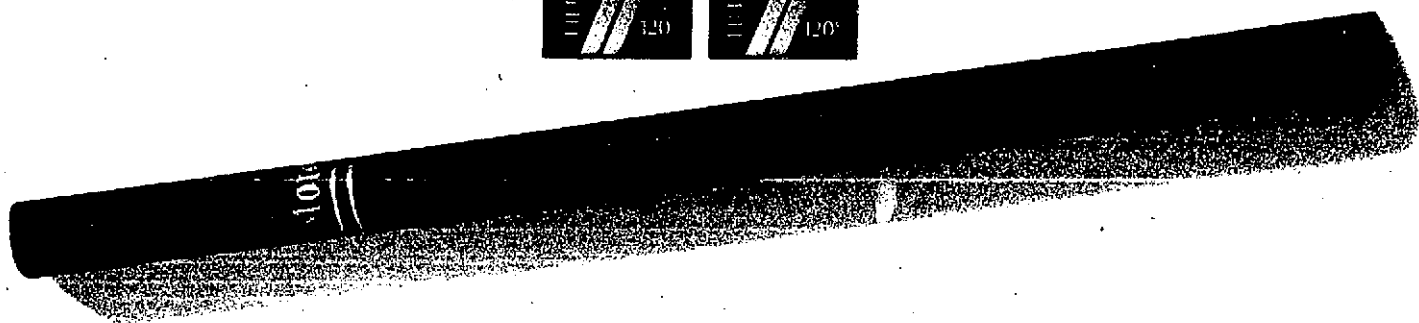

And when it comes to the taste of More, you can enjoy its smooth mildness longer.

Because More burns slower.

So More doesn't end with just good looks. There's lots of good taste as well. It's like any really good cigarette.

Only it's More.

my favorite jokes

by bob steele

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bob Steele has been talking to people for 40 years over the same radio station, WTIC in Hartford, Conn. And, when he's not on the air, he often entertains on New England's banquet circuit. He's the father of four sons—the oldest, also named Bob Steele, served two terms, 1970-1974, as a U.S. Congressman from Connecticut—and he recalls: "All of our sons were born while I was broadcasting, and my listeners were invited to help name each one. For one of the boys, I said I rather liked the name John. At that, a fan protested: 'Why John? Every Tom, Dick and Harry is named John!'"

There are grandchildren, too, eight of them, and says Bob: "They're all typical grandchildren, always boring people by opening their little wallets and whipping out snapshots of their grandparents!"

Here are some of Bob Steele's jokes:

I always hoped my wife might have twins, but it wasn't to be. You've heard the definition of twins, of course—infant replay.

Where I live, in Wethersfield, Conn., we have a scientist who's active in genetics. Recently he crossed a praying mantis with a termite. Got a bug that says grace before eating your house.

Speaking of insects, we have two sizes of mosquitoes in Wethersfield: small ones that can go through a screen door and big ones that can open a screen door.

Ours is just a modest house, nothing showy. I never wanted to be wealthy or appear to be. What good is money, anyway? Only this morning I heard a news bulletin about a fabulously rich oil sheik and his 110 beautiful wives. He died while waiting to get into the bathroom!

I see another Howard Hughes will has shown up—in which he left everything to J. Paul Getty.

Speaking of the affluent crowd, a friend of mine says, "I love my girl for what she is—rich!"

An exasperated mother to her crying child at the dinner table: "Eat it. Pretend it's mud."

I've just received a news flash from our sports correspondent in Berlin: The East German pole vault champion has just become the West German pole vault champion!

A man points to a sprig of parsley floating on top of his drink and tells the bartender: "I ordered a Manhattan." The bartender says, "Well, that's a Manhattan." "Then what the heck is this?" the man asks. The bartender says, "Central Park."

Life is tough, a lot of things go against you. For instance, a friend of mine engraved "War and Peace" on the head of a pin only to discover he had left out page 84.

Farmer says: "Effie, now that we've struck oil, you're gonna have some decent clothes." She says: "Nothin' doin', Hank, I been wearin' decent clothes all my life. Now I'm goin' to dress like other women."

On this very date in 1821 French toast was translated into Spanish.

I saw a sign at a political convention recently. It said: "No one seated during the last five campaign promises."

Personally, I enjoy helping in the kitchen. My wife and I do the dishes on a 50-50 basis. I wash 'em and she sweeps 'em up.

I hope nobody thinks I'm a sissy because I do a few chores for my wife. I'm a 200-pounder and tough as nails. However, it's a well-known fact that big, strong men make docile husbands. So do big, strong women.
